PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE

TUESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1939

The 3d of January being the day prescribed by the Constitution of the United States for the annual meeting of Congress, the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress commenced this day.

The Senate assembled in its Chamber at the Capitol.

JOHN N. GARNER, of Texas, Vice President of the United States, called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock meridian.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., of the city of Washington, offered the following

Eternal God and Heavenly Father, who art the help and the hope of all who turn to Thee, forgive whatever is amiss in these poor human lives-our sins, our ignorances, and our oft misusings of Thy grace-that with pure hearts and clear minds we may at this the threshold of another year rededicate curselves to Thee.

Send Thou Thy strength on hearts that pray to Thee for strength to serve Thee still, that, in pure devotion to our country, we may spend ourselves for others' greater need and never count the cost. Let Thy choicest blessings be upon our President, our Vice President, the Members of the Senate. all others in authority, and upon every citizen of our beloved America. And now, O Ruler of the destinies of nations, Thou mighty unbeginning God, from the deeps of whose silent, joyful rest love o'erflowed into the lap of time, brood with Thy Spirit upon the face of the world, that love again may overflow, 'til, like the sudden chiming of a bell, joy wells up in the hearts of men and peace on earth becomes the heavenly antiphon forever and forever. We ask it in the name of Him who is the Prince of Peace, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SENATOR FROM CALIFORNIA—RESIGNATION OF SENATOR M'ADOO

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the secretary to former Senator McAdoo, of California, which, with the accompanying letter of resignation of Mr. McAdoo, was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Los Angeles, Calif., December 14, 1938.

Col. EDWIN A. HALSEY,
Secretary of the Senate, Washington, D. C.
MY DEAR COLONEL HALSEY: Senator McAdoo has directed me to send you a copy of his letter of resignation as United States Senator, dated November 9, 1938, which you will find enclosed.

Sincerely yours,

ALICE DALTON, Secretary to W. G. McAdoo.

[Copy] UNITED STATES SENATE

NOVEMBER 9, 1938. MY DEAR GOVERNOR: I hereby resign the office of United States Senator, to take effect immediately. In surrendering the commission which the people of California gave me in 1932, I desire to take advantage of the opportunity now presented to express my deep appreciation of the honor they conferred on me to represent California in the Senate of the United

My resignation is prompted by the fact that the Maritime Commission at Washington has invited me to become chairman of the board of directors of the round-the-world steamship line formerly known as the Dollar Line—the name of which has recently been changed to American President Lines. I cannot assume the duties of this position without surrendering my commission as United States Senator; and, as those duties demand my immediate attention, I feel obliged to retire now.

It has been a pleasure, my dear Governor, to cooperate with you during your term of office in many important matters affecting the welfare of California, which have required action at Washington.

With best wishes, I am,

Cordially yours,

W. G. McADOO.

Hon. Frank F. Merriam, Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

CREDENTIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, the Chair is going to take the liberty of asking permission, in the interest of saving time, that the credentials of the newly elected Senators and a Senator-designate be printed in the RECORD without the formality of being read by the clerk. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I was requested by the Democratic leader to make that request, but, inasmuch as it has been made by the Vice President. I heartily concur in the suggestion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The credentials were ordered to be placed on file and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

For the term ending January 2, 1939

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call, in groups, the names of the newly elected Senators, and, if they will present themselves at the desk, the oath will be administered.

The Chief Clerk (John C. Crockett) called the names of Mr. Adams, Mr. Barbour, Mr. Barkley, Mr. Bone, and Mrs.

These Senators (with the exception of Mr. Bone), escorted by Mr. Johnson of Colorado, Mr. Smathers, Mr. Logan, and Mr. MILLER, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. CLARK of Idaho, Mr. CLARK of Missouri, Mr. DANAHER, Mr. DOWNEY, and Mr. DAVIS.

These Senators, escorted by Mr. Borah, Mr. Truman, Mr. MALONEY, Mr. JOHNSON of California, and Mr. GUFFEY, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I respectfully request that the President of the Senate indicate to the occupants of the galleries that while the oath is being administered to the newly elected Senators quiet should be maintained in the galleries so that the oath may be heard.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's point is well taken. The occupants of the galleries, who are the guests of the Senate, will refrain from any audible conversation while the oath of office is being administered.

The clerk will call the next names on the list of newly elected Senators.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. George, Mr. GIBSON, Mr. GILLETTE, and Mr. GURNEY.

These Senators, escorted by Mr. Russell, Mr. Austin, Mr. HERRING, and Mr. Bulow, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. HILL, Mr. Holman, and Mr. Lucas.

These Senators, escorted by Mr. Ashurst, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. McNary, and Mr. Lewis, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. McCarran, Mr.

NYE, Mr. OVERTON, and Mr. PEPPER.

These Senators, escorted by Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. FRAZIER, Mr. BARKLEY, and Mr. Andrews, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. REED, Mr. REYNolds, Mr. Smith, Mr. Stewart, and Mr. Taft.

These Senators (with the exception of Mr. STEWART), escorted by Mr. Capper, Mr. Balley, Mr. Byrnes, and Mr. Dona-HEY, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

The Chief Clerk called the names of Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma, Mr. Thomas of Utah, Mr. Tobey, Mr. Tydings, Mr.

VAN NUYS, Mr. WAGNER, and Mr. WILEY.

These Senators (with the exception of Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma), escorted by Mr. King, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Rad-cliffe, Mr. Minton, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. La Follette, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator-elect from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], who is en route to Washington, has been unable to reach here in time to be present today. He expects to be present and to take the oath tomorrow.

Mr. WALSH. I announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. Lodge] because of illness.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the necessary absence of the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eight-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. BARKLEY submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 1), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that the Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. Barkley and Mr. McNary the committee on the part of the Senate.

NOTIFICATION TO THE HOUSE

Mr. McNARY submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 2), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING

Mr. LEWIS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 3), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the hour of daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian unless otherwise ordered.

INVESTIGATION OF SENATORIAL CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES AND USE OF GOVERNMENTAL FUNDS (REPT. NO. 1)

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I know that ordinarily bills are not introduced and reports and resolutions are not presented on the opening day of a session. However, I am directed by Senate Resolution 283 of the last Congress to present on the opening day of this session the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Senatorial Campaign Expenditures and Use of Governmental Funds. I now present the report in two parts, part 1 covering generally the committee's investigation of senatorial campaign expenditures and use of governmental funds in 1938, and part 2 comprising a summary by States and including miscellaneous cases.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be printed.

DEATH OF SENATOR COPELAND

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, we were all profoundly shocked when, shortly after the adjournment of the last session of the Congress, we learned of the death of my late colleague, Senator COPELAND. By his death the country lost one of its really great statesman, and we, his colleagues, in addition to losing an associate of great ability, were bereft of a devoted friend, and his family of a devoted husband and father. I know that opportunity will be afforded me on some later occasion to pay a well-deserved tribute to this truly great and good man.

At this time I submit a resolution, for the consideration of which I ask unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 4) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow and deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. Royal S. Copeland, late a Senator from the State of New York.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

SENATOR FROM NEW YORK

Mr. WAGNER presented the credentials of James M. Mead, of New York, elected a Senator from that State for the unexpired term of Royal S. Copeland, deceased, ending on the 2d day of January 1941, which were read, as follows:

To the President of the Senate of the United States:

This is to certify that on the 8th day of November 1938 James M. Mead was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of New York a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the unexpired term of Royal S. Copeland, deceased.

Witness: His Excellency our Governor, Herbert H. Lehman, and our seal hereto affixed at Albany, this 7th day of December A. D. 1938.

By the Governor:

[SEAL]

HERBERT H. LEHMAN, GOVETNOT. EDWARD J. FLYNN, Secretary of State.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The credentials will be placed on file.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, my colleague from New York is present and desires to take the oath of office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator-elect will present himself at the desk, the oath will be administered to him.

Mr. Mead, escorted by Mr. Wagner, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to him by the Vice President.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to announce for the benefit of Senators, that while the standing committees of the Senate will not have been made up tomorrow, we shall meet, as usual, at 12 o'clock, and at 1 o'clock assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives, where the President of the United States will deliver his annual message. We shall, therefore, be in session for some time before we proceed to the House Chamber, and during that time there will be a morning hour, in which Members of the Senate may introduce bills and present resolutions to be appropriately referred.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of our late colleague, Senator Coreland, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, January 4, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1939

The third day of January being the day prescribed by the Constitution for the meeting of the Seventy-sixth Congress, the Members-elect of the House of Representatives met in their Hall and at 12 o'clock noon was called to order by Hon. South Trimble, Clerk of the last House.

Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., Chaplain of the Seventy-fifth Congress, offered the following

PRAYER

Eternal God and Father of Mankind, in these waiting moments breathe upon us Thy holy spirit; may we be deeply conscious of the truth and reality of the divine presence. Forgive our selfish and ignoble ambitions and inspire us with a broad comprehension of the public service. Quicken us with that deathless faith that lifts beyond the stars. We praise Thee for that love which sanctifies the home, that insures the perpetuity of our Nation and makes the world akin. May every wistful hope and lingering desire find fruition in the spirit of the Master. Thou who holdest in Thy heart the secret of human life and destiny, hear every prayer; speak in every tongue in all the earth to the noble army of the distressed and unfortunate. Oh, stay Thou the tragic sufferings which follow in the train of war. We fervently pray that our President may be attended by the richest blessings of grace, mercy, and good health. Sustain in the folds of Thy fatherly care our distinguished Speaker, and may brotherly love, patriotism, and statesmanship prevail among all Members. Graciously remember all others who are associated in any way with the Congress. Open Thou our lips as we pray our Saviour's prayer:

Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The CLERK. Representatives-elect, this is the day fixed by the Constitution of the United States for the meeting of the Seventy-sixth Congress of the United States of America. The Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-fifth Congress will call the names of those present whose credentials show that they were regularly elected as Representatives in accordance with the laws of their respective States or of the United States.

As the names are called, following the alphabetical order of the States, Representatives-elect will please answer "present" to determine whether a quorum is present.

The Clerk will proceed with the call.

The CLERK. The roll call discloses the presence of 422 Members. A quorum is present.

Credentials, regular in form, have been filed showing the election of Anthony J. Dimond as Delegate from the Territory of Alaska and Samuel W. King as Delegate from the Territory of Hawaii.

Since the regular election to the Seventy-sixth Congress one change has occurred as a result of which a vacancy now exists in the Fifth Congressional District of the State of Maryland, occasioned by the death of the late Honorable STEPHEN W. GAMBRILL.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER

The next business in order is the election of a Speaker. Nominations will now be received.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Clerk, by direction of the Democratic caucus I have the honor to place in nomination for the office of Speaker of this honorable body one whose eminent fairness is recognized by all, the eloquent, the able, the sincere, the distinguished gentleman from Alabama, Hon. William B. Bankhead. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Are there further nominations?

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, by direction and authority of the Republican conference, representing the minority party in this House, I nominate for the office of Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-sixth Congress an equally distinguished and able gentleman, Hon. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., a Representative-elect from the State of Massachusetts. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Are there any further nominations? There being no further nominations, the Clerk appoints the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cullen], the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Mouton], the gentlewoman from Illinois [Miss Sumner], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Osmers] to act as tellers to tally the vote for Speaker. The tellers will take their places at the desk in front of the Speaker's rostrum.

The tellers having taken their places, the House proceeded to vote viva voce for Speaker. The following is the vote in detail:

The committee appointed by the Clerk escorted Mr. Bank-

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. My colleagues, it is seldom one finds consolation in defeat, but I find considerable comfort today, when I look over on my left and see the fairly well filled Republican benches, and I visualize what may happen in 1940. [Laughter and applause.]

Gracious custom has given me a pleasant duty to perform this afternoon. I am privileged to present to you a colleague for whom I have a great personal affection; one who is a really great American. [Applause.] He is one of the real stars that has fallen on Alabama. Fourteen years ago when I first came to this House, he was an outstanding Member and he has been a conspicuous and able Member during this entire period. Ten years ago I was honored with a place on the Rules Committee. There I came to know him intimately, and there an affection formed which has grown as the years have passed. I have found him to be a man of great intellectual attainment; skilled in parliamentary knowledge; one with a thorough knowledge of the great national problems, and a fine patriot. He has performed his work solely with regard to the welfare of his country. It is a fine privilege to present today a great American, my personal friend, the new Speaker of the House of Representatives, Hon. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD, of Alabama. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Mr. Minority Leader and Members of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, I have, of course, been very profoundly touched and gratified not only by the very generous words of praise uttered in my behalf by our new distinguished minority leader, but also by the very generous manifestations from the floor of the approval of my election as Speaker of this Congress.

I want to thank Joe MARTIN-and I am assuming the liberty of calling him by his first name—for those most generous and praiseful words. I appreciate them, coming as I am sure they are, as a sincere expression of the sentiment upon the minority side of this House. [Applause.] I am glad that that gentleman from Massachusetts has been elevated to the position of party responsibility which he now occupies. [Applause.] I feel that by virtue of his long service here, of his disinterested and effective work in behalf not only of his party but of the country, he has fully justified this expression of confidence upon the part of his Republican colleagues. But, being somewhat of a sentimental "cuss," I cannot refrain-and Joe will understand this, of coursefrom expressing my very deep regret at not seeing over there in charge of the minority my dear friend. Bert Snell, of New York [applause], a man who through almost a quarter of a century of illustrious service in the House of Representatives has not only captivated, but deserved, the respect and confidence of the Members upon both sides of the aisle. [Applause.] In his voluntary departure from the scene of public and political activity, although I do not see-yes; there is Bert sitting back there. I had not seen him before. We want you to know that you will carry away with you to private life the universal respect, confidence, and affection not only of the Members upon your own side but of the Democrats who sit on this side as well.

At the expense of being somewhat repetitious and incurring the censure of Mr. Shakespeare's quotation about a Twice-Told Tale, I feel justified, however, not only in view of my admiration for Joe Martin and of his distinguished ability to which I have referred, but as a mark of my confidence and esteem, in expressing the hope that for many years he will be the leader of the minority party. [Applause.] The gentleman, of course, in his spirit of temporary political jubilation has made reference to the fact that there is a considerable accretion to the number of the Members sitting to the left of the chair; but being somewhat of a statistical turn of mind I will recall to the gentleman that there are still a good many vacancies on the left side of the chair. [Laughter.]

Now, gentlemen, having spoken in these terms of pleasantry, and possibly with some facetiousness, in conclusion, I desire to utter a rather serious note. I express to my Democratic colleagues again, as I undertook to do in our party conference upon yesterday, my unmeasured and indescribable gratitude for this further mark of your confidence and your esteem. This is the third time-possibly somewhat of an unparalleled fact in the annals of our Government-a third time that I have been unanimously nominated for this great position by my party associates without opposition; and I trust that this is an evidence, as I am sure it is, of the fact that despite my infirmities, despite all of the acknowledged limitations of my intellectual capacities, you have seen fit again to express your confidence at least in my character and in my desire to serve my party and to serve my country, and for this I am again most grateful.

May I say to the minority Members, many of them new men who have come here, that I have never yet seen a man who occupied this distinguished position who showed by his rulings, by his presiding over the House of Representatives, or by his spirit and soul any possible disposition to be unfair to the Members of the minority, whichever party might be in the majority in this House; and, looking back upon my career as your Speaker since June 1936, I take some satisfaction and gratification from the fact that to the very best of my ability I have undertaken to carry out those noble and disinterested mental attainments and desires of my predecessors, and I promise you a continuance as long as I am Speaker of the House. [Applause.]

I imagine I have already spoken too long. This is an eventful Congress. On the 4th day of March coming, gentlemen, we will celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the first Congress of the United States under our Constitution, an event of great historical significance, and one that, in my opinion, should be adequately celebrated by some memorial service upon the floor of this House. I come into this Chamber sometimes alone and let my mind and my imagination meditate upon the debates that have taken place in this Chamber and upon the great American intellects which in the decades and the eras past have contended upon the floor of this House, upon the great and noble traditions that those great Americans have handed down under our system of representative government to those who sit in these seats today. It ought to be stimulating to all of us, old and new Members alike, to reflect upon the dignity and the opportunity we have through our service here to carry out these magnificent traditions of the men who have served here before.

I am sure that that spirit will animate this body, and because I am almost in political conduct as much a partisan as any man living, I hope you will not blame me for that. as I do not blame you gentlemen for having inherited or acquired some of your political leanings. But speaking under the spirit of this occasion, under the aegis of this flag and in the presence of that eagle, under the dome of our great Capitol, dedicated to constitutional freedom and representative government for a great people [applause], down in our hearts, despite this imaginary partisan line, I know that my beloved Democratic brethren on this side of the aisle, as well as my respected, and in many instances beloved, brethren on the other side of the aisle, can well afford here today, all of us, in the spirit I have suggested, to reconsecrate our brain, our energy, our heart, our intellect, and our purposes as a great representative body of the American people to do those things which in our collective judgment will best subserve the safety and security of the future and guaranteed perpetuity of our representative institutions. [Applause,]

I am now prepared to take the oath of office as Speaker and I request that the gentleman from Illinois, the Honorable Adolph J. Sabath, dean of this House in point of service, administer to me the oath of office. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH then administered the oath of office to the Speaker.

SWEARING IN OF THE MEMBERS

The SPEAKER. Some years ago a precedent which had theretofore existed of having the oath administered to Members by States was discontinued and a precedent set whereby all Members took the oath of office at one and the same time. In order to avoid confusion the Chair thinks it best to follow the latter precedent, and the Chair asks each Member of the House and each Delegate to rise in his place while the Chair administers the oath of office.

The Members-elect and the Delegates rose, and the Speaker administered the oath of office.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That South Trimble, of the State of Kentucky, be, and he is hereby chosen the Clerk of the House of Representatives; That Kenneth Romney, of the State of Montana, be, and he is hereby, chosen the Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives; That Joseph J. Sinnott, of the State of Virginia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives; That Finis E. Scott, of the State of Tennessee, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives; and That Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., of the District of Columbia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the resolution be divided, and that a separate vote be taken upon the office of Chaplain, and that that vote be taken first, after which I will submit a substitute for the pending resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan demands a division of the resolution, and, under the rules, he is clearly entitled to a division.

The resolution was divided; the question was taken, and Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., was elected Chaplain of the House of Representatives for the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I offer a substitute resolution for the resolution offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack], which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the substitute resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That William Tyler Page, of the State of Maryland, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;
That W. F. Russell, of the State of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;
That John Andrews, of the State of Massachusetts, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives; and That Frank W. Collier, of the State of Wisconsin, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives.

The substitute resolution was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the original resolu-

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. South Trimble, Mr. Kenneth Romney, Mr. Joseph J. Sinnott, Mr. Finis E. Scott, and the Reverend James Shera Montgomery, D. D., appeared at the bar of the House and the oath of office was administered to them by the Speaker. HON. JOAQUIN M. ELIZALDE, RESIDENT COMMISSIONER OF THE PHILIPPINES TO THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the President of the United States:

OCTOBER 31, 1938.

The SPEAKER House of Representatives.

My Dear Mr. Speaker: I transmit herewith a communication from the President of the Philippines, dated September 29, 1938, advising of the appointment by him of the Honorable Joaquin M. Elizalde as Resident Commissioner of the Philippines to the United States.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

MALACANAN PALACE Manila, September 29, 1938. His Excellency the Honorable Franklin D. Roossvelt. President of the United States,

Washington, D. C.

Mr. President: I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 24, 1934, and of the Constitution of the Philippines, I have duly appointed the Honorable Joaquin M. Elizalde Resident Commissioner to the United States. Having full confidence in his ability, zeal, and fidelity, and knowing his sincere desire to promote to the fullest extent the friendly relations now existing between the United States and the Philippines, I sincerely hope that he will render himself acceptable to Your Excellency and to the Government of the United States. Washington, D. C. ment of the United States.

With expressions of my respect and esteem, I beg to remain, Very respectfully,

MANUEL L. QUEZON.

By the President:

GEORGE B. VARGAS Secretary to the President.

Mr. ELIZALDE appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

NOTIFICATION OF SENATE OF ORGANIZATION OF THE HOUSE Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 2

Resolved, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform that body that a quorum of the House of Representatives has assembled; that William B. Bankhead, a Representative from the State of Alabama, has been elected Speaker; and South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, Clerk of the House of Representatives. atives of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The resolution was agreed to.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY FLOOR LEADERS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Democratic caucus, I desire to notify the House and my colleagues officially of the election as majority leader of the Seventy-sixth Congress of our distinguished colleague the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Republican conference. I officially notify the House that the Honorable Joseph W. Martin, Jr., a Representative-elect from the State of Massachusetts, was selected by the conference as the minority leader. [Applause.]

COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

House Resolution 3

Resolved, That a committee of three Members be appointed by the Speaker on the part of the House of Representatives to join with the committee on the part of the Senate to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of each House has been assembled, and that Congress is ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton], and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

NOTIFICATION OF ELECTION OF SPEAKER AND CLERK

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 4

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the United States that the House of Representatives has elected William B. Bankhead, a Representative from the State of Alabama, Speaker, and South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. I withhold it. Mr. Speaker.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had adopted the following resolutions:

Senate Resolution 1

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that the Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The message also announced that in accordance with the foregoing resolution the Vice President appointed Mr. BARK-LEY and Mr. McNary as members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

Senate Resolution 2

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is as the Senate is a senate is a senate in the Senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate in the Senate in the Senate is a senate in the Senate in t ate is ready to proceed to business.

Senate Resolution 4

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow and deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND, late a Senator from the State of New York.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the Senate do now adjourn.

RECESSES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, notwithstanding the rules of the House, that it may be in order to move a recess of the House during the remainder of the week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

RULES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

House Resolution 5

Resolved, That the Rules of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-fifth Congress be adopted as the Rules of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-sixth Congress with the following amendments:

(1) Clause 24, rule XI: Strike out the language of the clause

(1) Clause 24, The Al. Solide out the language of the clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"To the pensions of all the wars of the United States and peacetime service, other than the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, Boxer Rebellion, and World War—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions."

(2) Clause 25, rule XI: Strike out the language of the clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"To the pensions of the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, and Boxer Rebellion—to the Committee on Pensions."

(3) Clause 40, rule XI: Strike out the language of the clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"To war-risk insurance of soldiers, sailors, and marines, and other persons in the military and naval service of the United States during or growing out of the World War, the United States Veterduring or growing out of the World War, the United States Veter-ans' Bureau, the compensations, allowances, and pensions of such persons and their beneficiaries, and all legislation affecting them other than civil service, public lands, adjusted compensations, and private claims—to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legisla-

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the resolution provides changes in clauses 24, 25, and 40 of rule XI of the last Congress, and this change of rule XI is proposed upon the urgent request of the chairmen of the three Pension Committees. I am satisfied this will expedite the work of the House and simplify the reference of bills to the respective committees.

Mr. O'CONNOR and Mr. SWEENEY rose.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from Illinois to yield for a question?

Mr. SABATH. I yield for a question only.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The question I wish to propound to the gentleman from Illinois is whether or not I may, at this time, propose an amendment to the rules as submitted.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman from Montana has the right to offer his resolution, and I can assure the gentleman from Montana that the resolution will receive due consideration at the hands of the Rules Committee.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I realize that the gentleman from Illinois has the floor and I am speaking only through his courtesy, but does the gentleman deny me the right to offer now an amendment to the rules?

Mr. SABATH. I am not denying the gentleman anything, but I am saying that the gentleman will have the right to introduce his resolution, and I only yielded for a question at this time.

Mr. MAPES and Mr. SWEENEY rose.

Mr. SABATH. Does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES] desire to propound a question?

Mr. MAPES. Yes, Mr. Speaker; I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question.

For the purpose of the Record I think it would be well if the gentleman would tell the House more clearly and more in detail how his proposed amendments would change the rules as they are now. Let me say further to the gentleman that knowing his long record as an advocate of a liberalization of the rules, as well as being a 100-percent supporter of the administration, I am somewhat surprised to find him offering amendments to the rules without bringing in an amendment changing the number required on a discharge petition from 218 to 150 or 145.

Mr. SABATH. I yielded to my colleague for a question.

Mr. MAPES. I am coming to my question.

Mr. SABATH. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks, as well as the compliment the gentleman pays me, and if the gentleman from Michigan desires to ask a question I shall endeavor to answer it. If the gentleman desires any additional information about these proposed amendments I shall be delighted to explain them.

Mr. MAPES. I am coming to the question but let me say to the gentleman that I hate to see him, as his first act as prospective chairman of the Rules Committee, spoil his record as an advocate of a liberalization of the rules. The question I wish to ask the gentleman, inasmuch as he is a 100-percent supporter of the administration, is whether it is the policy of the administration not to change the discharge rule?

Mr. SABATH. I am indeed grateful to my colleague from Michigan who has always been my friend and who gives me credit for the liberal principles for which I have fought and still stand. I am also grateful for the compliment he pays me on my loyalty to the administration which stands, as he knows, for justice, humanity, and real principles of democracy.

The gentleman from Michigan has been a member of our distinguished committee long enough to know that the rules can only be changed by the membership of the House itself.

I repeat what I have stated to the gentleman from Montana that he or any other Member will be given the fullest courtesy of our committee.

As to the consideration of the resolution today, the gentleman in his long service here realizes that the House does not legislate on the opening day of the session.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi for a question.

Mr. RANKIN. I was going to answer the question of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman one further question?

The SPEAKER. To whom does the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan, a member of the Rules Committee.

Mr. MAPES. My understanding of the proposed amendments to the rules which the gentleman has introduced, is that they more clearly define the jurisdiction of these three committees.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MAPES. And that the amendments will avoid, perhaps, some duplication which now exists.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is again correct.

Mr. MAPES. While that is true generally, in the amendment proposed to clause 40 of rule XI, I notice that the word "pension" is inserted. It has not been in the rule heretofore, and I would like to inquire of the gentleman whether it is contemplated that in this Congress that committee shall consider legislation to give pensions to veterans of the World War.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, who is the chairman of one of these committees, and who recommended many of the changes in this rule.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the World War Veterans' Committee, I desire to say that we have no idea of changing the policy that we have followed heretofore.

Mr. MAPES. That is the only change of substance in the rule that I can see.

Mr. RANKIN. Except that it does define the jurisdiction of the various committees, and let me say to the gentleman from Michigan that we have come to the point where bills involving legislation having to do with veterans of various wars, indiscriminately, I will say, are referred to the various committees. This is to define the jurisdiction and to place all World War veterans' legislation under the jurisdiction of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

Mr. MAPES. What is the purpose of inserting the word

"pensions" in the proposed amendment?

Mr. RANKIN. So that all bills that involve World War veterans' legislation may be properly referred to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. Otherwise they would be referred to some pension committee.

Mr. MAPES. Does the gentleman contemplate that his committee will during this Congress consider legislation to award pensions to the veterans of the World War?

Mr. RANKIN. No. It is our purpose to follow the policy pursued heretofore, and where those bills are referred to our committee, they will be considered on the basis of compensation.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman for a question. Mr. SWEENEY. In view of the fact that many Members of this House on both sides of the aisle made obligations before they were elected to vote, if given the opportunity, to change the discharge petition rule, I ask the gentleman now, as chairman of the Committee on Rules—undoubtedly he will be—and whose resolution is pending on the Speaker's desk, whether we will be given that opportunity to vote on the question of a change in the rules governing the action of this body during the Seventy-sixth Congress?

Mr. SABATH. I assure the gentleman that as one of the members of the Committee on Rules, I shall give the gentleman or try to obtain consent of the committee to give him and others a hearing on that resolution.

Mr. SWEENEY. I thank the gentleman very much.
Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is the power of the World War Veterans' Committee in any way endangered by this rule?

Mr. SABATH. No; it is not.

Mr. RAYBURN. The jurisdiction of that committee is protected by this resolution.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. And also the pensions and the claims of veterans of all of the other wars?

Mr. RAYBURN. It makes the jurisdiction of this committee better.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. The gentleman has stated that he will use his influence to see that the House has an opportunity to vote on the discharge rule.

Mr. SABATH. Oh, no. I said I would use my influence with the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DOWELL. The gentleman can have that opportunity now to give the House an opportunity to vote on the discharge rule, and I ask whether he will give us that opportunity.

Mr. SABATH. Oh, that is not a proper question.

Mr. DOWELL. It is a very important question. And may I ask if the gentleman will give the House the opportunity to vote on this discharge rule?

Mr. SABATH. I repeat and assure the gentleman from Iowa that any Members interested in that resolution or any other resolution will receive courteous treatment at the hands of our committee.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution. The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, your committee appointed to join a similar committee of the Senate to notify the President of the United States that the two Houses of Congress are organized and ready for business, have performed that function. The President of the United States requested the committee to state that it would be pleasing to him to communicate with the Senate and House in joint session, and appear in person, tomorrow, at 1 o'clock p. m.

DAILY HOUR OF MEETING

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution offered by Mr. SABATH:

House Resolution 6

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered, the daily hour of meeting of the House of Representatives shall be at 12 o'clock meridian.

The resolution was agreed to.

SPECIAL CLERK TO THE MINORITY

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution offered by Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts:

House Resolution 7

Resolved, That under authority of the act making appropriations for the legislative establishment for the fiscal year 1939, William F. Russell is hereby named a special clerk to the minority of the House, as successor to George P. Darrow, effective January 3, 1939

The resolution was agreed to.

JOINT SESSION OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 3), which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 3

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, the 4th day of January 1939, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

The House concurrent resolution was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRINTING AND BINDING

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 8

Resolved, That the standing committees of the House of Representatives and the floor leaders are hereby authorized to have such printing and binding done as may be actually necessary for the transaction of their official business during the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MEMBERSHIP OF COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS AND COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 9), which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 9

Resolved, That during the Seventy-sixth Congress the Committee on Appropriations shall be composed of 40 members; and The Committee on Rules shall be composed of 14 members.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PREAMBLES FOR BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I do this in order to try to be helpful to all of us.

A custom has grown up in this House that when resolutions or bills are to be presented, in many instances a preamble is inserted preceding the resolution or bill, which preamble states that several or many Members are cosponsors or coauthors of the bill. If that is correct parliamentary procedure and good practice, we would like to know it, and I propound the inquiry to the Speaker, if that is the proper way in which to present a bill or resolution to the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to answer the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Texas. This matter was brought to the attention of the Chair during the last session of Congress, but it was not thought propitious at that time, for certain reasons, to develop it. It is a matter of considerable concern to all Members, and the Chair will read a prepared answer to the inquiry propounded by the gentleman from Texas.

The question as to the right of two or more Members to jointly introduce bills, petitions, and resolutions was decided adversely by the House in agreeing to a report from a select committee appointed by Mr. Speaker Cannon in 1909 to inquire into that question. That committee in its report stated:

While the rule itself does not in express terms prohibit the attaching of the name of more than one Member to a bill or resolution when it is delivered to the Clerk or to the Speaker, as the case may be, for reference, attention is called to the second clause, requiring that under certain conditions the bill "shall be returned to the Member from whom it was received." The House, however, in the conduct of its business, is not controlled, nor is the business conducted merely in accordance with the express rules of the House. There are many situations not specifically covered by the written rules, which are, nevertheless, regulated definitely by the procedure which has come down from time immemorial and which procedure is essential to the orderly conduct of the business of the House.

Rule XLIV, which was first adopted in 1837, provides that "the rules of the parliamentary practice in Jefferson's Manual shall govern the House in all cases to which they are applicable and in which they are not inconsistent with the standing rules and orders of the House and the joint rules of the Senate and the House of Representatives."

A casual examination of rule XXII does not disclose any inhibition against the attachment of more than a single name to a bill or resolution. Examined in the light of the evolution of the rules and practice relating to the presentation of bills, however, and bearing in mind the purpose sought to be accomplished by the changes made from time to time resulting finally in the introduction of all bills without the formality of recognition, it seems clear to the committee that the underlying principle of individual recognition still prevails and that the presentation of a bill involves such recognition.

Possible abuses from the continuance of the practice are not discussed, since the committee is unanimously of the opinion that under the true and proper construction of the rule the attaching of the name of more than one Member to a bill or resolution is unauthorized.

Since the adoption of that report there have been no instances in the House where two or more Members have jointly introduced a bill or resolution.

During the Seventy-fifth Congress a question arose privately as to whether a Member introducing a bill or resolution could attach thereto a preamble in which was included the names of a number of other Members as coauthors and cosponsors of the bill or resolution. In two instances bills having preambles which had in them the names of coauthors and cosponsors were introduced and referred to committees before notice was had of this unusual practice. Subsequently, several Members of the House privately raised the question with the Speaker and the Parliamentarian as to whether this was a proper legislative practice. Since that time the Speaker has given careful and diligent study to the question and has arrived at these conclusions:

A preamble is an introduction prefixed to a statute, reciting the intention of the legislature in framing it, or the evils which led to its enactment. It is no more than a recital of some inconveniences, which does not exclude any other, for which a remedy is given by the enacting part of the statute. It was pointed out in Green v. Neal (6 Pet. U. S. 301) that a preamble is said to be the key of a statute, to open the minds of the makers as to the mischiefs which are to be remedied and the objects which are to be accomplished by the provisions of the statute. The Speaker, in his study of the question, has found no instances where a preamble was used for the purpose of stating coauthorship or cosponsorship of a statute.

It will be seen from the above that the practice of including coauthors and cosponsors in the preamble to a bill or resolution is unprecedented in the House, and considering this question in the light of the report of the special committee in 1909 it will be observed that the practice is in violation of the spirit of the rules and practices of the House of Representatives. As was pointed out in the report of the special committee adopted in 1909 that "there are many situations not specifically covered by the written rules which are nevertheless regulated definitely by the procedure which has come down from time immemorial and which procedure is essential to the orderly conduct of the business of the House" it would seem that the practice of Members introducing bills and resolutions having preambles which include the names of coauthors and cosponsors should not be permitted.

Under certain circumstances as provided in rule XXII of the House the Speaker may cause to be returned to a Member a bill or resolution which does not conform to the practice therein stated. The Speaker thinks that that rule could be a proper guide for him in the future where two or more Members jointly introduce a bill or resolution or where a Member introducing a bill or resolution includes in the preamble thereto the names of coauthors and cosponsors. The Speaker, therefore, in the future, where that practice is indulged in, will return such bills and resolutions to the Member introducing them.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. McCORMACK. For the purpose of definiteness, is my understanding correct that the Speaker's opinion confines itself only to a preamble where there are named coauthors and not to preambles in general?

The SPEAKER. Under the construction of the spirit, and the Chair feels under the letter of the view just announced by the Speaker, it would include an inhibition against the naming of cosponsors and nothing else.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania rise?

Mr. RICH. To make an inquiry of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RICH. Is my interpretation of the Speaker's ruling correct that such bills will not go to the Public Printer, will not be dealt with by the Committee on Printing at all, but that the Speaker himself will return such bills to their

The SPEAKER. The Chair, under the interpretation just made, which the Chair feels is fortified by reason and precedent, would only return the bill to the Member offering it, in order that he might make such corrections as would conform to the ruling of the Chair.

RESIGNATION OF MEMBER

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which was read:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 2, 1938.

Hon. W. B. BANKHEAD,

Speaker of the House of Representatives,

Jasper, Ala.

Dear Mr. Speaker: I beg leave to inform you that I have this day transmitted to the Governor of Iowa my resignation as a Representative in the Congress of the United States from the First District of Iowa

It is a matter of great regret to me that the foregoing action on ny part terminates automatically my tour of duty as a member of the Temporary National Economic Committee. I shall always be grateful to you for the confidence you reposed in me when you designated me for service with this very important committee.

With kindest regards, I remain,

Sincerely yours

Sincerely yours,

EDWARD C. EICHER.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation will be accepted.

There was no objection.

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

The SPEAKER. On August 13, 1938, a vacancy was created on the Special Joint Committee to Investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority due to the resignation of Hon. William J. Driver. The Chair, pursuant to the authority conferred upon him by Public Resolution 83, Seventy-fifth Congress, and the order of the House of June 15, 1938, empowering him to appoint commissions and committees authorized by law or by the House, did on August 23, 1938, appoint Hon. GRAHAM A. BARDEN as a member of the Special Joint Committee to Investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority to fill the vacancy, and notified the Clerk of the House of his action.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER. On December 2 a vacancy was created on the Temporary National Economic Committee due to the resignation of Hon. EDWARD C. EICHER. The Chair, pursuant to the authority conferred upon him by Public Resolution 113 of the Seventy-fifth Congress and the order of the House of June 15, 1938, empowering him to appoint commissions and committees authorized by law or by the House, did on December 9, 1938, appoint Hon. CLYDE WILLIAMS as a member of the Temporary National Economic Committee to fill the vacancy, and notified the Clerk of the House of his action.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBER

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

House Resolution 14

Whereas George P. Darrow, a Representative-elect from Pennsylvania from the Seventh District thereof, has been unable from sickness to appear in person to be sworn as a Member of the House, and there being no contest or questions as to his election:

Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker, or a deputy named by him, be, and he is hereby, authorized to administer the cath of office to said George P. Darrow at Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and that the said oath be accepted and received by the House as the oath of office of the said GEORGE P. DARROW.

The resolution was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON WILDLIFE CONSERVATION

The SPEAKER laid before the House a report from the Committee on Wildlife Conservation, which was read, and, with accompanying papers, referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

The SPEAKER laid before the House a report from the Committee on Un-American Activities, which was read and referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record, and I ask that that privilege may be extended to two extensions of my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Celler asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio talk made by myself in my congressional district, together with a brief newspaper editorial comment on my record as a Representative.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN] or the majority leader, if it is going to be the policy of the majority leader and the administration that has the majority in the House to grant permission to insert editorials of this kind in the RECORD?

Mr. RAYBURN. I may say to the gentleman that until there is an agreement entered into by the Joint Committee on Printing with reference to a rule that will apply to both the Senate and House of Representatives, I am not going to object to Members of the House inserting things in the RECORD. If we do object, the next day we see it appear in the RECORD, placed therein by another body. I am not going to take this responsibility. I do not think it is fair to my colleagues on either side of the aisle.

Mr. RICH. I appreciate that, but the majority leader may have some influence with the Senate. He may be able to have them reach an agreement whereby we could have the LXXXIV-2 RECORD confined to acts of Congress and not to speeches of every Tom, Dick, and Harry all over the United States.

Mr. RAYBURN. I have been suggesting for 2 years that the committee of which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] is a distinguished member, meet with the committee of the body on the other side and try to come to some arrangement about this matter, but I have had no report therefrom.

Mr. RICH. May I say to the majority leader that the gentleman from Pennsylvania has endeavored to reach an agreement with the Senate, but has had no luck? I cannot get them to act. Now, I thought the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] might take some action and we would probably get results. I am looking forward to the gentleman. convincing not only the Democratic Members of the House but the Democratic Members of the Senate to get some action.

Mr. RAYBURN. If I did that, I would not be able to convince the Republican Members of the House and Senate.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I would like to have the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] understand that the editorial in question refers only to my record as a Representative.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the gentleman from Colorado, I do not want to prevent any Member of the House extending his own remarks. I want to be fair to all Members of the House, whether they be Democrats or Republicans, but it seems to me we ought to do what some Members of the House would like to have done; however, I do not want to assume that responsibility. I am like the majority leader. I think it is unfair that we eliminate this privilege as far as the Members of the House are concerned and let the Senate go ahead and put everything in. After consent has been refused in the House the matter is taken over to the Senate and the Senate agrees to put anything in the RECORD it sees fit. That is not right.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by placing in the Record a radio address delivered by our distinguished Speaker last night over a Nation-wide hook-up.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

HON. EDWARD W. CREAL

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 15

Whereas Edward W. Creal, a Representative from the State of Kentucky, from the Fourth District thereof, has been unable from sickness to appear in person to be sworn as a Member of the House, and there being no contest or question as to his election: Therefore he is

Resolved, That the Speaker, or a deputy named by him, be, and he is hereby, authorized to administer the oath of office to said EDWARD W. CREAL at Louisville, in the State of Kentucky, and that the said oath, when administered as herein authorized, shall be accepted and received by the House as the oath of office of the said EDWARD W. CREAL.

The resolution was agreed to.

HON. WILLIAM P. COLE, JR.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Cole.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein the remarks I made at Lowell, Mass., at a great mass meeting which was held December 30 to protest against the abuse of the minorities and the atrocities perpetrated upon them by the countries under dictatorship. I also wish to include in my remarks a resolution passed at that meeting.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I further ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record in respect of a bill I have introduced that asks for the help and assistance of the people who suffered as a result of the hurricane in Massachusetts and in all New England.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting therein an address by former Senator Gore on the life of our late colleague, W. A. Rodenberg, of Illinois.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. Brewster asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Record.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the government of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

HON. A. F. MACIEJEWSKI AND HON. JOHN C. MARTIN

Mr. Sabath. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make an announcement. Fortunately or unfortunately, two of my Illinois colleagues, although present, could not answer to their names when they were called due to the fact that they were not in a position to be sworn in, the reason being that my colleague, Hon. A. F. Maciejewski, is the treasurer of Cicero, Ill., and is obliged to sign thousands of dollars worth of bonds that are being issued by that city. He has been advised by attorneys that a legal question might be raised should he be sworn in as a Member before the bonds are signed, and for that reason he was reluctantly obliged to postpone being sworn in as a Member of Congress of the Sixth Congressional District of Illinois.

My other colleague, Hon. John C. Martin, is the State treasurer of Illinois and has been unable to complete all his duties, sign all of the documents and papers up to now. There again legal questions might arise had he been sworn in today. Although both of my colleagues have been present in attendance, due to these technical reasons they have been obliged to postpone taking their oaths of office. However, I am informed by both of these gentlemen that within a few days they will be ready to fully qualify as Member of this House.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include therein a brief letter to the President of the United States, signed by some 68 farmers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by including therein a radio speech by me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Green, for an indefinite period, on account of illness of father.

To Mr. Wood (at the request of Mr. Cannon of Missouri), on account of illness.

THE LATE SENATOR ROYAL S. COPELAND

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution.
The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 16

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND, a Senator of the United States from the State of New York.

Resolved. That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE JOHN J. BOYLAN

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 17

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. John J. Boylan, a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE STEPHEN W. GAMBRILL

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 18

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. Stephen W. Gamerill, a Representative from the State of Maryland.

State of Maryland.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT L. BACON

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 19

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. Robert L. Bacon, a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved. That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE ALLARD H. GASQUE

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 20

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. Allard H. Gasque, a Representative from the State of South Carolina.

Resolved. That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

RECESS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, as a further mark of respect for these deceased colleagues, I move that the House recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, January 4, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1. By Mr. MERRITT: Resolution of the Holy Name Society of the church of St. Gregory the Great, Bellerose, Long Island, stating that this society desires that the work of the Dies congressional committee appointed by Congress be continued and that any measures taken to hamper the work of this committee by this session of Congress be defeated; to the Committee on Rules.

2. Also, resolution of the American Association of Port Authorities, opposing taxation by the Federal Government of securities heretofore issued by the States, their municipalities or agencies, unless consent of the States is first obtained through a constitutional amendment; and then only provided that said constitutional amendment will prohibit the taxation of outstanding securities and Federal taxation of the revenues of the States, their municipalities or agencies, and will permit the reciprocal taxation of Federal securities by the States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3. Also, resolution of the American Association of Port Authorities, requesting that congressional legislation be adopted at this session of Congress of the United States, expressly limiting any taxation of the salaries of officers and employees of the States, their municipalities or agencies, to salaries which they receive in the future; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4. Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Amsterdam, N. Y., petitioning the Congress that the National Labor Relations Act be amended so as to actually carry out the intent of Congress and provide a medium by which friction and industrial strife might be prevented; to the Committee on Labor.

5. Also, resolution of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association of New York City, urging all representatives in the Senate and House of Representatives to support a bill to prevent the retroactive application of any Federal tax upon the employees of the States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. Z@Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father of infinite love, by whose power alone we are enabled to lift our thoughts above the trivial cares and paltry hopes of life: Quiet our minds of their fretting and send Thou some word of Thine to make a highway to our hearts that truth may dawn upon us. Thou bindest us to life by sweet and tender ties, loved ones, and friends who inspire us to be our noblest, truest selves; for these priceless gifts we thank Thee. And, as we pause to pay reverent tribute to the memory of our gallant friend and late companion, whose kind and courteous ways were known to all, we pray that Thou will give to each one of us in the days that lie ahead the grace to refrain alike from the unkind word and the unkind silence in our relations with each other. We ask it in the Saviour's name and for His sake. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Barkley, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, January 3, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH TO SENATOR THOMAS OF OKLAHOMA

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, my colleague from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] is present and ready to take the oath of office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The oath will be administered to the Senator-elect from Oklahoma if he will present himself at the desk.

Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma, escorted by Mr. Lee, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office prescribed by law was administered to him by the Vice President.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, informed the Senate that a quorum of the House of Representatives had assembled, that William B. Bankhead, a Representative from the State of Alabama, had been elected Speaker, and that South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, had been elected Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The message also informed the Senate that a committee of three Members had been appointed by the Speaker, on the part of the House of Representatives, to join with the committee on the part of the Senate to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of each House had assembled and that Congress was ready to receive any communication that he might be pleased to make, and that the Speaker had appointed Mr. Rayburn, Mr. Doughton, and Mr. Martin of Massachusetts the members of the committee on the part of the House of Representatives.

The message transmitted to the Senate the resolutions of the House of Representatives adopted as a tribute to the memory of Hon. Royal S. Copeland, late a Senator from the State of New York.

The message communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. John J. Boylan, late a Representative from the State of New York, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. Stephen W. Gambrill, late a Representative from the State of Maryland, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message further communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. Robert L. Bacon, late a Representative from the State of New York, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. Allard H. Gasque, late a Representative from the State of South Carolina, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 3), in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, the 4th day of January 1939, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Barkley and Mr. McNary advanced in the center aisle and Mr. Barkley said: Mr. President, the committee appointed on the part of the Senate to act in conjunction with a similar committee on the part of the House to notify the President that the Congress is now in session and ready for business has discharged its duty, and the President has indicated that he will address a joint session of the Congress later in the day.

JOINT MEETING OF THE TWO HOUSES

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 3) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, the 4th day of January 1939, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR COMMISSION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from New York [Mr. Mead] as a member on the part of the Senate of the New York World's Fair Commission, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Royal S. Copeland.

INVESTIGATION OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from New York [Mr. Mead] as a member on the part of the Senate of the Special Joint Congressional Committee to Investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority, to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of service of Hon. Fred H. Brown, a former Senator from New Hampshire.

INVESTIGATION OF CONDITIONS IN THE AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to announce that during the recess of the Seventy-fifth Congress he appointed the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] as a member of the Special Committee to Investigate Conditions in the American Merchant Marine, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Royal S. Copeland, late a Senator from New York.

ADDRESS BY RT. HON. ANTHONY EDEN, M. P.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I have in my hand an address delivered by Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden at the annual congress of the National Association of Manufacturers held in New York City on the 9th of December 1938. I have read this address with interest; in fact, I enjoyed hearing its delivery over the radio. I think it is one of the ablest expositions of democracy and a comparison of the ideology of democratic governments and totalitarian governments that I have ever read. The address was in excellent taste; it was splendidly received throughout the country; in fact, I may take the liberty to say that I have never known a foreigner coming to our country unofficially who has been more cordially received than has Capt. Anthony Eden. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate that this address be published in the Record as a part of these remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the Recorp, as follows:

Though in years gone by I have visited Canada and, indeed, have been fortunate enough to cross that Dominion from Quebec to Vancouver, to view its scenic beauties and witness its industrial life, I have only once before, and that for a few hours at Hawaii, set foot on the soil of the United States. You will note, then, how much my education has been neglected, and pardon, I hope, my consequent shortcomings.

Before turning to the immediate subject matter of my speech there is one reference I must make. We are all, I feel sure, glad that a trade agreement has been signed between our two countries. This is neither the time nor the place to discuss its details, but it is all to the good that a step should have been taken which will free and further the flow of commerce in this troubled world. Greencredit seems to me to be due, if I may say so, to the two Governments and to the negotiators for the pertinacity with which they have pursued their objective. The outcome must be particularly satisfying to the President and to Mr. Hull, who have, despite all difficulties, for so long maintained their confidence in this policy of trade agreements.

difficulties, for so long maintained their confidence in this policy of trade agreements.

I hope as the outcome of this visit to the United States, all too short, unfortunately though it must be, to learn something of your outlook on world affairs. Nothing is more stimulating to any mind than to view an old problem from a new angle, and so I have come to your great country to listen and to learn much more than to speak. Tonight, however, I appreciate that it is my turn to do my part of the bargain. Though therefore what I can tell you is much less valuable than what you could teach me, I am asked to speak to you tonight of the problems that confront democracy in this modern world, and I must perforce do my best.

In what I say to you I shall seek to put before you what I believe to be the point of view of the average Englishman upon the world problems of today. For though there are differences between us at home, even important differences, as there must be in any free community, yet there are certain fundamentals upon which we are all agreed. I belong, as do so many of you in this room tonight, to the war generation, to a generation which is sometimes referred to in my country as the missing generation. It is a generation which has, quite literally, been decimated. Almost every family has suffered, some have suffered severely, and as inevitably happens, we have lost our best. Yet perhaps the survivors of that generation have a special right to give their message to the world, to the vigorous combative new world which is taking shape around us at this hour. What was it that some 20 years ago we and you both fought to achieve? Men spoke of the war to end war, and even if that seemed to some a goal beyond immediate human reach, we did have faith that the power of arrogant militarism would be destroyed, as we hoped, forever. It was our ambittion that the nations should enter that the power of arrogant militarism would be destroyed, as we hoped forever. It was our ambition that the nations should enter hoped, forever. It was our ambition that the nations should enter upon an era of peaceful relations, when barriers to trade and intercourse between peoples would be broken down; when, in the words later embodied in the Kellogg Pact—which bears the name of one of your own statesmen—the nations of the world would renounce war "as an instrument of national policy." Tolerance and justice, we hoped, not force and greed, would rule. Twenty years after we can reflect ruefully how remote we are from the goal of our hopes. We could spend a long time discussing how this has come about. The blame does not lie upon one government alone, nor upon one nation alone. But such jobbing backward is a vain pursuit, nor is there time for it now. The realities that face us demand all our energy and all our concentration. What are these realities? They are blunt and grim. National animosities have not been exorcised; on the contrary, they appear to have been intensified under the ban-energy and all our concentration. What are these realities? Incy are blunt and grim. National animosities have not been exorcised; on the contrary, they appear to have been intensified under the banner of rival ideologies. Nor has the way to peace been made plain. Whatever else the world may now have been made, it has plainly not been made safe for democracy. Other systems of government, deriving authority from a totally different philosophy, throw out their strident challenge.

These seem to us in our own country to be the forces that confront us. These forces, and the events which they have let loose, have affected England very closely, perhaps even more closely, they have done so in a different way. Faced with such a challenge, we are acutely conscious of the need to defend ourselves, both materially and spiritually, from the gathering storms, to make sure where we stand, and what it is we stand for, and, having made sure, to stand firm. In any self-examination, if it be honest and thorough, we cannot but be conscious of many defects, of many benefits that we have perhaps taken for granted, of many traditions to which we have been content to pay lip service, of a spiritual capital which we have inherited from our fathers, and to which we have not perhaps added our quota.

That is one side of the picture, and a side to which we must not

That is one side of the picture, and a side to which we must not shut our eyes if self-examination is to serve any useful purpose. A false complacency is the worst calamity that can befall any nation in critical times. To realize then the extent of the challenge that confronts us, and to be conscious of our own shortcomings, are both confronts us, and to be conscious of our own shortcomings, are both necessary. But to be conscious of shortcomings is not to proclaim that we are faint-hearted, still less to suggest that we are decadent. Let me say this with all emphasis. I am convinced, from my own experience of what men and women in Britain are thinking and feeling today, that the British people are just the same people as they have been in the greatest moments of their history; that they have the same beliefs, the same conceptions of life and society. The Great War and its aftermath have not shaken the fundamental faiths, nor undermined the qualities of our people. We do still care deeply, strongly, and for the same thing.

It is quite true that we criticize one another sometimes; we have always done so, and I suppose we always shall. In itself this is no unhealthy sign in any free community, but this does not alter the fact that at heart we all want the same things; we all want to the fact that at heart we all want the same things; we all want to preserve our liberties; we all want freedom and security, not only for ourselves but for our children, and for our children's children. We all want peace, however much we may differ as to the method we think best to follow in order to win the common goal. There is a unity of outlook deeper than all the more superficial disunities of expression. What a nation has in common is what matters most. The still waters of community of outlook sometimes run so deep that they are less noticeable than the controversial ripples on the surface, but they matter more.

It is the essence of democracy that it provides constant schooling in this endless adventure which is the art of government. Democracy is a university in which we learn from one another. It can never be a barracks, where blind obedience is the first essential.

In our university, then, we must be constantly reexamining our political faith and applying it to the conditions of the modern world. Every political system, be it democratic or autocratic, must continually evolve, and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires and the results. continually evolve, and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires and the results which, through faith, it can achieve. We have to make sure that the way we practice democracy is the most likely way, in the changing circumstances of the world, to guarantee the best and freest life for the members of the community to which we belong. Democracy must have the strength of the best-tempered steel, not rigid but supple. It must have the strength of the highest form of discipline—self-discipline. It must have the courage to recognize mistakes and injustices, as well as to stand firm for what is right and what is just. This is a high ideal, but without an ideal, man will never give of his best. We have to choose what we believe to be the true ideal and, having chosen it, hold to it and work for it. work for it.

The differences in my country and yours are many and varied; indeed, I am prepared to discover many more such differences in these next few days than I have been conscious of hitherto. Yet these next few days than I have been conscious of hitherto. Yet despite them all our conception of the state in our society is very much the same, and, what is more important, I believe it is the right conception, a just conception, and one that gives the best scope for human progress. I believe, too, that if we are determined that it shall survive, it will survive; but if we are not so determined, it may well perish. The clock of human progress will then be set back, and we shall not be faithful trustees of what we have inherited, and we shall leave a legacy of strife and confusion to those who come after us.

to those who come after us.

I am not going to atterms. I am not going to attempt to define democracy. There are many forms and shades of it in many countries, just as there are many forms and shades of dictatorship. I would therefore concern myself only with what is common to all forms of democracy, and what is the most important aspect of it to those who live under it, what, in fact, we in England and you in America cherish most.

We and you stand for democracy because we stand for the rights of the individual; because our purpose is to assure freedom for the expression of thought; to encourage conditions in which the individual human personality can live and grow. Man was not, in our view, made for the state. The state was made for man. The art of government consists in striking a just balance between the claims of the individual and those of the state to which he owes allegiance.

We are living through an attempt to persuade man to reverse his faith. After centuries of endeavor, he is threatened by the state he has himself created. Man's purpose in creating that state was to enable him to live in order and security; to guarantee to him the opportunity to exercise his faculties freely. It would indeed be the greatest irony in human history if mankind were to allow all progress to be stifled by the setting up of a new form of idolatry, the worship of the state, to which all men must bow down, and to which they must sacrifice their freedom of faith, of speech, of worship. Yet such is now the doctrine in many lands, and it has passionate and ruthless devotees. "Man," said Pascal, "is an incomprehensible creature." "is an incomprehensible creature."

No believer in democracy could ever accept such a state of affairs. It is not that we, to whom has been handed down this heritage of freedom, have a false conceit of ourselves. We in Britain know full well that we are no paragons. We acknowledge, of course, that there are many checkered pages in our long history. One of the worst concerns our dealings with you 160 years ago.

Yet, admitting all this, we know that there are certain standards in which we believe and which we will not yield up.

In our conception a modern democratic state must be based upon

In our conception, a modern democratic state must be based upon In our conception, a modern democratic state must be based upon racial and religious toleration. Each citizen must enjoy individual liberty, all must be equal before the law. The rights of minorities and majorities alike must be honored and respected. These beliefs are, we are convinced, the basis of all progress. As an Englishman addressing this great American audience tonight, I tell you that these are the beliefs of our English people still and that they will hold to them in the years that lie ahead.

Let us, then, sum up, and in so doing let us seek to look into the future What do we see?

We see a world vigorous and vital but ruthless and challenging-a world where force is for many the only instrument of policy.

In such conditions we know that we must believe in ourselves to live. We know that we must champion our ideals and the faiths to which we hold with an equal strength, or others which we abhor will take their place.

We know that this endeavor will once again tax our strength and our endurance to the uttermost. For all this in spirit we are pre-paring. Nor are we calling out for help to others, nor seeking to lure others to pull our chestnuts from the fire. We have no such

We know that we are destined, in our land and in our generation, to live in a period of emergency of which none can see the end. If throughout that testing time, however long or short it be, we hold fast to our faith, cradle it in stone, and set steel to defend it, we can yet hand on our inheritance of freedom, intact, to the generations that are to come.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE SENATOR COPELAND-ADDRESS BY SENATOR VANDENBERG

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, when the Senate ended its session last evening, it adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late Senator ROYAL S. COPELAND, of New York. Last July there was a very beautiful memorial service held at Dexter, Mich., the little home town where Senator COPELAND was born. I was permitted the privilege at that time of delivering a memorial address. As a further mark of respect to our late colleague, whom we all loved and revered, I ask unanimous consent that my address upon that occasion may be printed in the body of the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

It is with mingling sorrow and gratitude that I come today to Dexter to join with you in memorializing your great son, the late senior Senator from New York, who was stricken in the prime of his patriotism and his humanities. Sorrow flows from the loss of a superb citizen and an intimately cherished friend. Gratitude springs from the heritage of a record and an example which spell Christianity and Americanism in their most practical realities. Sorrow lays its wreath upon an honored tomb which marks the long, lest home of one whom we can jilly sparse. Gratitude lights its torch Sorrow lays its wreath upon an honored tomo which marks the long, last home of one whom we can illy spare. Gratitude lights its torch with the fires of his inspiration, which beckon us to the emulation of his virtues and his loyalties. It is good for men and women to meet together in the presence of such a benediction.

ROYAL S. COPELAND was one of the great men of his time. You may test him by many standards and in many fields of action; you will not find him wanting. You may follow him from the humble Michigan farmstead which gave him birth to the proud prestige of his three-commissioned Sepatorship from the largest and richest his thrice-commissioned Senatorship from the largest and richest his thrice-commissioned Senatorship from the largest and richest State in the Union, and every inch of the way you will find a trail or honor, industry, service, friendliness, and achievement. But of all his sterling characteristics, none ever impressed me more than his tenacious love of his native State of Michigan and his devotion his tenacious love of his hardy base of michigan and his devolution to the village of Dexter, which he ever looked upon as "home, sweet home." He may sleep upon the countryside of his adopted Commonwealth, in whose name he died upon the battle line of public service, but his heart sleeps here in Dexter, where it lived throughout his nearly 70 years of fruitful life.

No stranger can tell you what you meant to him. You know. It is written in the story of this community. It permeates the air you breathe. It is present in his gifts. It is part of your endowment. Never was he so happy and so carefree as when he would cross over to my Senate desk and tell me, as he did repeatedly each year, that he was "leaving for Dexter" in a few hours. Nothing could be more appropriate than that Dexter should gather round his memory this afternoon and for years to come as at a precious shrine. You honor yourselves when you honor him, because no his memory this afternoon and for years to come as at a precious shrine. You honor yourselves when you honor him, because no community in America ever had a greater friend or a worthier son.

I hope that I may speak of him as you would speak of him, because that would be his wish. Perhaps I can, in some small degree, because we had a complete and never-tarnished bond of confidence and trust. All things considered, I think he was probably my closest associate throughout the 10 years of my own tenure in the Senate. If I linger on the personal note and speak of myself in these connections, I beg that you forgive me. It is only because I feel his passing as intimately as you. It is only because I thus may indicate that I know whereof I speak when I testify to his character and his achievements.

For 10 years we sat and served together on the great Senate and his achievements.

For 10 years we sat and served together on the great Senate Committee on Commerce, over which he ably presided as chairman since 1933. Although we were theoretically in opposite political parties, I do not recall more than one single occasion when we disagreed in his committee throughout this decade. I saw the indefatigable industry of the man at first hand and I marveled at his capacity for effective work. I saw his relentless loyalty to clean principles of government and to sound political economy, and I always found inspiration in his leadership. I saw his natural friendliness, his good humor, his common touch, all of them an incalculable factor in composing committee differences among his colleagues. I saw him champion his committee's reports in the forum of an always critical Senate and in the difficulties of debate, and I doubt if any of his colleagues can match his performance in forum of an always critical Senate and in the difficulties of debate, and I doubt if any of his colleagues can match his performance in the matter of results conclusively obtained.

In the larger fields of action, involving great fundamental principles of government, more than once I saw him under acid test. For the sake of principle I saw him forced to part company with his own political associates and to disagree with erstwhile friends. But I never knew him to desert a principle when once an issue came to grips with what he believed to be the destiny of constitutional democracy. In such circumstances he was always first to accept the challenge; and, having enlisted in a cause, he never knew the meaning of truce or of surrender. You will search the records of the Senate in vain for any sustained example of greater bravery or of greater willingness to face the bitterness of conflict.

bravery or of greater willingness to face the bitterness of conflict.

He loved America and the American system. He really believed in the Declaration of Independence and the true Thomas Jefferson.
He personified the living spirit of the Constitution of the United States. When the Constitution faced its greatest crisis since the dark days of Civil War, he waited for nothing and for nobody in standing forward to defend the integrity of an independent Supreme Court. He left no doubt as to his resition from the first hour man. Court. He left no doubt as to his position from the first hour when this desperate issue was joined. He fought for the faith of his fathers and with the rugged tenacity of the inherited Pilgrim blood fathers and with the rugged tenacity of the inherited Pigrim blood that coursed sturdily through his veins. He fought in the Senate. He fought outside upon the public rostrum. He never fathered. He neither asked for quarter nor gave it. Thanks be to God that he lived long enough to see his cause victorious; and prayer be to God that others like him may be found at the sentry posts of the Republic if and when the spirit of the Constitution again be called to battle for its life.

But that is far from all. I never knew any practical legislative proposal to lack his vigorous support if it sought to serve the welfare of the unfortunate, the lowly, or the underprivileged. He believed in social justice; and he practiced what he preached. True to his professional dedications as a great physician, he was particularly eager to promote the public health. He was unique in his dual qualities as a medical statesman; and this is a better, safer country in which to live as a result. One of the last official acts of his life was which to live as a result. One of the last clinical acts of his life was to successfully pilot a new Pure Food and Drug Act to the statute books after 5 painful years of effort. Here again it almost seems as though a discerning Providence kept him upon a major task until the task was done, and permitted him to close his eyes upon a monumental, finished work.

His legislative record is so long and so complex—to say nothing of the intimate service always cheerfully rendered to all of his con-stituents, however humble—that the necessary limitations of these observations cannot hope remotely to encompass them. But as a striking example of the amazing breadth of interest which he developed in the life and livelihood of the Nation, I add this exhibit. He oped in the life and livelihood of the Nation, I add this exhibit. He was the greatest expert in the Senate on maritime law; and he was the greatest exponent of an adequate American merchant marine. He knew the problem of ships and shipping from crow's-nest to keel; and again it is a solemn and significant coincidence, if nothing else, that he should have completed his latest Maritime Act just a comparatively few days before his untimely death.

He was a powerful member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the vividly important Senate group which passes upon every bill involving the billions of dollars that flow from the Public Treasury. He was specially charged with responsibility for handling the approprlations of the War Department. The American Army knows precisely what I mean—as does the village of Dexter—when I say that it, too, has lost a great and steadfast friend.

I served with him for 2 years on a special Senate committee which I served with him for 2 years on a special Senate committee which investigated law and order problems in the United States pursuant to a resolution of which he was the author; and a new code of effective Federal cooperation in society's war upon the criminal world was the result. At the time of his passing I was again serving with him on another special Senate committee, again pursuant to one of his resolutions to investigate subversive influences which may be undermining America at sea. Eternal vigilance was the watchword of his action, even as it is in the price of liberty.

The broad extent of his interest in public problems was such that scarcely any of them escaped his tremendous capacity for productive study and research. Indeed, the final entries on his Senate record study and research. Indeed, the final entries on his Senate record tell this tale more eloquently than words. In the hard, hot days preceding the last congresisonal adjournment he was chairman simul-taneously of seven different conference committees, representing House and Senate, charged with the responsibility of composing differences between the two branches in respect to important legislation.

It was an inhuman burden to put upon any man. But he who repeatedly warned the rest of us to take care and watch out lest we tax ourselves beyond endurance, he uncomplainingly taxed himself beyond endurance and 24 hours after the curtain fell upon the Congress it fell upon his mortal career. A notable patriotic organization in New York proposed for him this epitaph: "He died at work." Indeed, he did! But I would add one illuminating phrase: "He died at work for his fellow men."

These labors for the commonweal, for the uplift and betterment of humankind, were by no means confined to the jurisdiction of his Senate statesmanship. That was but the fitting climax of a keen, constructive, effective interest in public affairs and of a willingness to give richly of himself in this behalf, began back yonder in the yesterdays when he was a citizen of Michigan. He was mayor of neighboring Ann Arbor at the age of 33, and it was there that I first knew him when I was a college youth. At different times he was president of Ann Arbor's board of education and of its board of park commissioners. He was a force and power in all of his city's civic, educational, and religious life. He was active in the Methodist Episcopal Church and he lived the religion he professed. He was ever the good samaritan along life's highways. He was ever loyal to every interest and to every assignment which he touched in his long colorful career. Thus, for example, he cherished a deep attachment for the University of Michigan. It was his alma mater. Later he served upon its teaching staff. Though other significant academic honors came to him in later life, through degrees conferred These labors for the commonweal, for the uplift and betterment upon him upon other campuses, the collegiate affection of his life attached itself forever to the yellow and the blue. The University of Michigan richly shared the resources of his great friendship and his unfailing loyalty. Those two treasured words, friendship and loyalty, will cling to him so long as memory survives.

But all this as yet takes no account of the professional career which preceded and subsequently paralleled his public life. He gave himself to medicine with the fine spirit, the same industry, the same effectiveness, the same humanity which trade-marked every act of his life. He was—and he deserved to be—one of the best and most favorably known physicians in the United States. Indeed, I venture the assertion that his expert hands and his helpful words touched more lives than did those of any of the professional contemporaries of his time. He loved his calling, and he justified its finest ideals. Whether he was Mayor Copeland or Senator Copeland, or whatever other of the many honorable titles he won unto himself in his long and varied activities, he was always Dr. Copeland, and I suspect he loved that title best. Somehow, as I think of him, it seems best to fit his gentleness, his kindly ways, his heartfulness, his human sympathies. He became dean of the New York Homeopathic College and Director of Flower Hospital. He became the tremendously effective health commissioner of metropolitan New York. The "country doctor" scaled the helphts of his profession. He went from the bottom to the top. Dr. Copeland had never lived.

Truly, we inadequately portray an amazing man. Not often can the story of one life reveal so many interests and a record of Truly, we inadequately portray an amazing man. Not often can the story of one life reveal so many interests and a record of achievement in so many fields. And if we were to lift the curtain on his home and family, the portrait would be no less superb. I dare not invade this sacred hearthstone where his empty chair marks the most poignant of all sorrows that attend his passing. But it has been my privilege to look behind that curtain and to see the husband and the father at their best. He was never so happy as in the midst of his own kin; and he was never more generous than in serving their pleasures and their needs. To him, "home" was the sweetest word in the lexicon of worth-while 'home"

I have attempted, in these brief and wholly insufficient words, to paint the high-lights of the brilliant story of a great American who made his own irresistible way from the humble farmhouse a few males from Dexter where he was born on November 7, 1863, to an honored, influential seat among the rulers of the Republic where he died on June 17, 1938. It is an epic in American tradition and opportunity transparently clear proof that here beneath the Stars and Stripes which he loved and served so well, there is always the opportunity transparently clear proof that here beneath the Stars and Stripes which he loved and served so well, there is always the beckoning privilege of high service, high adventure, and high achievement for those who have high purpose in their souls. It is the story of constant loyalty to great ideals whether tested in the crucibles of professional medicine or of statesmanship or of the humanities. It is a record of courage to sustain these ideals at any cost whenever the bugles of duty sounded the reveille that called him to their defense. It is a rare contemplation in popular confidence, whether the confidence of sufferers who trusted his healing advice, or the confidence of more than 10,000,000 people in an electorate that sent him three times to the Senate of the United States, or the confidence of his congressional colleagues who, regardless of differing opinions, deeply believed in him. It is a tribute to that indefatigable industry which works through sheer love of service, which masters multiple tasks through the relentless concentrations of a rugged and receptive mind, and which counts no hours too long, no effort too great, to reach a worthy goal. It is the story of reciprocal human attachments whether in this village of his youth, or in the neighboring city of his early manhood, or in the metropolis of his maturity, or in the National Capitol of his beloved country which never half-masted its flags more sorrowfully to mark the passing of a dependably devoted patriot.

I conclude reluctantly, my fellow citizens of Michigan and of America. It is my final opportunity, my last privilege, to bring the "red carnation" of my affection to the memorial shrine of a great and precious friend. I cannot even yet, myself, realistically understand that I shall never meet him again, and warm to his hearty handclasp and take strength and inspiration from his sympathetic understanding; never again upon this mortal earth. He was so virile, so dynamic, that one thought of him as always living on and on. But inevitably the great accounting comes for all of us. Fortunate are we indeed if we may approach the judgment seat with so complete and so deserved an assurance of the eternal benediction which must have greeted him with the finality of all rewards: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter, thou, into the kingdom of heaven."

FELICITATIONS FROM SENATE OF CHILE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a cablegram dated July 5, 1938, from the Senate of Chile, felicitating the Senate of the United States on the occasion of the national anniversary of the independence of the United States, which was ordered to lie on the table.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

House Concurrent Memorial 2

Concurrent memorial on the granting of public land for the maintenance of a colony for crippled children

To the President and Congress of the United States:
Your memorialist respectfully represents:

Your memorialist respectfully represents:

The State of Arizona has no institution or other adequate means for caring for, treating, rehabilitating, and educating her crippled children, many of whom are so situated as to require public support or assistance, and the responsibility rests upon the Government of providing adequate security for this class of unfortunates.

Within the State of Arizona the Federal Government has reserved, in round figures, for Indian reservations, some 20,000,000 acres, and for national forests and parks more than 13,000,000 acres, while there remains of the public domain, unreserved and unappropriated, about 14,000,000 acres.

about 14,000,000 acres.

Wherefore your memorialist, the House of Representatives of the State of Arizona, the senate concurring, respectfully requests:

1. That legislation be enacted providing for a grant to the State of Arizona of 5,000,000 acres of the unreserved, unappropriated, nonmineral public land lying within its borders, conditioned upon the proceeds from the sale of said land being placed in an inviolable fund, the income from which, together with the proceeds of the rental of said land, shall be used for the maintenance of a colony for crippled children.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint and concurrent memorials of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, which were referred to the Committee on Finance:

House Joint Memorial 1

A joint memorial relating to old-age assistance

A joint memorial relating to old-age assistance

To the President and Congress of the United States of America.

Your memorialist respectfully represents:

The Federal-State cooperative acts governing the dispensing of funds to aged persons have been in force in Arizona for almost 15 months. Experience from their operation discloses the advisability of amending these laws. Since the benefits awarded under this program are limited to the amount needed by each beneficiary, a large force of investigators, clerks, stenographers, auditors, and statisticians are now required. This causes large sums of money, which ought to go to the beneficiary, to be spent on such overhead.

In determining the need of an applicant for old-age assistance a very annoying investigation often cannot be avoided, even when the investigator endeavors to make such examination as agreeable the investigator endeavors to make such examination as agreeable as possible to the aged client. When, however, an investigator lacks tact or wantonly harasses the applicant or is inclined to show favoritism there results discord, dissatisfaction, and ill feeling throughout the entire community in which this takes place. The aforesaid experience reveals this to be too frequently the reaction of the population generally both in Arizona and all the other States, and thus substitutes hatred, friction, and discord for domestic tranquillity.

It is the opinion of your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Arizona, that this can be corrected only by the granting of a flat amount to each eligible person, by being less rigid in the requirements of evidence to substantiate an application, and by making such grant as a pension to everyone reaching the required minimum age and meeting other qualifications, rather than a mere dole to the needy.

It is further the belief of your memorialist that properly caring for aged citizens in accordance with American ideals and American standards unequivocally demands this change in the aforesaid acts. Wherefore your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Ari-

That the Federal Old Age Assistance Act be amended (a) to make That the Federal Old Age Assistance Act be amended (a) to make the Federal grant a flat amount of not less than the present maximum of $15 to each qualified person, such sum to be matched by an equal amount by the States; (b) to make the rules of evidence less strict for substantiation of applications; and (c) to make such grants a pension for every qualified person reaching the minimum age rather than a mere dole to the needy.

House Concurrent Memorial 1

Concurrent memorial relating to aged and disabled persons and their eligibility for old-age assistance under the Social Security Act

To the President and Congress of the United States of America:
Your memorialist respectfully represents:
Throughout the State of Arizona, especially in the numerous mining districts, are many totally and permanently disabled persons between the ages of 60 and 65 years whose needs are even sons between the ages of 60 and 65 years whose needs are even greater than those of able-bodied persons over the age of 65 years, and who must be cared for in some way.

States which provide pensions or other forms of relief for such totally and permanently disabled persons under the age of 65 years receive no aid from the Federal Government, under the provisions of the old-age assistance division of the Social Security Act of the Inited States United States.

With the limited State moneys for relief the support of such persons is a burden which the States are unable to bear without aid, and the condition of such persons is deplorable. Wherefore your memorialist, the House of Representatives of the State of Arizona, the senate concurring, prays:

That legislation be enacted to enable States which furnish financial assistance to totally and permanently disabled persons over 60 years but under 65 years of age, who are otherwise eligible, to receive aid from the Federal Government on the same basis as States now receive such aid for assistance to persons over 65 years of age under title I of the Social Security Act of the United States, relating to grants to States for old-age assistance.

PETITIONS-THE MIGRANCY PROBLEM

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, on behalf of certain citizens of the State of California, numbering over a hundred thousand, I desire to present petitions relating to the so-called migrancy problem. That problem is one that affects intimately the economic life of the State of California. and these petitions are for the purpose of directing the attention of this body to it, in the hope that some way may be found for its alleviation or its cure by the Federal Government.

In presenting these petitions, I do not wish to take any time at all. However, I ask that the letter accompanying the petitions may be printed in the RECORD as part of the offer of the petitions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California has asked unanimous consent that a certain letter may be printed in the Record in connection with the petitions which he presents to be referred to a committee. Is there objection to his request? The Chair hears none.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I ask that the petitions be referred to the appropriate committee.

There being no objection, the petitions were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and the accompanying letter, with its enclosure, was also referred to that committee and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> CALIFORNIA CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION, Bakersfield, Calif., December 22, 1938.

Hon. HIRAM W. JOHNSON,

United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: We have this day expressed to your office in Washington the petitions voluntarily circulated by people interested in the migrant situation.

I am enclosing a copy of a report summarizing our activities and the migrant situation, which I hope you will find helpful.

Sincerely yours,

THOS. W. McManus, Secretary.

A PRESENTATION OF PERTINENT FACTS CONCERNING THE PROBLEM OF MIGRANCY AND THE ACTIVITIES OF THE CALIFORNIA CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION

BAKERSFIELD, CALIF., December 10, 1938

THE CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION-WHY?

The California Citizens' Association—why?

The California Citizens' Association was organized first as a local protest and later as a State-wide expression of California's indignation at special Federal policies which applied to California alone tend to make this State the dumping ground of the Nation's poor and impoverished. As a result of the association's activity in giving wide publicity to the migrant problem, some amelioration is noticeable: The influx has decreased from 10,000 to about 3,600 families monthly, and the Farm Security Administration has begun to warn marginal people against coming to California. It is to be noted, however, that the F. S. A. blames California growers with advertising for cheap labor, claiming they are interested in creating in the State an oversupply of labor so that farm wages may be depressed. This accusation is without grounds. The Federal Farm Placement Bureau, which polices California growers and labor contractors, knows of but one or two instances in the past several years where such circulars have been issued by unscrupulous years where such circulars have been issued by unscrupulous contractors, and in every instance disciplinary action has been taken, one such contractor having been sentenced to prison.

While the California Citizens' Association fully recognizes that the forces of dislocation that have been working during the depression years causing an unprecedented movement of the domestic working population may continue for some time in those depressed areas where living is supported inadequately we believe that current Federal policies as applied to California by the Farm Security Administration and by the Works Progress Administration are contrary to the public interest; that such policies are not humanitarian, since these destitute people can be taken care of more adequately in their home States, where they have legal residence, are acclimated, and have roots in local communities, than in California, where neither jobs nor proper housing is available. Accordingly, this association circulated a petition throughout California requesting remedial action by the Federal Government. The petition, addressed to members of California's delegation in the Congress, has been presented to California's senior Senator. It requests that all agencies of the Federal Government provide relief for marginal people in their home communities; that information be disseminated at the source of the influx by the Federal Government that there will be no relief available to nonresidents in California; and, finally, that the Federal Government encourage and aid the pression years causing an unprecedented movement of the domestic and, finally, that the Federal Government encourage and aid the return to their homes of the idle thousands now here who have neither lost legal residence in their home communities nor achieved residence in California.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

1. The indigent migrants, 300,000 of whom have come to California with their families in the last 2 years, are not migratory farm workers such as have been for years an integral part of California's labor set-up, moving north with the season, but are displaced farm, sharecrop, and hill-country families pauperized by drought, depression, and crop curtailment, migrating now probably for the first time. This differentiation is essential to any consideration of the problem. Failure to se differentiate is reproposible for much of the problem. Failure to so differentiate is responsible for much of the confused thinking on this problem current at the present time.

2. The migrants seek a fresh start on the land or in farm employment in a new country, further opening of which depends on the development of water, with all visible resources now utilized, and on the perfection of a national marketing and distributing system that will absorb disastrous overproduction, such as now causes in the San Joaquin Valley alone, curtailment of cotton acreage by 40 per-

San Joaquin Valley alone, curtailment of cotton acreage by 40 percent, and pro rata programs for grapes, 700,000 tons of which will find no market this year, and for tomatoes, potatoes, apricots, citrus and other produce. Agricultural overproduction, necessitating curtailment and proration programs, so seriously limits job opportunities that further absorption of migrant families is impossible.

3. These migrants are confusingly called "Dust Bowlers" while, as a matter of fact, only a part of them are from the true Dust Bowl of western Kansas and the Panhandles of Oklahoma and Texas. A much larger part is from the Ozark Plateau of Oklahoma, Missouri, and Arkansas—people who were formerly able to eke out an existence by supplementing the harvest from the thin cherty soil of that region by tie-cutting, stave-making, and hunting; from the impoverished submarginal stratum of the East Texas Cotton Belt; and from the upper reaches of the Mississippi embayment that includes the swamp areas of southeast Missouri and northeast Arkansas that have been denuded of vast cypress forests, partially drained and have been denuded of vast cypress forests, partially drained and devoted principally to cotton—an area notorious for misery among sharecroppers. Generally speaking, social and welfare agencies and others of us who have directly investigated, find these people come from the subsistence level, the lowest economic competitive group in their home States.

4. The counties of California operate under a law which provides that indigents who are unemployable and who need permanent care must have lived in the State for 3 years without assistance before they achieve legal residence. In giving relief to those in need because of unemployment the State relief administration requires a 12-month residence in this State. Relief standards here are in keeping with living standards. Some States have no unemployment keeping with living standards. Some States have no unemployment relief and in others it is as low as from $5 to $10 a month for each family. Agricultural wages in California have been from two to four times as high as in most of the agricultural States of the Nation. All Federal relief agencies pay more in California than in any other State in the Nation.

5. These conditions encourage many families to leave their home State where the lot of the indigent and near indigent is less favorable. Thus we are concerned with the possibility of building up an indigent population out of all proportion to the population of California. The added cost to the people of California would be impossible to carry. Relief is only part of this cost; medical care must be provided and hospitals must be built, as most county hospitals are now overcrowded; schools are overcrowded and more must be provided—a State-wide survey by the State P. T. A. is now being conducted on this problem; public health and policing costs are increased.

6. In addition to the direct costs enumerated above, the migra-

6. In addition to the direct costs enumerated above, the migration is exacting of labor a tremendous price. The Federal Farm Placement Service reports farm wages are now off 5 to 10 cents an hour throughout the State. Migrants, accustomed to a subsistence level of living, offer their services in oil fields, where the going wage is $6, for as little as $1 a day, and encroach upon the skilled trades by offering to work as lathers, carpenters, shinglers, and mechanics for as little as $2, a day.

for as little as $2 a day.

This situation jeopardizes the economic stability of the State and the security of every California resident; and, with the recent curtailment of W. P. A. funds, constitutes a double threat by throwing additional thousands of employable persons onto an already glutted labor market.

7. At present the Farm Security Administration is ministering relief to migrant families, maintaining a few in migrant camps and relief to migrant families, maintaining a few in migrant camps and enabling a multitude to maintain themselves in squatter camps of unbelievable filth by giving them a weekly dole of groceries. It is pertinent to note that the migratory labor camps maintained by the F. S. A. were originally proposed to alleviate housing distress among bona fide migratory workers at peak harvest periods. This goal was laudable but short-lived; the camps have become more or less a permanent abode of migratory families, who are permitted to remain in the camps up to 1 year. We believe this policy encourages families to migrate to California and enables them to remain here until they have achieved a legal claim upon the State for relief.

8. The Works Progress Administration, under special authoriza-8. The Works Progress Administration, under special authorization from Washington, is now putting 4,000 heads of migrant families at work on W. P. A. jobs—this despite the refusal of State authorities to certify the relief eligibility of these nonresidents, and despite the further fact that 60,000 eligible resident unemployed certified to the W. P. A. have not been assigned to jobs. Our investigations lead us to believe that if this is permitted some of this W. P. A. money will go to the depressed areas of other States to finance the migration of relatives.

9. We cannot help asking—and in this we are joined by more

9. We cannot help asking—and in this we are joined by more than 100,000 California citizens and by organizations, such as chambers of commerce, civic and service clubs, and other groups, among which are the California State Federation of Labor and the State American Legion convention, representing hundreds of thousands of members—what will happen to these people when special Federal consideration is no longer available? They will become charges of the State and counties, many of which are already acutely pressed in meeting the constantly increasing burden of public assistance and kindred activities.

GROWING DEMAND FOR RELIEF

While this association has devoted its entire effort in seeking a solution of the migrant influx, it should be noted that migrancy is but one phase of the general relief problem. Relief is now a permanent institution in California. The State relief adminispermanent institution in California. The State relief adminis-tration states that more than 900,000 persons are living on some kind of public bounty in California—county, State, Federal. This is more than 16 percent of the State's population.

Since the beginning of this organization 5 months ago, the number of persons receiving aid has increased by 100,000, or 12.5 percent. If this rate of increase continues—and with winter com-ing on it is entirely probable—the proportionate annual increase will be 30 percent. will be 30 percent.

PUBLICITY

The activities of the California Citizen's Association, in giving publicity to the migrant situation and so arousing an intelligent public opinion, have met with great success, not only in California but in other States as well, and numerous magazines have given attention to the problem, among which is the Saturday Evening Post. PETITION OF GEORGE L. BERRY-SALARIES AND EMOLUMENTS OF SENATORS

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, there has been presented to the Committee on Privileges and Elections a petition in the nature of a memorial by former Senator George L. Berry raising substantially one question, and that is the validity of the existing act of the Congress under which the salary of a Senator elected to fill up an unexpired term in the Senate commences from the date of the election. No question is raised touching the validity of the election held in the State of Tennessee. The sole question is the validity of the act under which the disbursing officer of the Senate is now required to disburse salaries to Senators.

I ask the privilege of sending this petition in the nature of a memorial to the Committee on the Judiciary, because that committee properly has jurisdiction of the subject matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROHIBITION OF WAR

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting war; and I ask unanimous consent to have printed as part of my remarks a letter signed by the officials of the Women's Peace Union, with headquarters in New York, favoring the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota? The Chair hears none. and it is so ordered.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 25) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting war was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The letter presented by Mr. Frazier is as follows:

WOMEN'S PEACE UNION,
New York, January 2, 1939.

Dear Senator Frazier: On the eve of the opening of the Seventysixth Congress, the Women's Peace Union urges you once again to introduce the independent disarmament amendment which will make war and all preparation for war illegal under our Constitution.

We believe the passage of this proposed amendment, conceived in a time of peace and calm judgment, is our great opportunity to avoid war for ourselves and perhaps for the world. Without its passage we see little hope of preserving our civilization.

Since 1926, when you bravely took the leadership in the cause of independent disarmament, you and we have contended in season and out that war for any purpose is wrong in principle and son and out that war for any purpose is wrong in principle and disastrous in practice. Because war is the slaughter of human beings on as large a scale as possible, we have branded it the crime against humanity—humanity which can never win, no matter who the declared conqueror, but must lose always and forever to the only possible gainers in any modern armed conflict—death, inhuman suffering, disease, increased unemployment, moral and financial bankruptcy, political chaos.

We hope that the discussion of this proposed amendment in Congress this year will give inspiration and stamina to the people of every country who opposed and probably prevented war in September 1938, and are now resisting, as best they can, the hysterical armament race of their governments.

"The cutstanding social and international development in the world today, news of which is being disparaged or suppressed by dictators—military, political, and financial—is the rising peace sentiment among the mass of citizens in each country. Peoples everywhere want peace. They not only want it; they are determined to bring it about. It is this fact alone—the rising tide of peace—which, in the face of the terrifying armaments that have been piled up by all governments, still prevents a so-called spontaneous out-break of war. Even the most ruthless protagonists of the doctrine break of war. Even the most ruthless protagonists of the doctrine that the battlefield is the supreme court of nations today realize that arms alone do not spell victory, and that the people widely have ceased to believe in war as a means of redressing national grievances; they do not want to take the lives of others or to lay down their own; they do not want war.

"War is everywhere regarded as a catastrophe, and the ability to promote measures looking toward peace, to maintain peace, has become the test of a government's fitness and popularity."—From Elias Tobenkin in The Peoples Want Peace, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

Sons, New York.

If we disarm, other nations may follow our lead. It is said that in Sweden—a mere step from Germany—40,000 men and women have united to urge a policy of independent disarmament as an example to other nations. Everywhere, even in the countries under dictators, there is an undercurrent of mass opposition to war. Everywhere, even in the countries under dictators, there is an undercurrent of mass opposition to war. where there is the desire to find peaceful methods of settling international problems

But whether other countries follow our example in disarmament or not, we are convinced the United States will be safer unarmed in an armed world than it now is, armed.

Armament and so-called preparedness do not mean safety. They mean the constant danger of our being involved in war for policies and programs which, even if honestly undertaken, will result in the destruction of life, not its defense; in the violation, not the preservation, of our American ideals. That danger is far greater than the menace of foreign invasion.

We in the United States should be immune to the madness of imported war hysteria. We should call no nation our enemy. Cruelty, injustice, war itself are our enemies and they cannot be conquered by violent means.

Skillful propagandists and sincere idealists alike, seizing upon our natural indignation over the conquest of helpless peoples and the persecution of minorities, are arousing in us the deadly, negative emotions of hate and fear. The emotional tension thus caused must find some rational moral outlet or our Nation may be led into the frenzied activity of war.

Thus, before it is too late, let us turn our hatred of cruelty and oppression, our scorn of dictatorship, into constructive action. Let us prove our good will. Let us disarm. Then, and then only, can we help our tragic world to economic and racial adjustment. Then, because we have shown ourselves fearless, with spiritual and moral integrity, we can employ the technique of nonviolent resistance as the sane and valid substitute for bloodshed.

If the United States disarms now it will furnish the world with an example of a gallant nation devoted to the preservation, not the destruction, of civilization. In the words of a modern poet, Jessie

Wallace Hughan:

"... To cast aside the weight of battle-gear,
To dare to stand alone, with dauntless cheer,
To pass the old forebodings calmly by— May we be first the uncharted course to try! The world has longed too many a trembling year For valiant hearts!"

After the introduction of this amendment it will be the duty of Congress to decide whether it has the moral right to hold the amendment in committee, hidden from the people. At previous sessions of Congress hearings have been held on this amendment sessions of Congress hearings have been held on this amendment—three in all—and many peace groups have joined with the Women's Peace Union in requesting that the amendment be reported favorably to Congress. We ask that Congress pass the amendment and let the people decide whether or not it should be ratified. That action would mean the triumph of democracy. Surely the people know what values, what principles they hold dear.

We cannot tell you how much the Women's Peace Union honors your energy and courage in introducing this measure. It is our conviction that you are making history.

Sincerely yours.

Sincerely yours,

THE WOMEN'S PEACE UNION, By ELINOR BYRNS. MARGARET GARDNER HULST. TRACY D. MYGATT. FRANCES WITHERSPOON. OLIVIA DUNBAR TORRENCE. FRIEDA L. LAZARUS. MARY B. ORR.

INTEREST AND PRINCIPAL OF AGRICULTURAL LOANS

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I propose an amendment to the Federal Farm Loan Act which would provide that interest rate on Federal land bank mortgages shall be reduced to 3 percent, the reduction to be effective until June 30, 1943.

Under an act passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress, the interest rate on Federal land bank mortgages is fixed at 31/2 percent until June 30, 1940.

The need for this lower interest rate seems to me to be practically self-evident. Under present prices of farm products and while agriculture continues to receive such a small proportion of the national income, farmers cannot afford, and should not be required, to pay a higher rate of interest than 3 percent on Federal land bank mortgages.

The companion measure would require the interest rate on land-bank commissioner loans, which, practically, are distress loans, to be reduced to 3 percent. The established rate is 5 percent; but the Seventy-fifth Congress, as an emergency measure, made a reduction to 4 percent, effective until June 30, 1940. The same argument applies to this measure as to the one to provide 3 percent interest on land-bank mortgages.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bills of the Senator from Kansas will be received and appropriately referred.

The bills were read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, as follows:

S. 304. A bill relating to the rate of interest on loans by Federal land banks; and

S. 305. A bill to reduce the rate of interest on certain loans made by the land-bank commissioner, to extend the time for payment of the principal of such loans, and for other purposes.

TAXATION OF FEDERAL AND STATE SECURITIES AND EMPLOYEES

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I am introducing a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution which would empower the United States to collect taxes on income from any securities issued by States and their political subdivisions after the adoption of the amendment without discrimination in favor of securities issued by the United States. The corresponding power would be given to the States to collect taxes on income derived from securities issued by the United States without discrimination in favor of the State or local issues.

The proposed amendment also would place all public employees, Federal, State, and local, on the same basis as employees in private business, so far as Federal and State income taxes are concerned. At the present time Federal employees are not subject to State income taxes; State and local government employees are not subject to Federal income taxes. The present system creates a favored class exempt from taxes required of the ordinary citizen. I propose to remove this discrimination and hope that it will be done.

I consider that it also would be in the public interest to end the issuance of tax-exempt securities by Federal, State, and local governments, as this amendment proposes. I understand there are at present some $65,000,000,000 worth of tax-exempt securities in existence. This also tends to create and continue a favored class by exempting their income from taxes paid by others. The issuance of tax-exempt securities not only allows many persons and estates with large incomes to escape taxes; it also tends to drive into Government securities capital that would be better employed in private industry. At the same time, the tax-exempt securities encourage governmental extravagance through cheaper capital.

I believe the country as a whole favors the adoption of this or some similar amendment, and I expect to do everything in my power to have this amendment submitted to the States by this Congress and at this session.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 26) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to taxes on certain incomes was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADMINISTRATION OF SUGAR ACT OF 1937

Mr. ELLENDER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 10), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Whereas the Sugar Act of 1937 provides for the fixing of quotas for the different sugar-producing areas of the United States, and further provides that the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine for the farms in each such area their proportionate share of the sugar beets or sugarcane to be planted to meet the quota for such area; and

Whereas the estimated amount of sugarcane needed to fill the quota for the mainland cane-sugar area for 1939 is approximately 75 percent of the estimated production for 1938 and is substantially less than the quota for 1938; and

Whereas prior to the determination on October 6, 1938, of such estimated amount and of the proportionate shares of the 1939 crop for the farms in such area an acreage approximately equal to the amount of the shares of such farms for 1938 had already been planted to sugarcane on many of such farms; and

Whereas any substantial reduction in the amount of the shares of such farms for the 1939 crop below the shares for the 1938 crop will require the plowing up of large quantities of sugarcane planted prior to October 1, 1938, or result in substantial inequalities for planters who planted after such date; and

Whereas the allotment as to acreage for sugarcane as determined in 1937 for the 1938 crop met with general satisfaction, and the farmers arranged their planting schedules for a 3-year period (sugarcane is planted once every 3 years, generally): Therefore be it Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that in the administration of the Sugar Act of 1937 the proportionate share (expressed in terms of planted acreage) for any farm, as determined by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of section 302 of such act, of the quantity of the crop of sugar beets or sugarcane for the calendar years 1939 and 1940 required to be processed to enable the area in which such crop of sugar beets or sugarcane is grown to meet the quota (and provide a normal carry-over inventory) shall be so fixed or adjusted that the share of such crop for such farm shall be an amount not less than the amount of the share of the 1938 crop for such farm.

ASSISTANT CLERK, COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Mr. WHEELER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 11), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce is hereby authorized to employ for the remainder of the Seventy-sixth Congress an assistant clerk, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $2,000 per annum.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Mr. WHEELER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 12), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths and to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee of the senate of th mittee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON INTEROCEANIC CANALS

Mr. CLARK of Missouri submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 13) which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, or any subcommittee thereof, hereby is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the com-mittee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate

ASSISTANT CLERK, COMMITTEE ON INTEROCEANIC CANALS

Mr. CLARK of Missouri submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 14), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

The Vice President of the United States and the Members of the United States Senate entered the Chamber and took the seats assigned to them.

At 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m., the Doorkeeper, Mr. Joseph J. Sinnot, announced the Cabinet of the President of the United States.

The Members of the Cabinet of the President of the United States entered the Chamber and took the seats reserved for them in front of the Speaker's rostrum.

The SPEAKER. On behalf of the House the Chair appoints the following committee to conduct the President into the Chamber: Mr. RAYBURN, Mr. DOUGHTON, Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On the part of the Senate the Chair appoints as a like committee the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary].

At 1 o'clock p. m., the President of the United States, escorted by the committee of Senators and Representatives, entered the Hall of the House and stood at the Clerk's desk, amid prolonged applause.

The SPEAKER. Senators and Representatives of the Seventy-sixth Congress, I have the distinguished honor of presenting the President of the United States.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The PRESIDENT. Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, Members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, in reporting on the state of the Nation, I have felt it necessary on previous occasions to advise the Congress of disturbance abroad and of the need of putting our own house in order in the face of storm signals from across the seas. As this Seventy-sixth Congress opens, there is need for further warning.

A war which threatened to envelop the world in flames has been averted, but it has become increasingly clear that peace is not assured.

All about us rage undeclared wars—military and economic. All about us grow more deadly armaments—military and economic. All about us are threats of new aggression—military and economic.

Storms from abroad directly challenge three institutions indispensable to Americans, now as always. The first is religion. It is the source of the other two—democracy and international good faith.

Religion, by teaching man his relationship to God, gives the individual a sense of his own dignity and teaches him to respect himself by respecting his neighbors.

Democracy, the practice of self-government, is a covenant among free men to respect the rights and libertles of their fellows.

International good faith, a sister of democracy, springs from the will of civilized nations of men to respect the rights and liberties of other nations of men.

In a modern civilization, all three—religion, democracy, and international good faith—complement each other.

Where freedom of religion has been attacked, the attack has come from sources opposed to democracy. Where democracy has been overthrown, the spirit of free worship has disappeared. And where religion and democracy have vanished, good faith and reason in international affairs have given way to strident ambition and brute force.

An ordering of society which relegates religion, democracy, and good faith among nations to the background can find no place within it for the ideals of the Prince of Peace. The United States rejects such an ordering, and retains its ancient faith.

There comes a time in the affairs of men when they must prepare to defend not their homes alone but the tenets of faith and humanity on which their churches, their governments, and their very civilization are founded. The defense of religion, of democracy, and of good faith among nations is all the same fight. To save one we must now make up our minds to save all.

We know what might happen to us of the United States if the new philosophies of force were to encompass the other continents and invade our own. We, no more than other nations, can afford to be surrounded by the enemies of our faith and our humanity. Fortunate it is, therefore, that in this Western Hemisphere we have, under a common ideal of democratic government, a rich diversity of resources and of peoples functioning together in mutual respect and peace.

That hemisphere, that peace, and that ideal we propose to do our share in protecting against storms from any quarter. Our people and our resources are pledged to secure that protection. From that determination no American flinches.

This by no means implies that the American republics disassociate themselves from the nations of other continentsit does not mean the Americas against the rest of the world. We as one of the republics reiterate our willingness to help the cause of world peace. We stand on our historic offer to take counsel with all other nations of the world to the end that aggression among them be terminated, that the race of armaments cease and that commerce be renewed.

But the world has grown so small and weapons of attack so swift that no nation can be safe in its will to peace so long as any other single powerful nation refuses to settle its grievances at the council table.

For if any government bristling with implements of war insists on policies of force, weapons of defense give the only safety

In our foreign relations we have learned from the past what not to do. From new wars we have learned what we must do.

We have learned that effective timing of defense, and the distant points from which attacks may be launched, are completely different from what they were 20 years ago.

We have learned that survival cannot be guaranteed by arming after the attack begins—for there is new range and speed to offense.

We have learned that long before any overt military act, aggression begins with preliminaries of propaganda, subsidized penetration, the lossening of ties of good will, the stirring of prejudice, and the incitement to disunion.

We have learned that God-fearing democracies of the world which observe the sanctity of treaties and good faith in their dealings with other nations cannot safely be indifferent to international lawlessness anywhere. They cannot forever let pass, without effective protest, acts of aggression against sister nations—acts which automatically undermine all of us.

Obviously they must proceed along practical, peaceful lines. But the mere fact that we rightly decline to intervene with arms to prevent acts of aggression does not mean that we must act as if there were no aggression at all. Words may be futile, but war is not the only means of commanding a decent respect for the opinions of mankind. There are many methods short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words, of bringing home to aggressor governments the aggregate sentiments of our own people.

At the very least, we can and should avoid any action, or any lack of action, which will encourage, assist, or build up an aggressor. We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim. The instinct of self-preservation should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more.

And we have learned something else—the old, old lesson that probability of attack is mightily decreased by the assurance of an ever-ready defense. Since 1931 world events of thunderous import have moved with lightning speed. During these 8 years many of our people clung to the hope that the innate decency of mankind would protect the unprepared who showed their innate trust in mankind. Today we are all wiser—and sadder.

Under modern conditions what we mean by "adequate defense"—a policy subscribed to by all—must be divided into three elements. First we must have armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against strategic positions and key facilities essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory. Secondly, we must have the organization and location of those key facilities so that they may be immediately utilized and rapidly expanded to meet all needs without danger of serious interruption by enemy attack.

In the course of a few days I shall send you a special message making recommendations for those two essentials of defense against danger which we cannot safely assume will not come

If these first two essentials are reasonably provided for, we must be able confidently to invoke the third element, the underlying strength of citizenship—the self-confidence, the ability, the imagination, and the devotion that give the staying power to see things through.

A strong and united nation may be destroyed if it is unprepared against sudden attack. But even a nation well armed and well organized from a strictly military standpoint may, after a period of time, meet defeat if it is unnerved by self-distrust, endangered by class prejudice, by dissension between capital and labor, by false economy, and by other unsolved social problems at home.

In meeting the troubles of the world, we must meet them as one people—with a unity born of the fact that for generations those who have come to our shores, representing many kindreds and tongues, have been welded by common opportunity into a united patriotism. If another form of government can present a united front in its attack on a democracy, the attack must be met by a united democracy. Such a democracy can and must exist in the United States.

A dictatorship may command the full strength of a regimented nation. But the united strength of a democratic nation can be mustered only when its people, educated by modern standards to know what is going on and where they are going, have conviction that they are receiving as large a share of opportunity for development, as large a share of material success and of human dignity as they have a right to receive.

Our Nation's program of social and economic reform is therefore a part of defense as basic as armaments themselves.

Against the background of events in Europe, in Africa, and in Asia during these recent years, the pattern of what we have accomplished since 1933 appears in even clearer focus.

For the first time we have moved upon deep-seated problems affecting our national strength and have forged national instruments adequate to meet them.

Consider what the seemingly piecemeal struggles of these 6 years add up to in terms of realistic national preparedness.

We are conserving and developing natural resources—land, water, power, forests.

We are trying to provide necessary food, shelter, and medical care for the health of our population.

We are putting agriculture—our system of food and fiber supply—on a sounder basis.

We are strengthening the weakest spot in our system of industrial supply—its long-smouldering labor difficulties.

We have cleaned up our credit system so that depositor and investor alike may more readily and willingly make their capital available for peace or war.

We are giving to our youth new opportunities for work and education.

We have sustained the morale of all the population by the dignified recognition of our obligations to the aged, the help-less, and the needy.

Above all, we have made the American people conscious of their interrelationship and their interdependence. They sense a common destiny, and a common need of each other. Differences of occupation, geography, race, and religion no longer obscure the Nation's fundamental unity in thought and in action.

We have our difficulties, true; but we are a wiser and a tougher Nation than we were in 1929 or 1932.

Never have there been 6 years of such far-flung internal preparedness in our history. And all this has been done without any dictator's power to command, without conscription of labor or confiscation of capital, without concentration camps, and without a scratch on freedom of speech, freedom of the press, or the rest of the Bill of Rights.

We see things now that we could not see along the way. The tools of government which we had in 1933 are outmoded. We have had to forge new tools for a new role of government in democracy—a role of new responsibility for new needs and increased responsibility for old needs, long neglected.

Some of these tools had to be roughly shaped and still need some machining down. Many of those who fought bitterly against the forging of these new tools welcome their use today. The American people, as a whole, have accepted them. The Nation looks to the Congress to improve the new machinery which we have permanently installed, provided that in the process the social usefulness of the machinery is not destroyed or impaired

All of us agree that we should simplify and improve laws if experience and operation clearly demonstrate the need. For instance, all of us want better provision for our older people under our social security legislation. For the medically needy we must provide better care.

Most of us agree that for the sake of employer and employee alike we must find ways to end factional labor strife and employer-employee disputes.

Most of us recognize that none of these tools can be put to maximum effectiveness unless the executive processes of government are revamped—reorganized, if you will—into more effective combination. And even after such reorganization it will take time to develop administrative personnel and experience in order to use our new tools with a minimum of mistakes. The Congress, of course, needs no further information on this.

With this exception of legislation to provide greater Government efficiency, and with the exception of legislation to ameliorate our railroad and other transportation problems, the past three Congresses have met in part or in whole the pressing needs of the new order of things.

We have now passed the period of internal conflict in the launching of our program of social reform. Our full energies may now be released to invigorate the processes of recovery in order to preserve our reforms, and to give every man and woman who wants to work a real job at a living wage.

But time is of paramount importance. The deadline of danger from within and from without is not within our control. The hourglass may be in the hands of other nations. Our own hourglass tells us that we are off on a race to make democracy work, so that we may be efficient in peace and therefore secure in self-defense.

This time element forces us to still greater efforts to attain the full employment of our labor and our capital.

The first duty of our statesmanship today is to bring capital and manpower together.

Dictatorships do this by main force. By using main force they apparently succeed at it—for the moment. However we abhor their methods, we are compelled to admit that they have obtained substantial utilization of all their material and human resources. Like it or not they have solved, for a time at least, the problem of idle men and idle capital. Can we compete with them by boldly seeking methods of putting idle men and idle capital together and, at the same time, remain within our American way of life, within the Bill of Rights, and within the bounds of what is, from our point of view, civilization itself?

We suffer from a great unemployment of capital. Many people have the idea that as a nation we are overburdened with debt and are spending more than we can afford. That is not so. Despite our Federal Government expenditures, the entire debt of our national economic system, public and private together, is no larger today than it was in 1929, and the interest thereon is far less than it was in 1929.

The object is to put capital—private as well as public—to

We want to get enough capital and labor at work to give us a total turn-over of business, a total national income, of at least $80,000,000,000 a year. At that figure we shall have a substantial reduction of unemployment, and the Federal revenues will be sufficient to balance the current level of cash expenditures on the basis of the existing tax structure. That figure can be attained, working within the framework of our traditional profit system.

The factors in attaining and maintaining that amount of national income are many and complicated.

They include more widespread understanding among businessmen of many changes which world conditions and technological improvements have brought to our economy over the last 20 years—changes in the interrelationship of price and volume and employment, for instance, changes of the kind in which businessmen are now educating themselves through opportunities like the so-called monopoly investigation.

They include a perfecting of our farm program to protect farmers' income and consumers' purchasing power from alternate risks of crop gluts and crop shortages.

They include wholehearted acceptance of new standards of honesty in our financial markets.

They include reconcilement of enormous, antagonistic interests—some of them long in litigation—in the railroad and general transportation field.

They include the working out of new techniques—private, State, and Federal—to protect the public interest in and to develop wider markets for electric power.

They include a revamping of the tax relationships between Federal, State, and local units of government, and consideration of relatively small tax increases to adjust inequalities without interfering with the aggregate income of the American people.

They include the perfecting of labor organization and a universal ungrudging attitude by employers toward the labor movement, until there is a minimum of interruption of production and employment because of disputes, and acceptance by labor of the truth that the welfare of labor itself depends on increased balanced output of goods.

To be immediately practical, while proceeding with a steady evolution in the solving of these and like problems, we must wisely use instrumentalities, like Federal investment, which are immediately available to us.

Here, as elsewhere, time is the deciding factor in our choice of remedies.

Therefore, it does not seem logical to me, at the moment we seek to increase production and consumption, for the Federal Government to consider a drastic curtailment of its own investments.

The whole subject of government investing and government income is one which may be approached in two different ways.

The first calls for the elimination of enough activities of government to bring the expenses of government immediately into balance with income of government. This school of thought maintains that because our national income this year is only $60,000,000,000, ours is only a $60,000,000,000 country; that government must treat it as such; and that without the help of government it may some day, somehow, happen to become an $80,000,000,000 country.

If the Congress decides to accept this point of view, it will logically have to reduce the present functions or activities of government by one-third. The Congress will have to accept the responsibility for such reduction; and the Congress will have to determine which activities are to be reduced.

Certain expenditures we cannot possibly reduce, such as the interest on the public debt. A few million dollars saved here or there in the normal or in curtailed work of the old departments and commissions will make no great saving in the Federal Budget. Therefore, the Congress would have to reduce drastically some of certain large items, such as aids to agriculture and soil conservation, veterans' pensions, flood control, highways, waterways and other public works, grants for social and health security, Civilian Conservation Corps activities, relief for the unemployed, or national defense.

The Congress alone has the power to do all this, as it is the appropriating branch of the Government.

The other approach to the question of Government spending takes the position that this Nation ought not to be and need not be only a $60,000,000,000 nation; that at this moment it has the men and the resources sufficient to make it at least an $80,000,000,000 nation. This school of thought does not believe that it can become an $80,000,000,000 nation in the near future if Government cuts its operations by one-third. It is convinced that if we were to try it, we would invite disaster—that we would not long remain even a $60,000,000,000 nation. There are many complicated factors with which we have to deal, but we have learned that it is unsafe to make abrupt reductions at any time in our net expenditure program.

By our common sense action of resuming Government activities last spring, we have reversed a recession and started the new rising tide of prosperity and national income which we are now just beginning to enjoy.

If Government activities are fully maintained, there is a good prospect of our becoming an $30,000,000,000 country in a very short time. With such a national income, present tax laws will yield enough each year to balance each year's expenses.

It is my conviction that down in their hearts the American public—industry, agriculture, finance—wants this Congress to do whatever needs to be done to raise our national income to $80,000,000,000 a year.

Investing soundly must preclude spending wastefully. To guard against opportunist appropriation, I have on several occasions addressed the Congress on the importance of permanent long-range planning. I hope, therefore, that following my recommendation of last year a permanent agency will be set up and authorized to report on the urgency and desirability of the various types of Government investment.

Investment for prosperity can be made in a democracy.

I hear some people say, "This is all so complicated. There are certain advantages in a dictatorship. It gets rid of labor trouble, of unemployment, of wasted motion, and of having to do your own thinking."

My answer is, "Yes; but it also gets rid of some other things which we Americans intend very definitely to keep—and we still intend to do our own thinking."

It will cost us taxes and the voluntary risk of capital to attain some of the practical advantages which other forms of government have acquired.

Dictatorship, however, involves costs which the American people will never pay: The cost of our spiritual values. The cost of the blessed right of being able to say what we please. The cost of freedom of religion. The cost of seeing our capital confiscated. The cost of being cast into a concentration camp. The cost of being afraid to walk down the street with the wrong neighbor. The cost of having our children brought up not as free and dignified human beings, but as pawns molded and enslaved by a machine.

If the avoidance of these costs means taxes on my income; if avoiding these costs means taxes on my estate at death, I would bear those taxes willingly as the price of my breathing and my children breathing the free air of a free country, as the price of a living and not a dead world.

Events abroad have made it increasingly clear to the American people that dangers within are less to be feared than dangers from without. If, therefore, a solution of this problem of idle men and idle capital is the price of preserving our liberty, no formless selfish fears can stand in our way.

Once I prophesied that this generation of Americans had a rendezvous with destiny. That prophecy comes true. To us much is given; more is expected.

This generation will "nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope of earth. * * * The way is plain, peaceful, generous, just—a way which, if followed, the world will forever applaud and God must forever bless."

At 1 o'clock and 46 minutes p. m., the President of the United States retired from the Hall of the House.

The SPEAKER dissolved the joint session of the Senate and House

Thereupon the Vice President and the Members of the Senate returned to their Chamber.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. Z@Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Loving Father of mankind, who hast revealed the vastness of the universe in the blue depths of the sky, whose immensities are lit by shining stars beyond the strength of mind to follow, enable us, as we bow before Thy glory, to realize Thy wonderful nearness to us, for we are Thy spirit-born children linked by nature, love, and choice to Thy mighty being. May this vision make all fears to fade and a divine strength to pulse within, that we may bring courage to our exacting duties and a sweet reasonableness to every day's most quiet need. To think of Thee is rest, to know Thee is eternal life, to see Thee is the end of all desire, and to serve Thee is perfect freedom and everlasting joy. Thus we commit ourselves, O gracious Father, into Thy holy keeping. In the spirit of Him whom heaven and earth adore, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of service of Hon, James P. Pope.

FINAL REPORT OF ADVISORY COUNCIL ON SOCIAL SECURITY (S. DOC. NO. 4)

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, in May 1937 the Senate Finance Committee appointed a subcommittee, consisting of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd], and myself, to act in cooperation with the Social Security Board in the designation of an advisory council consisting of experts from various sections of the country to study the Social Security Act, with a view to making certain recommendations, if necessary, as to changes in that law. The advisory council made their report some 10 days ago. It is very interesting, and most illuminating, and I am sure that the Members of the Senate and the House, as well as the people of the country generally, would like to read it and study it. I ask that the report be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

THE BUDGET

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying document, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

(For Budget message, see House proceedings, p. 117.)

APPROPRIATIONS FOR RELIEF (H. DOC. NO. 67)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my message of April 14, 1938, I presented to the Congress certain recommendations covering programs for the Works Progress Administration, for public works, and for housing, which were designed to increase the purchasing power of the Nation, to stimulate business activity, and to provide increased employment. Subsequently, in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, approved June 21, 1938, the Congress appropriated to the Works Progress Administration the sum of $1,425,000,000, together with certain balances of previous allocations to that Administration which remained unobligated on June 30, 1938. By other legislation, $23,000,000 of this appropriation was reserved for specific purposes and therefore was not available for the Works Progress Administration program. In section 2 of the act, the Congress provided that the available funds should be apportioned over the first 8 months of the fiscal year 1939, and further authorized me to modify that apportionment in the event of an extraordinary emergency or unusual circumstance which could not be anticipated at the time the apportionment was made.

Since the enactment by the Congress of legislation providing funds for the programs recommended in my message, substantial business and industrial improvement has occurred throughout the country. However, during the period prior to the adoption of this legislation, when unemployment was increasing, the increase in the number employed on the Works Progress Administration program did not keep pace with the need for employment because the Works Progress Administration had funds to employ only part of those who were out of jobs

In addition, in a period of increasing unemployment there is a lag before the impact of the jobless reaches the Works Progress Administration. This is because workers who lose their jobs exhaust their private resources before applying for relief. Furthermore, the time intervening between the loss of private jobs and the need for Works Progress Administration employment is now considerably greater than heretofore because of the operation of the unemployment-compensation program.

Therefore, with the passage of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, the Works Progress Administration expanded its program in an effort more nearly to meet the needs of the unemployed. While, beginning in July 1938, 125,000 to 150,000 workers were voluntarily leaving Works Progress Administration projects each month, it was necessary to add from 200,000 to 300,000 others monthly to the rolls in order to meet the needs of those whose personal resources or compensation benefits had become exhausted, and to take back, as required by section 12 of the act, those who had left the Works Progress Administration for private employment and whose employment had been terminated through no fault of their own.

The demands upon the Works Progress Administration appropriation were increased by two additional factors. The critical foreign situation has had an adverse effect upon American business and industrial employment in this country, and has been an unexpected deflationary force affecting the prices of commodities entering into world markets, such as certain of our important agricultural commodities. This has accentuated relief problems in important areas in the country. In addition, the hurricane which devastated large areas of New England last September seriously dislocated industry and trade in the northeastern section of the country and added to the relief burden in that area.

As a result of the foregoing factors, the employment provided from the Works Progress Administration appropriation increased from 2,900,000 at the beginning of July 1938 to a peak of 3,350,000. During the past few weeks the number has been declining. On December 24, 1938, the total had fallen to 3,112,000, and it is expected that the employment during the month of January will approximate 3,000,000. The foregoing figures include employment provided with funds transferred by the Works Progress Administration to other Federal agencies under the authority of section 3 of the act. An average of 90,000 persons are thus employed under conditions entirely similar to those pertaining in the main Works Progress Administration program.

Under the conditions outlined above, the funds appropriated to the Works Progress Administration will be barely adequate to finance the operations of that agency through the month of January 1939. Therefore, in accordance with the authority contained in section 2 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, I have apportioned those funds to be used during the first 7 months of the fiscal year.

It is believed that sufficient funds should now be appropriated to the Works Progress Administration for the balance of the current fiscal year to employ an average of 3,000,000 workers in February and March, and a diminishing number beginning in April which would reach a figure of 2,700,000 in June. This would include the numbers to be employed with funds transferred to other Federal agencies. The employment proposed for February and March, which is the same number that is expected to be reached in January, is justified by seasonal factors and the lag in outside construction operations which always occurs on account of weather conditions. In fact, there is normally an increase in the need for employment during these winter months, and the funds available to the Works Progress Administration have not been sufficient to enable it to assign to its program a large number of employable persons who have been certified as in need of relief.

The Works Progress Administration program is at present being conducted at an average Federal cost of approximately $61 per worker per month, of which only $2 is overhead administrative expense. Therefore to provide the employment set forth above, a deficiency appropriation of $875,-000,000 will be required, and this is the amount which I recommend to the Congress. In view of the fact previously mentioned, that the funds now available are barely sufficient to finance the Works Progress Administration through the month of January 1939, I urge speedy action on the part of the Congress to provide these additional funds in order to prevent disruption of the program and consequent suffering and want on the part of the unemployed.

I realize that the Congress may wish to prescribe by legislation the manner in which funds appropriated to the Works Progress Administration, and other appropriations, shall be distributed. However, the problem of distributing work relief funds is a complicated one involving factors not only of population but of economic and unemployment conditions in various sections of the country. The hasty adoption of legislative provisions, to be immediately effective, which radically change the present method of distributing Works Progress Administration funds would greatly complicate the administration of the program in the coming months. I therefore believe that the Congress should make this question the subject of study and hearings, with a view to determining a policy to obtain in the fiscal year 1940, but that the appropriation recommended in this message should be made on the same terms as that for the first part of the fiscal year 1939.

No one wishes more sincerely than I do that the program for assisting unemployed workers shall be completely free from political manipulation. However, any one who proposes that this result can be achieved by turning the administration of a work program over to local boards is either insincere or is ignorant of the realities of local American politics.

It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the Congress, and that this should be done. Such penalties should be imposed, not only upon persons within the administrative organization of the Works Progress Administration but also upon outsiders who have in fact in many instances been the principal offenders in this regard. My only reservation in this matter is that no legislation should be enacted which will in any way deprive workers on the Works Progress Administration program of the civil rights to which they are entitled in common with other citizens.

In connection with the above, I invite your attention to the fact that under the provisions of Executive Order No. 7916 the administrative employees of the Works Progress Administration, with the exception of a relatively small number of positions, will be brought under the civil service on February 1, 1939.

It is my intention to transmit to the Congress, probably in the month of April, a supplemental estimate covering the appropriation which will be required to provide work relief for persons in need in the fiscal year 1940.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 5, 1939.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

PETITION AND MEMORIAL

Mr. WAGNER presented a resolution adopted by Helderberg Post, No. 977, the American Legion, of Altamont, N. Y., favoring the location of a contemplated veterans' facility hospital in or near the village of Altamont, N. Y., which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WAGNER. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record and appropriately referred a memorial of the community of the city of Nyack, protesting against the persecution of the Jewish race in Germany.

There being no objection, the memorial was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

We, the citizens of Nyack, gathered as a community on this Lord's Day in His house to return thanks to Him for His unspeakable goodness to us during the past year, lift up our voices in prayer and supplication for our Jewish brethren who live across the seas. We abominate the race hatred which stalks rampant through those lands. We pray that the excesses committed against that people may cease.

We feel that it is our duty as citizens of a free country to register our protest against those who have violated the fundamental rights of man in the persecution of a race whose history has proved it a stable and helpful unit in any nation: Now, therefore he it.

Resolved, That this assembly make known this our formal protest of those acts of persecution against our Jewish brethren, sanctioned and abetted by the German leaders, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Honorable ROBERT F.

Wagner, Senator of the State of New York, and a copy published in the Nyack Evening Journal News.

- The joint resolutions were each read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:
- S. J. Res. 28. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to intoxicating liquors; and
- S. J. Res. 29. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to intoxicating liquors.

BILLS INTRODUCED BY SENATOR REYNOLDS

- Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I desire to introduce a number of bills, and I should like to have the privilege of reading the titles of the bills to the Members of the Senate for the reason that we are greatly interested in the national defense. Some of these bills pertain to national defense, and I shall take only a moment to read the titles.
- I am introducing five bills pertaining to the deportation of alien criminals from this country, and the restriction of crime, which bills are greatly concerned with our program of national defense.
  - The title of one of the bills is as follows:
- To provide for the national defense by the registration of aliens in the United States, and for other purposes.
  - The title of another bill is:
- To protect American labor and stimulate the employment of American citizens on American jobs.
  - The title of another bill is:
- To further reduce immigration, to authorize the exclusion of any alien whose entry into the United States is inimical to the public interest, to prohibit the separation of families through the entry of aliens leaving dependents abroad, and for other purposes.

The title of another bill is as follows:

To provide for the deportation of aliens inimical to the public interest.

The title of another bill is:

To provide for the deportation of aliens subsisting on relief under certain circumstances.

In addition to the five bills to which I have referred, Mr. President. I desire to introduce a bill for the relief of a friend of mine in North Carolina, Mr. Joe McIntosh, whom I know very well, and for whom I have a great deal of respect.

The next bill is to provide for the payment of the amounts due under the United States Government life-insurance contract of Plato Spurgeon Freeman, who is a good friend of mine.

The next bill is for the relief of a friend of mine by the name of Ire E. Rhinehardt, of Asheville, N. C., to which I have heretofore referred so frequently as the Little Gem City of the Mountains, and one of the most beautiful cities in the State of North Carolina.

The next bill which I desire to introduce proposes to extend the period for filing claims on insurance contracts under the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, as requested by some friends of mine who cannot take advantage of the act unless this amendment is made. I therefore take this opportunity of saying that I trust that the members of the committee to which the bill is referred will pass favorably on it for the benefit of my friends.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to ask a question of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be very happy to answer it. Mr. PEPPER. I should like to ask the Senator whether he had occasion in his recent campaign to discuss any of the issues embodied in the bills which he is introducing.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I did, most frequently and most fully, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bills introduced by the Senator from North Carolina will be received and appropriately referred.

The bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

S. 403. A bill to extend the period for filing claims on insurance contracts under the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended:

S. 404. A bill for the relief of Ire E. Rhinehardt; and

S. 405. A bill to provide for the payment of the amounts due under the United States Government life-insurance contract of Plato Spurgeon Freeman; to the Committee on Finance.

S. 406. A bill for the relief of Joe McIntosh; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 407. A bill to further reduce immigration, to authorize the exclusion of any alien whose entry into the United States is inimical to the public interest, to prohibit the separation of families through the entry of aliens leaving dependents abroad, and for other purposes;

S. 408. A bill to provide for the national defense by the registration of aliens in the United States, and for other purposes:

S. 409. A bill to protect American labor and stimulate the employment of American citizens on American jobs;

S. 410. A bill to provide for the deportation of aliens subsisting on relief under certain circumstances; and S. 411. A bill to provide for the deportation of aliens inimical to the public interest; to the Committee on Immigration.

STATUE OF THE LATE WILL ROGERS

Mr. THOMAS of Okahoma submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 1), which was referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Will Rogers Memorial Commission be, and it is hereby, authorized to place temporarily in the rotunda of the Capitol a statue of the late Will Rogers, of Oklahoma, and to hold ceremonies in the rotunda on said occasion; and that the Architect of the Capitol be, and he is hereby, authorized to make the necessary arrangements therefor.

MARELLE REA

Mr. GLASS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 21), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Mabelle Rea, widow of Kennedy F. Rea, late clerk of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, a sum equal to 1 year's com-pensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. GLASS. I submit the customary resolution with respect to hearings before the Committee on Appropriations, and ask for its immediate consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 22) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

Mr. BYRNES subsequently said: Mr. President, a moment ago a resolution was presented by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. That resolution was agreed to. Since that action was taken I have discussed the matter with the Senator from Virginia. Under the rules the resolution must go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, just as similar resolutions introduced today. The Senator from Virginia has no objection to moving to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. That is agreeable. I move that the vote by which the resolution was agreed to be reconsidered, and that the resolution be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Virginia.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK of Idaho in the chair), as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations.

Mr. BARKLEY. As in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that all nominations sent to the Senate today be referred to the appropriate committees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS TO CABINET POSITIONS

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, referring to the recent appointments to the Cabinet by the President of the United States, which are soon to occupy the attention of this body, I think that prior to the action of the Senate on the confirmation of the nominations of Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Murphy in particular, from time to time it might be well that various expressions appearing in the public prints and various statements made by citizens be presented for the attention of the

The President in his appointments to date seems to have made a specialty of naming "lame duck" candidates who have been repudiated by the people of their own States and districts. But in the case of Mr. Hopkins he has gone one better. He has appointed as Secretary of Commerce a man who has been repudiated by the people of the entire Nation because of his mismanagement of relief, which was one of the outstanding issues in the last campaign. So I think it is just as well, before Mr. Hopkins' name comes before this body, that we should survey his qualifications to see what kind of a man is being appointed to direct the business and industrial activities of this country.

Here we have the appointment of a man who has never himself met a pay roll, whose entire career has been spent working for social organizations, and for various governmental divisions, in helping to spend money, and at that he is an expert.

Recently the statement was made that Mr. Hopkins had said that his philosophy and belief was to "spend and spend and tax and tax and elect and elect." That is said to be the philosophy and the belief of the man whom the President has appointed Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think, in fairness to the Senator from New Hampshire and also to Mr. Hopkins, it ought to be stated that Mr. Hopkins denied having made that statement. I myself know nothing about it, but I do know that he categorically denied ever having said that.

Mr. BRIDGES. I thank the distinguished Senator from Kentucky for his statement. Because of his statement I should like to place in the RECORD a dispatch printed in the Boston Post, which is headed, "Denies he misquoted Hopkins. Krock says disputed words were thrice printed." It is an Associated Press dispatch and is dated "New York, November 25." I ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. CONNALLY. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, let me inquire what is the matter which the Senator wants unanimous consent to have printed?

Mr. BRIDGES. The article is by Arthur Krock. The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Boston Post of November 26, 1938]

DENIES HE MISQUOTED HOPKINS-KROCK SAYS DISPUTED WORDS WERE THRICE PRINTED

New York, November 25.—Arthur Krock, New York Times Washington correspondent, tonight amplified a reply he made yesterday to a charge by Harry Hopkins, W. P. A. Administrator, that Krock had misquoted him.

Krock in a dispatch quoted Hopkins as using the words "Spend and spend, and tax and tax, and elect and elect."

PRINTED FIRST SEPTEMBER 25

Hopkins wrote the Times yesterday denying the statement. Krock replied that not only had he checked the statement before using it, but also that it had been printed before, with no denial from

Krock added tonight:

"The first reference I saw to the quotation by Mr. Hopkins was published September 25, 1938—not in the New York Times, but in many other newspapers.

"It mentioned his 'comments, etc., on the subject of spending and taxes and elections.

AGAIN ON OCTOBER 14

"The second publication was October 14, 1938—not in the New York Times, but in many other newspapers. This was specific, viz:

'If he (Mr. Hopkins) hadn't been excitedly telling acquaintances that we are going to "spend and spend and spend, and tax and tax and tax, and elect and elect and elect * * *."'

"Days passed. Mr. Hopkins made no denial. I naturally assumed he had none to make and therefore did not apply to him; but, conceiving the quotation to be important and a crystallization of his political philosophy as I understood it, I made inquiries at the source. I verified substantially the quotation—and the belief that it was seriously uttered-before making any use of it. I then used it twice, but Mr. Hopkins took no notice until November 21, after election day.

SAID NOTHING ON THAT DAY

"I submit I showed Mr. Hopkins unusual consideration in seeking verification before reprinting, despite the fact he had long made no denial of the nationally published direct attribution. Actually, I saw him on November 13, the very day of the publication to which he now so violently objects, and he said nothing about it at all. "The friend who quoted Mr. Hopkins as substantially repeated is of excellent repute and not at all hard of hearing. He is at liberty to reveal himself if he so desires. I learned his identity in confidence, and that confidence—unless I am released—I shall maintain." "I submit I showed Mr. Hopkins unusual consideration in seeking maintain.'

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator if he does not realize that this nomination will go to a committee in the regular course? Why does not the Senator go before the committee and tell the committee what objections he has to Mr. Hopkins?

Mr. BRIDGES. I may do that; but I desire to exercise the same right as that which the Senator from Texas has.

Mr. CONNALLY. There is no doubt that the Senator has the right and the physical power to do as he is doing, of course; but why does the Senator want to break in on this otherwise peaceful and inconspicuous morning by "jumping the gun" and beating all the other Senators who want to kick Mr. Hopkins around? Is it simply because the Senator wants to be the first to hit Mr. Hopkins? Why does he not go before the committee in the regular course?

Mr. BRIDGES. I appreciate the concern which the distinguished Senator from Texas has shown in this matter. Undoubtedly I may appear before the committee. However, I think it is just as well that certain matters should appear in the RECORD relative to Mr. Hopkins' qualifications.

Mr. Hopkins has been very much in the limelight. He has been an issue in almost every State in the Union. As a part of my remarks, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Record an editorial appearing in the Block newspapers entitled "Appointment of the Right Secretary of Commerce of Utmost Importance."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Copy of a recent editorial published in the Block newspapers] APPOINTMENT OF THE RIGHT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE OF UTMOST IMPORTANCE

Reports from Washington declare that Harry L. Hopkins is certain to be appointed Secretary of Commerce.

We are inclined to disbelieve this statement, though we are probably wrong. It seemed impossible to us that a man like Hugo Black would be appointed to the United States Supreme Court, but we were wrong about that.

Never before in our history has the country had greater need for a capable Secretary of Commerce. Ten million persons are still unemployed. Real cooperation between government and industry might go far toward helping to correct this tragic condition. It is for this reason that a man with business experience, and especially one who has the confidence of business and industry and can work with them, is vital in the Commerce post.

Mr. Hopkins does not fit the position. His experience before he became W. P. A. Administrator was entirely in welfare work. There is no doubt that he is able in that field. But for Secretary of Commerce he is probably among the last in the country who should be chosen.

Further than not understanding business, he has been reported

Further than not understanding business, he has been reported as being antagonistic to it. He belongs to that little coterie of men surrounding the President who, it is said, are opposed to the capitalistic system; that is, they are opposed to free business enterprise. To choose such a man as Secretary of Commerce is an action almost incredible. It would be very unfortunate in the eyes of the general public, which hopes that the President will abandon his policy of fighting business and will instead cooperate with it in every way.

Only through such action can reemployment in private industry take place.

PAUL BLOCK, Publisher.

Mr. BRIDGES. There is a great similarity between the appointment of Mr. Hopkins-

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield. Mr. WAGNER. Is the article to which the Senator referred as having been written by Mr. Arthur Krock the one that he just introduced?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; that was the Boston Post article.

Mr. WAGNER. In justice to Mr. Hopkins, did the Senator also introduce the letter which Mr. Hopkins sent to the New York Times in which he denied having made the statement attributed to him, or would that spoil the Senator's speech?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; I should be glad to introduce that letter, or have the Senator from New York introduce it. I do not have it in my possession at the present time.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator did not regard that letter as very important?

Mr. BRIDGES. I assumed that Mr. Arthur Krock was one of the outstanding correspondents of the country, and I took his word as being accurate. Of course, others may, but I do not, question the word of Mr. Krock. I consider him to be an honest man and a good newspaperman.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not desire to make too much of an article of that kind; but, as I recall the article, Mr. Arthur Krock stated that he received the information from another gentleman who he thought was reliable, so it was not firsthand information. If the Senator wanted both sides presented, I think he ought also to have presented the letter in which Mr. Hopkins denied ever having made any such assertion.

Mr. BRIDGES. I should be very happy to have one of the sponsors of Mr. Hopkins in this body present the letter referred to. If I had it in my possession, I should present it myself, but I do not happen to have it. So far as accuracy is concerned-

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. CONNALLY. I think what has just transpired illustrates vividly what the Senator from Texas had in mind. Before the committee we could have both the prosecution and the defense. What the Senator from Texas objects to is an ex parte hearing, without benefit of counsel and without the benefit of statements contradictory to the course which the Senator from New Hampshire is pursuing.

I again urge on the Senator that the more orderly, the more statesmanlike, and the more judicial method is to go before the committee, where both sides may be represented, instead of undertaking to smear Mr. Hopkins all over the lot in advance of his opportunity to have a hearing of his own.

Mr. BRIDGES. I appreciate the Senator's concern for Mr. Hopkins. He needs the Senator's help. As I have said, in due course I may appear before the committee. However, I should like to produce for the RECORD one or two more articles of interest.

I ask unanimous consent to have incorporated in the RECORD as a part of my remarks an editorial from the Chicago Daily Tribune of Wednesday, January 4, 1939, entitled "Mr. Roosevelt's Appointments."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the Chicago Daily Tribune of January 4, 1939] MR. ROOSEVELT'S APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Roosevelt's appointments to public office are nearly all of one pattern. He has something of Mussolini's instinctive and also calculated avoidance of persons whose attainments and abilities could be regarded as distinguished. The same is true of Hitler and Stalin. These rulers have very good reasons for stopping the development of other careers. They are not only opposed to distributing honors and credit but they are afraid. A one-man government cannot permit a challenge to arise. All greatness must be embodied in the one man. The old injunction to the usurper is to cut off all the tallest heads.

Anyone would be stumped to name Mr. Hopkins' qualifications for the Department of Commerce, and the same goes for former Governor Murphy, of Michigan, who has been nominated for the Department of Justice. He probably has an engaging personality, but his public career has given him small chance to equip himself for the post of Attorney General, and his recent official acts as Governor were to prevent the enforcement of court orders for the protection of individual rights under the law.

Those acts were not offensive to the morals and principles of the New Deal, but in a more scrupulous administration it would be thought that a man oddly proved his fitness as a law enforcer by using his authority to obstruct enforcement.

Mr. BRIDGES. I think the appointments of the President to his Cabinet are the concern of every man, woman, and child in the United States. Ordinarily, I believe a President should have wide latitude in the selection of his personal Cabinet, unless there is some outstanding reason why that should not be so. I think such a reason exists in Mr. Hopkins' case. I believe Mr. Hopkins is well known to the people of the United States. His record is also well known. As I have said, he stands before the people today repudiated in nearly every State in the Union, either as a result of the Democratic primary campaigns or as a result of the election campaign which ended on November 8 last.

I am interested in the deep concern shown in this body today for Mr. Hopkins. I believe that the committee to which his nomination is referred may well take into account the characteristics of the gentleman, his past history, and his past career. At this time, by bringing up the name of Mr. Hopkins along with that of Mr. Murphy, it is my desire to invite the attention of the Members of this body to his utter disqualification for the position to which he is appointed, and to ask the Members of this body to give earnest and serious consideration to his nomination. I also desire to call the attention of the people of the country, who need no reminder, to the record of Mr. Hopkins.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is con-

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father's God, Thou who hast never forsaken Thy children, continue to bless, guide, and protect us. O Thou who dost seem so far away, be ever near, that we may behold the light of Thy countenance. Open Thou our spiritual eyes that we may see. Open our spiritual hearts that we may feel the pulsations of Thy loving heart. Do Thou work in us Thy holy will as it was in Him, who is the world's divinest Teacher and Redeemer. Thou hast been our help in ages past. By prayers, by tears, by the valor of our worthy sons, Thou hast raised up a republic to be an example and inspiration to all humanity. Eternal God, may it live yet for 10,000 years to be a protest against all forms of tyranny and oppression. Thou who wert from the beginning of time, may those things that cause discord and distrust be abated. May men learn war no more, Almighty God. May nations cease to act and move in the lower lobes of their natures. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

SWEARING IN A MEMBER

Hon. Martin J. Kennedy, a Representative-elect from the State of New York, appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

HON. JOSEPH B. SHANNON

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 34), which I send to the desk.

House Resolution 34

Whereas Joseph B. Shannon, a Representative from the State of Missouri, from the Fifth District thereof, has been unable, because of sickness in his family, to appear in person to be sworn as a Member of the House, and there being no contest or question as to his election: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker, or a deputy named by him, be, and he is hereby, authorized to administer the oath of office to said Joseph B. Shannon at Kansas City, in the State of Missouri, and that the said oath when administered as herein authorized shall be accepted and received by the House as the oath of office of the said Joseph B. Shannon.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the authority of House Resolution 34 just adopted, the Chair appoints the Honorable Allen C. Southern, judge of the Circuit Court of Jackson County, Mo., to administer the oath of office to the Honorable JOSEPH B, SHANNON.

HON. GEORGE P. DARROW

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the authority granted by House Resolution 14, Seventy-sixth Congress, the Chair appoints the Honorable William Ditter to administer the oath of office to the Honorable George P. Darrow.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, January 10, following the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, I be allowed to address the House for 40 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask on what subject?

Mr. TREADWAY. The general good of the country. The information that I will impart to the gentleman from Mississippi will be for his benefit.

Mr. RANKIN. I am anxious to hear the gentleman make such a speech.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a statement which I made before the committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein brief extracts from a Swiss periodical.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, Mr. Dickstein, Mr. O'Neal, Mr. Shanley, and Mr. Ludlow were granted permission to extend their own remarks in the Record.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks by incorporating a radio speech made by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks by including in the RECORD a statement I made yesterday before the Committee for Reciprocity on reciprocal trade agreement information, the statement to include excerpts from the President's inauguration speech March 1933 and from Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the reading of the Budget message today I may proceed for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts to the fact that there are two messages from the President that should be read before any further business is transacted. Would the gentleman modify his request?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that immediately following the reading of the two messages just received from the President of the United States he may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not want to object, I will say to the gentleman that I think during the next week there will be 2 or 3 days in which we will have very little to do. The Democrats have announced a caucus meeting on the adjournment of the House today. I do not know how long that caucus may take. Many of us are very busy right now with various matters. I would be very much pleased if the gentleman from Massachusetts would go over until Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the gentleman from Texas, I will say that the remarks I desire to make should immediately follow the Budget message, because they are applicable to that. They would lose their force, I am certain, on next week. I do not like to interfere with the proceedings of the House, but it seems to me we have ample time today to spare me 20 minutes, particularly as I wish to follow that particular subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I was going to submit a unanimous-consent request, asking permission to address the House for 10 minutes, to give the Members of Congress information relative to the financial statement of the Federal Treasury showing that we are $1.573,000,000 in the red.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman kindly state his unanimous-consent request?

Mr. RICH. Because the majority leader does not want to give the time, I will refrain from asking it today but will give the information next week.

THE BUDGET (H. DOC. NO. 29)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the Budget message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to provisions of law, I transmit herewith the Budget of the United States Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, together with this message, which is an integral part thereof. The estimates in this Budget are based upon a continuation of all taxes now in force and upon a careful analysis of the existing obligations and future needs of the Government. I, therefore, recommend appropriations for the purposes specifically detailed in the tables which follow.

THE BUDGET AND THE NATIONAL INCOME

Taxation yields almost all of the income of the Government, leaving less than 5 percent to come from miscellaneous sources. Revenue from taxes depends mainly on two factors: The rate of taxation and the total of the national income. This holds true not only of direct taxes on personal and corporate income but also of what are known as ad valorem taxes or other forms of indirect taxes, for the very good reason that the volume and value of goods produced or articles imported vary with the rise or fall of the Nation's total income.

We can and do fix the rate of taxation definitely by law. We cannot by a simple legislative act raise the level of national income, but our experience in the last few years has amply demonstrated that through wise fiscal policies and other acts of government we can do much to stimulate it.

Today the Nation's income is in the neighborhood of $60,000,000,000 a year. A few years ago it was much lower. It is our belief that it ought to be much higher.

In order that you may know the amount of revenue which the Government may expect under the existing tax structure as the national income rises, the following table is submitted. It shows the estimated revenues which may be derived when national income reaches certain levels between seventy billion and ninety billion dollars.

Estimated Federal receipts 1 by principal sources at certain assumed levels of national income based on December 1938 tax rates

[In billions of dollars]

National income	70	80	90
Income taxes.  Miscellaneous internal revenue.  Customs.  Miscellaneous receipts.  Pay-roll taxes.	2.5 2.2 .4 .2 .7	3.9 2.6 .5 .2 .8	5.7 3.1 .7 .2 .9
Total	6.0	8.0	10.6

The table is not intended to indicate the national income for any particular year and, of necessity, the estimates are rough and may vary somewhat either way. Since taxes are paid from 1 month to 15 months after income is realized, the achievement of a $90,000,000,000 national income in 1 year will not, for instance, mean tax collections of $10,000,000,000 in that same year. This table is an indicator and not a gage.

During the past 9 fiscal years—a period which has seen the national income drop from a high of $81,000,000,000 in the calendar year 1929 to around $40,000,000,000 in 1932 and rise again to about $70,000,000,000 in 1937—Federal revenues, even though on a higher tax base, have never completely covered expenditures.

We require continual study of the revenues necessary to carry on the normal functions of the Federal Government and of the role which Federal policy should play in the stabilization of the national economy.

This study includes a consideration of: (a) The practicability of reclassifying expenditures on a functional basis and the most appropriate methods of financing the different classifications; (b) the problem of human security including relief and its costs; and (c) the correlation between national income on the one hand and Government receipts and expenditures on the other.

An analysis of receipts and expenditures by major classes over a 10-year period, as set forth in the following table, indicates the nature of the problems to be studied.

NOTE.—This statement is on the basis of the daily Treasury statement as revised on July 1, 1938.

ORDINARY EXPENSES

The expenditure side of a budget may be divided into two major clases, namely, ordinary, which includes the operating expenditures for the normal and continuing functions of government, and extraordinary, which includes those expenditures required to met the nonoperating or the unusual costs of government.

General public works of an annual recurring nature may fall in either class, but in view of their flexibility they have been classed as extraordinary for the purpose of this statement.

The foregoing table shows that the excess of expenditures over revenues in the ordinary classification is attributable to various causes: New functions undertaken; more carrying charges on the national debt, though at lower interest rates; and the inauguration of the social security and agricultural programs. Under all of these classifications new expenditures have been added without corresponding increases in Fixed costs have also increased because of numerous new appropriations for grants and subsidies.

Another type of expenditure has been forced upon us in increasing volume by the real necessity for expanding our national defense. We are all aware of the grave and unsettling developments in the field of international relations during the past few years. Because of the conditions of modern warfare we must now perform in advance tasks that formerly could be postponed until war had become imminent. A large part of additional national-defense expenditures should, I think, be put in a special category on a temporary basis.

The operating expenses of the Government have also increased because of reductions in the hours of work of certain classes of Federal employees and because of expansion of the normal functions of the Government with the growth of the country.

Among the new governmental functions which have added to the costs of the ordinary budget, the farm program is outstanding. Soil-conservation expenditures and other outlays for the crop-adjustment program which are of a continuing nature and produce no direct return to the Federal Government have been only partially covered by new revenues.

A new and partly self-financing addition was made to the ordinary expenditures when the Social Security Act was passed to safeguard the economic security of a large portion of our population. However, no provision was made for revenues which would pay for grants to States for old-age assistance, for maternal and child welfare, for public-health work, and for aid to dependent children and the blind, which expenditures in 1940 will approximate $286,000,000. Furthermore, consideration is now being given to plans for spreading the coverage of, and for revising the benefits under, the Social Security Act, and for improving public-health facilities. These plans present major questions of future national policy and directly affect the Budget.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPENDITURES

Beyond these questions of ordinary expenditures are those which relate to the nonoperating or unusual costs of Government and involve extraordinary expenditures that deal more particularly with the relationship between fiscal policy and the economic welfare of the country. These questions concern Government loans, capital outlays, and relief of need. Expenditures made under these heads are of such a flexible character as to provide, through their contraction or expansion, a partial offset for the rise or fall in the national income.

The public has been showing an increased interest in the adoption by the Government of a form of budget which would conform more nearly to the practice followed in commercial business. There has been some criticism of the Government's practice of including in its budgetary expenditures amounts disbursed for loans, or for self-liquidating projects, or for other extraordinary capital outlays which increase the wealth of the Nation.

I recognized the merit of constructive suggestions of this nature by recommending in my last Budget message a change in the method of financing the requirements of the Commodity Credit Corporation. This recommendation provided for an annual appraisal of the assets and liabilities of the Corporation, and contemplated that any surplus from operations or any impairment of capital resulting from losses be reflected as receipts or expenditures in the annual Budget. Under this method the Budget would be affected, not when the investment or loan is made, but in the fiscal year when the surplus or loss occurs. Congress approved this recommendation in the act of March 8, 1938, and it might well give consideration to an extension of this principle to other governmental corporations and credit agencies, such as:

Agencies under the Farm Credit Administration.

Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Export-Import Bank of Washington.

Farm Security Administration.

Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Inland Waterways Corporation.

Panama Railroad.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Rural Electrification Administration.

United States Maritime Commission.

Public projects of a self-liquidating character represent another class of expenditures appearing in the annual Budget as current outlays, to which this principle might also be applied. For example, outlays for the Boulder Canyon project amounting to more than $120,000,000 have been included in annual budgetary expenditures of the Government, notwithstanding that the total cost of the project, including capitalized interest during the period of construction, will be returned to the Government within 50 years, with interest.

While I do not advocate that the Government capitalize all of its expenditures for physical improvements, it seems to me that such portions of the cost of public projects as are clearly self-liquidating should occupy a separate category in budgetary reporting. Our financial statements, of course, should clearly reflect, in appropriate classifications, the amount of Government outlays for physical improvements that are not self-liquidating in character. We must take into account the necessity for making such of these and other changes as will permit the presentation to the Congress and to the public of more accurate and intelligible statements of the financial operations of the Government.

I should like to call your attention to the following table comparing for the 10-year period the amount of the Federal deficit and the increase in the public debt, with the amount included therein for capital outlays. It should be understood that this table is not intended to represent values on an earning basis. Nevertheless, under our policy of expanding capital outlays to compensate for variation in private capital expenditures and of making loans to meet emergency needs of our people, the table clearly shows that the greater part of the deficits and the larger part of the increase in the public debt have gone for permanent additions to our national wealth.

Let us all fix that fact in our minds so that there shall be no doubt about it and so that we may have a clear and intelligent idea of what we have been doing. We have not been throwing the taxpayers' money out of the window or into the sea. We have been buying real values with it. Let me repeat: The greater part of the budgetary deficits that have been incurred have gone for permanent, tangible additions to our national wealth. The balance has been an investment in the conservation of our human resources, and I do not regard a penny of it as wasted.

This statement is on the basis of the daily Treasury statement as revised on July 1, 1938,
This amount excludes $170,000,000 of repayments covered into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.
The Works Progress Administration has estimated that between 30 percent and 40 percent of the expenditures of that Administration represent outlays for new construction. This does not represent the entire amount of durable improvements made with Works Progress Administration funds, since additions to existing structures are not classed as new construction. However for the purposes of this statement a figure has been used representing only new construction, namely, 34 percent of the Works Progress Administration expenditures, after excluding administrative expenses, expenses of the National Youth Administration, and expenditures for rural rehabilitation.
This fund was established from the increment resulting from reduction in weight of the gold dollar. This increment was not included in the general receipts of the Government, nor was the expenditure for the establishment of the stabilization fund classed as general. Thus the transactions which resulted in this fund did not in any way affect the deficit. Nevertheless, the balance remaining in this fund could, when no longer needed for the purpose of stabilization, be utilized as an offset against the increase in the debt.

A year ago I recommended an increase in work relief, public works, and other related expenditures to check the downward spiral of business. The program undertaken at that time has contributed materially, I believe, to the existing upward movement of business and employment; and I feel that the businessmen and farmers and workers of the country, no less than the unemployed, are entitled to an assurance that this program will not be curtailed arbitrarily or violently.

The actual cost of work relief and similar expenditures goes down after jobs are found by the workers on these rolls. A violent contraction, before the natural expansion of private industry is ready to take up the slack, would mean not only human misery but a disruptive withdrawal from American industry of a volume of purchasing power which business needs at this time. The necessity of increasing Federal expenditures a year ago to check a recession is a well-known fact. Any decision to decrease those expenditures now that recovery has just started would constitute a new policy which ought not to be adopted without full understanding of what may be the result.

May I say emphatically that I am not suggesting an ordinary budget which is always balanced and an extraordinary budget which is always unbalanced. The ordinary expenses of government should continue to be met out of current revenues. But I also hope that those revenues in times of prosperity will provide a surplus which can be applied against the public debt that the Government must incur in lean years because of extraordinary demands upon it.

I believe I am expressing the thought of the most farsighted students of our economic system in saying that it would be unwise either to curtail expenditures sharply or to impose drastic new taxes at this stage of recovery. But in view of the addition to our public expenditures involved in the proposed enlarged national-defense program and the program for agricultural parity payments, for which no revenue provision has yet been made, I think we might safely consider moderate tax increases which would approximately meet the increased expenditures on these accounts. It should be added, however, that it is my firm conviction that such new taxes as may be imposed should be most carefully selected from the standpoint of avoiding repressive effects upon purchasing power.

Sound progress toward a budget that is formally balanced is not to be made by heavily slashing expenditures or drastically increasing taxes. On the contrary, it is to be sought by employing every effective device we may have at our command for promoting a steady recovery, which means steady progress toward the goal of full utilization of our resources. We can contribute very materially toward that end by a wise

I am recommending the reenactment of the excise taxes which will expire in June and July of this year, not because I regard them as ideal components of our tax structure, but because their collection has been perfected, our economy is adjusted to them, and we cannot afford at this time to sacrifice the revenue they represent. If the Congress should at this session adopt new taxes more scientifically planned to care for the defense and agricultural programs, it is quite possible that the existence of these new taxes will enable us in a later year to give consideration to abolishing some of the present excise levies.

The revised estimate of receipts for the fiscal year 1939 as contained in this Budget is $5,520,070,000 and of expenditures $9,492,329,000, leaving a deficit of $3,972,259,000.

The estimated receipts for the fiscal year 1940 amount to $5,669,320,000 and the expenditures for that year are estimated at $8,995,663,000, resulting in a deficit of $3,326,343,000.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Temporary miscellaneous internal-revenue taxes: I recommend that the Congress take steps by suitable legislation to extend the miscellaneous internal-revenue taxes which under existing law will expire next June and July, and also to maintain the current rates of those taxes which would otherwise be reduced next June. I consider that the revenue from such taxes or its equivalent is necessary for the financing of the Budget for 1940.

Postal receipts: The estimates of appropriations for the Postal Service included in the 1940 Budget are predicated upon the enactment of legislation to provide for the continuance during that fiscal year of the 3-cent postage rate for firstclass mail other than for local delivery. While the Government collects more than it spends on first-class mail, the Postal Service is not self-supporting because it carries other classes of mail at less than cost, as shown in the tabular footnote.

Civilian Conservation Corps: The Civilian Conservation Corps has demonstrated its usefulness and has met with general public approval. It should be continued beyond June 30, 1940, and I recommend that Congress enact during its present session the necessary legislation to establish the Corps as a permanent agency of the Government.

REVIEW OF THE FISCAL YEARS 1938 AND 1939, AND THE FISCAL PROGRAM FOR 1940

This review concerns the cash actually received and paid out by the Treasury in the fiscal year 1938, the estimates of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year 1939, and the fiscal program for 1940.

Fiscal year 1938

Receipts: Total general fund receipts for the fiscal year 1938 amounted to $6,241,661,227 which was a gain over 1937 of $947,821,000. The receipts from income taxes were $477,-091,000 in excess of the amount collected from that source in 1937 while miscellaneous internal-revenue taxes were $98,-235,000 more. The amounts collected from pay-roll taxes under the Social Security and Carriers' Taxing Acts were $502,075,000 in excess of the amounts collected from the same sources during 1937. Approximately the same amounts were received in each of the 2 years from the tax on unjust enrichment and from miscellaneous receipts. On the other hand, the revenue from customs during 1938 declined $127,169,000 from the 1937 collections.

Expenditures: The total expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938 (exclusive of expenditures for debt retirement and those payable from postal revenue) amounted to $7,625,822,158, as compared with expenditures on the same basis in 1937 of $8,442,408,756. Of the reduction of $816,586,000 in the 1938 expenditures below those of 1937, the bonus payment, which was a nonrecurring item in 1937, accounts for $556,665,000. Recovery and relief was $772,539,000 less in 1938 than in 1937, and transactions in revolving funds were $82,583,000 less. Transfers to trust accounts increased $290,937,000, while expenditures for other purposes were $304,264,000 greater.

Deficit and public debt: The gross deficit for the fiscal year 1938 amounted to $1,449,625,881. Excluding $65,464,950 for statutory debt retirement, the net deficit was $1,384,160,931. The estimated net deficit submitted a year ago, as revised and adjusted, was $1,204,330,000. The increase in the gross public debt during the year amounted to $740,126,583, bringing the gross debt on June 30, 1938, to $37,164,740,315.

Fiscal year 1939

Receipts: The total anticipated general fund receipts for the fiscal year 1939 will be $5,520,070,000, or $399,367,000 less than was anticipated in the Budget estimates of last January and $721,591,000 less than for 1938.

This latter decrease reflects the adverse business conditions of the late months of the 1937 and the early months of the 1938 calendar years, and is particularly true of income taxes which it is estimated will decline $548,618,000 below the actual collections in 1938. Miscellaneous internal revenue is expected to be $106,483,000 less, and pay-roll taxes will be $34,781,000 less than in 1938. Customs revenues are expected to show a decrease of $24,187,000 and miscellaneous receipts a decrease of $3,356,000.

Expenditures: The total expenditures (exclusive of expenditures for debt retirement and those payable from postal revenue) for the fiscal year 1939 are now estimated at $9.492,329,000.

Expenditures for recovery and relief, including expenditures under an anticipated supplemental appropriation for the last 5 months of the present fiscal year, will amount in 1939 to $3,187,695,000, an increase of $951,528,000 over expenditures for this purpose in 1938. There are also increases of $170,-937,000 for the regular departments and agencies; $115,106,-000 for the General Public Works Program; $53,079,000 for national defense: $346,318,000 for the agricultural adjustment program, largely for cotton price adjustments and parity payments; $38,785,000 for grants and administrative expenses under the Social Security Act; $49,719,000 for interest on the public debt; $17,992,000 under revolving funds; $78.449.000 for transfers to trust accounts: and $150.000.000 for supplemental items other than for relief. There are decreases of $2,945,000 for the legislative establishment, the Judiciary, and the Executive Office; $32,343,000 for veterans' pensions and benefits; $36,383,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps; and $33,734,000 for refunds of taxes.

Deficit and public debt: Excluding public debt retirements, the net deficit for 1939 is now estimated at $3,972,259,000, as compared with an actual net deficit in 1938 of $1,384,160,931. The gross public debt on June 30, 1939, is estimated at $41,131,502,010.

Fiscal year 1940

Receipts: Revenue estimates for the fiscal year 1940 are based on the assumption that certain taxes which would otherwise expire in June and July 1939, will be continued. The total anticipated receipts for the fiscal year 1940 on this basis are $5,669,320,000, an increase of $149,250,000 over the estimated revenues for the fiscal year 1939. The effect of the business recession which began late in 1937 will continue to be felt in income-tax collections during the fiscal year 1940 and such collections are expected to be $183,000,000 below those for 1939. Miscellaneous internal revenue on the other hand will increase $160,400,000 over 1939, and pay-roll taxes are expected to be $90,250,000 higher. The tax on unjust enrichment is expected to remain at the same figure as in 1939. The amount of contributions under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, which appears as a new item in 1940, will be $4,950,000. Customs receipts are expected to show an increase of $68,900,000 over collections from this source during the present fiscal year, and miscellaneous receipts are expected to be greater than in 1939 by $7,750,000.

Expenditures: The expenditures contemplated for the fiscal year 1940—exclusive of expenditures for debt retirement and those payable from postal revenues—total $8,995,663,200, which is $496,666,000 less than the amount estimated for 1939. There are increases of $1,046,000 under the legislative and judicial establishments; $33,735,000 for the civil departments and agencies; $8,665,000 under the General Public Works Program; $28,121,000 under the Social Security Act; $74,000,000 for interest on the public debt; $4,510,000 for refunds of taxes; and $87,097,000 under transfers to trust accounts.

For recovery and relief it is estimated that $2,266,165,000 will be needed, or $921,530,000 less than the amount required for this purpose in 1939. Supplemental estimates of appropriations will be submitted to meet the requirements of the Works Progress Administration, the National Youth Administration, and the Farm Security Administration for the fiscal year 1940. Of the estimated expenditure of $2,266,165,000 for recovery and relief purposes, $1,750,000,000 is the amount estimated for expenditure by these three agencies; $469,-165,000 by the Public Works Administration and various departments from old balances of emergency funds, $10,000,000 by the Federal Housing Administration, and $37,000,000 for reduction in interest rates on farm mortgages.

National-defense expenditures for 1940 will amount to $1,319,558,000. This is an increase of $309,351,000 over the contemplated expenditures for national-defense purposes in 1939 and represents an increase of $99,351,000 for continuing the current program and $210,000,000 on account of the new $500,000,000 program to be submitted at a later date.

There are decreases in estimated expenditures under the agricultural adjustment program of $13,667,000; under the Civilian Conservation Corps of $5,000,000; under revolving funds of $101,949,000; under veterans' pensions and benefits of $1,044,000; and under regular supplemental items of $50,000,000.

Deficit and public debt: The estimated net deficit for the fiscal year 1940 is $3,326,343,200, or $645,916,000 less than the net deficit for the current fiscal year. The gross public debt on June 30, 1940, is estimated at $44,457,845,210.

It should be pointed out, however, that the increase in the debt by reason of the deficit does not mean that the Treasury will borrow that additional sum on the market. There will be available during the fiscal year for investment in special issues of Government obligations the net sum of approximately $950,000,000, which represents investments of $579,000,000 from the old-age reserve account, $271,000,000 from the unemployment trust fund, and $100,000,000 from the railroad and Government employees' retirement funds and from veterans' funds.

The following table shows the gross public debt at the end of the fiscal years 1936, 1937, and 1938, and the estimated gross debt at the end of the fiscal years 1939 and 1940.

Appropriations: The appropriations recommended in this Budget, including those for the Postal Service, District of Columbia, and probable supplemental items, total $10,190,-311,483. The appropriations already made and prospective supplemental items for the fiscal year 1939 for the same purpose total $10,928,609,972. This is a decrease of $738,298,489.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—ADDITIONAL RELIEF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1939 (H. DOC. NO. 87)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

To the Congress of the United States:

In my message of April 14, 1938, I presented to the Congress certain recommendations covering programs for the Works Progress Administration, for public works, and for housing, which were designed to increase the purchasing power of the Nation, to stimulate business activity, and to provide increased employment. Subsequently, in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, approved June 21, 1938, the Congress appropriated to the Works Progress Administration the sum of $1,425,000,000, together with certain balances of previous allocations to that Administration which remained unobligated on June 30, 1938. By other legislation, $23,000,000 of this appropriation was reserved for specific purposes and therefore was not available for the Works Progress Administration program. In section 2 of the act, the Congress provided that the available funds should be apportioned over the first 8 months of the fiscal year 1939, and further authorized me to modify that apportionment in the event of an extraordinary emergency or unusual circumstance which could not be anticipated at the time the apportionment was made.

Since the enactment by the Congress of legislation providing funds for the programs recommended in my message, substantial business and industrial improvement has occurred throughout the country. However, during the period prior to the adoption of this legislation, when unemployment was increasing, the increase in the number employed on the Works Progress Administration program did not keep pace with the need for employment because the Works Progress Administration had funds to employ only part of those who were out of jobs.

In addition, in a period of increasing unemployment there is a lag before the impact of the jobless reaches the Works Progress Administration. This is because workers who lose their jobs exhaust their private resources before applying for relief. Furthermore, the time intervening between the loss of private jobs and the need for Works Progress Administration employment is now considerably greater than heretofore because of the operation of the unemployment compensation program.

Therefore, with the passage of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, the Works Progress Administration expanded its program in an effort more nearly to meet the needs of the unemployed. While beginning in July 1938, 125,000 to 150,000 workers were voluntarily leaving Works Progress Administration projects each month, it was necessary to add from 200,000 to 300,000 others monthly to the rolls in order to meet the needs of those whose personal resources or compensation benefits had become exhausted, and to take back as required by section 12 of the act, those who had left the Works Progress Administration for private employment and whose employment had been terminated through no fault of their own.

The demands upon the Works Progress Administration appropriation were increased by two additional factors. The critical foreign situation has had an adverse effect upon American business and industrial employment in this country, and has been an unexpected deflationary force affecting the prices of commodities entering into world markets, such as certain of our important agricultural commodities. This has accentuated relief problems in important areas in the country. In addition, the hurricane which devastated large areas of New England last September seriously dislocated industry and trade in the northeastern section of the country and added to the relief burden in that area.

As a result of the foregoing factors, the employment provided from the Works Progress Administration appropriation increased from 2,900,000 at the beginning of July 1938, to a peak of 3,350,000. During the past few weeks the number has been declining. On December 24, 1938, the total had fallen to 3,112,000, and it is expected that the employment during the month of January will approximate 3,000,000. The foregoing figures include employment provided with funds transferred by the Works Progress Administration to other Federal agencies under the authority of section 3 of the act. An average of 90,000 persons are thus employed under conditions entirely similar to those pertaining in the main Works Progress Administration program.

Under the conditions outlined above, the funds appropriated to the Works Progress Administration will be barely adequate to finance the operations of that agency through the month of January 1939. Therefore, in accordance with the authority contained in section 2 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, I have apportioned those funds to be used during the first 7 months of the fiscal year.

It is believed that sufficient funds should now be appropriated to the Works Progress Administration for the balance of the current fiscal year to employ an average of 3,000,000 workers in February and March, and a diminishing number beginning in April which would reach a figure of 2,700,000 in June. This would include the numbers to be employed with funds transferred to other Federal agencies. The employment proposed for February and March, which is the same number that is expected to be reached in January, is justified by seasonal factors and the lag in outside construction operations which always occurs on account of weather conditions. In fact, there is normally an increase in the need for employment during these winter months, and the funds available to the Works Progress Administration have not been sufficient to enable it to assign to its program a large number of employable persons who have been certified as in need of

The Works Progress Administration program is at present being conducted at an average Federal cost of approximately $61 per worker per month, of which only $2 is overhead administrative expense. Therefore to provide the employment set forth above, a deficiency appropriation of $875,000,000 will be required, and this is the amount which I recommend to the Congress. In view of the fact previously mentioned, that the funds now available are barely sufficient to finance the Works Progress Administration through the month of January 1939, I urge speedy action on the part of the Congress to provide these additional funds in order to prevent disruption of the program and consequent suffering and want on the part of the unemployed.

I realize that the Congress may wish to prescribe by legislation the manner in which funds appropriated to the Works Progress Administration and other appropriations shall be distributed. However, the problem of distributing work relief funds is a complicated one involving factors not only of population but of economic and unemployment conditions in various sections of the country. The hasty adoption of legislative provisions, to be immediately effective, which radically change the present method of distributing Works Progress Administration funds would greatly complicate the administration of the program in the coming months. I therefore believe that the Congress should make this question the subject of study and hearings, with a view to determining a policy to obtain in the fiscal year 1940, but that the appropriation recommended in this message should be made on the same terms as that for the first part of the fiscal year 1939.

No one wishes more sincerely than I do that the program for assisting unemployed workers shall be completely free from political manipulation. However, anyone who proposes that this result can be achieved by turning the administration of a work program over to local boards is either insincere or is ignorant of the realities of local American politics.

It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the Congress, and that this should be done. Such penalties should be imposed not only upon persons within the administrative organization of the Works Progress Administration, but also upon outsiders who have in fact in many instances been the principal offenders in this regard. My only reservation in this matter is that no legislation should be enacted which will in any way deprive workers on the Works Progress Administration program of the civil rights to which they are entitled in common with other citizens.

In connection with the above, I invite your attention to the fact that under the provisions of Executive Order No. 7916 the administrative employees of the Works Progress Administration, with the exception of a relatively small number of positions, will be brought under the civil service on February 1, 1939.

It is my intention to transmit to the Congress, probably in the month of April, a supplemental estimate covering the appropriation which will be required to provide work relief for persons in need in the fiscal year 1940.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 5, 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Woodrum of Virginia). Pursuant to the order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, the last words of the last message to which you have just listened are words that will be ringing in your ears for some time to come. They were, in effect, "Those who do not agree with me are either insincere or ignorant."

Doubtless this did not escape your attention.

For the information of the new Members of this House I wish to say that I happen to be the ranking Republican member on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, but the majority control the committee and will allow no hearings on their expenditures. This, then, is the only forum I have in which I may secure an opportunity for expression.

I dislike very much to change the plans of the majority leader, but I desire that these remarks follow immediately the reading of the President's Budget message today; and again there should be the specters of former Budget messages following directly behind. Last year I named similar remarks "The specter of a former Budget." The year before that I gave to my remarks the title, "A $7,000,000,000 Government permanently established." At that time many expressed amusement and unbelief. Today the Budget message discloses that it is a $10,000,000,000 Government this year, and a $10,000,000,000 Government in 1940, and that undoubtedly means permanently established. In his message on yesterday the President said in effect that if you do not establish a $10,000,000,000 Government you cannot have a $80,000,000,000 nation. So we must accept a $10,000,000,000 Government as being permanent. Any suggestion, any lamentation-as some have heretofore termed it-from me, has never been overstatement. Rather have I greatly understated it. Some years ago we predicted a $40,000,000,000 debt and Mr. Eccles said at the time that we could stand it. You ridiculed my prediction. Today you read that it will be some $44,000,000,000 in 1940. If he now says that it will be $44,000,000,000 a year from today, it will certainly be $45,000,000,000 and more, because on every occasion when he has sent in a Budget message he has been from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 in error in his estimates.

In 1937 he told us that we would have a surplus of $1,500,-000,000 in 1938, which would take care of relief during that fiscal year. Today he tells you that when the books were closed the deficit was $1,300,000,000.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, wait a few minutes. I know the gentleman does not enjoy this, but I ask him to be patient for a little.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I want a little information.

Mr. GIFFORD. You are getting it.

Oh, this message today, to which I listened carefully, is full of alibis. I want you new Members to do as I do; take the Budget messages printed in the Congressional Records for the last 3 or 4 years and spread them on your desk. Then, by comparison, you will learn much about the fiscal affairs of your country. I listened with eagerness for the suggestion as to the amount to be needed for national defense this year. He asks $200,000,000 only for additional national defense this year as a part of a $500,000,000 program that he will present here on next Monday. Only $200,000,000 for increased national defense out of all this ten billion! He said that we will not have to borrow to take care of the whole deficit. You heard that plainly, did you not? He said the same last year in almost identical language—"We will not have to borrow all the money." Social-security taxes will mop up the debt to the tune of about $1,000,000,000. You are familiar with the method of collecting the social-security funds and the spending of these same funds for current expenses. Read this Budget message in the Congressional Record tomorrow. Then read the Budget message of January 1938. Note the similarity of the statement. Unblushingly, without alibis in the present instance, is this fact acknowledged.

Next week we shall listen to many speeches, some severely critical, others in defense or only evangelistic pleading about intangible or spiritual values secured by the expenditure of these vast sums of borrowed money.

We are today advised that we ought to have a special budget for many so-called permanent improvements. The stone walls you have built all over the land may be fairly permanent. Perhaps I should have spent my own money on my own estate building stone walls because they would be permanent investments.

Again you are asked today to wipe off the books the huge losses of those independent corporations that were set up to avoid the necessity of coming to the Congress for appropriations. He states, "You did that for the R. F. C. last year." We might as well, and so have a true picture to present in future Treasury reports. It was, and is, ridiculous that the R. F. C. shall pay interest to the Treasury on money given to Harry Hopkins; also to the Commodity Credit Corporation, which lost $500,000,000 on cotton last year. The R. F. C. finally pleaded, "Will you not wipe out these losses so that we may no longer be forced to carry them as assets and pay further interest on these amounts?" The January 1937 Budget message estimated that loss of interest for the year. So we canceled two and one-half billion dollars of so-called assets. Having succeeded in obtaining our consent last year to the marking off of two and one-half billions, in today's message he requests that we cancel many more losses of those corporate devises. Read the items when presented.

He wants us to wipe out the losses of not one but two. three, four, five, six, seven, or eight different corporations; so that we, and the people generally, may not again have them called to our attention. We may as well be willing to forget them, for then we shall at least have a return to honest bookkeeping.

A $44,000,000,000 debt is not a good rampart for national defense. It is now not to be wondered at that Governor Eccles came to the rescue of the President recently in a reply to the Senator from Virginia. He declared, in effect, "Debts? Do not worry about debts. They are harmless and they should not even be paid off too hastily, because our economics might thereby be greatly disturbed. Why, you know our private and our public debt added together is not as great today as it was in 1929."

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. GIFFORD. In just a moment. I want to get this thought over to you.

When you and I borrow money and go into debt, we must show something tangible with which to pay that debt later on. A private debt cannot be compared at all with a public debt spent for something that is generally a liability, because of its maintenance and unsaleability. There is a vast difference between a large public debt and a large private debt. We can cancel a private debt with assets acquired in its assumption.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Briefly.

Mr. KNUTSON. Is not the gentleman aware of the fact that the only field for investment today is Government securities, and if the Government stops spending and issuing more bonds there will be no place for the American people to invest their money?

Mr. GIFFORD. I should like some time to discuss that matter. Indeed, I have discussed it many times. The procedure of financing our public debt is intensely interesting and fully explained in the latest issue of Fortune magazine. You really should read it and indeed wonder when the end of creating such fictitious debt money may be reached.

I am calling attention to today's Budget alibis. To cover up and further mislead, they now desire to open up another Budget and carry so-called permanent improvements as assets. Who can possibly determine their true value for use in the payment of the debt?

That 2 and 2 make 4 and never 5 or 3; The heart of man is sore and long is like to be.

You cannot hide the truth in such a manner. The inexorable law of mathematics will not permit it. Every person who is listening to me knows we cannot go on much longer in this fashion; that there is a limitation to public credit, and it may be very near.

Even now it is a worrisome procedure for the Treasury to place huge Government loans. Do they not carefully time these operations after advising with the large bankers, insurance companies, and investment houses? Do they not eagerly inquire, "Is this an opportune moment to offer these bonds to the public? How much shall we sweeten them with attractive interest rates in order that former holdings now due will be converted and new cash be cheerfully offered?"

Have you noticed that the bankers now insist that at least one-half of new financing be in very short-term securities?

I wish to remind you that during the war your Secretary of the Treasury, by all the salesman's arts he could muster, sold bonds to you and me and to all the people generally. Only 20 percent were taken up by the banks. But today practically all the bonds are taken by these large institutions and would be, could be, and probably will be, dumped in huge quantities at the very moment when they should be held rather than thrown on the market. Everybody knows that, but it is hoped that the present machinery of the Government and its sinking funds will be able to meet that emergency by supporting the market.

However, limiting my remarks to the Budget, I will go back to 1937, when the President stated that one and onehalf billion dollars only, representing surplus of that year. would be needed for relief and that we would have a balanced Budget. But the deficit was one and three-tenths billion dollars. He again said that this year of 1939 we would have a deficit of less than one billion. Today he tells us that it is to be three and nine-tenths billion dollars-to quote one of this morning's editorials, "$4,000,000,000 out of whack." He follows that up by saying that in 1940-think of it! 1940-1 year and 11 months away-the deficit will again be $4,000,000,000. If he says that today, of course, it will be even more than that. According to a report of December 29, 1938, the present gross public debt is already thirtynine and one-half billion dollars. Contemplate the fortyfour billion in 1940. Whither are we heading?

What manner of man is it who can face us with a message like that of today, bearing in mind his solemn admonitions in 1933? Apparently he really thinks that we are "insincere

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Penn-

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman know that we now have a law prohibiting the national income from becoming over $45.000.000,000? Does the gentleman know further that this administration during this session is going to ask us to increase that to $80,000,000,000? Will the Congress do it?

Mr. GIFFORD. I thought it was to be only seventy-five.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I understand the President's message, on July 1, 1940, at the end of the fiscal year 1940, the estimated national debt will be forty-four and one-half billion dollars. That is the national debt. To determine the total public debt we must add to that the sum of $20,000,000,000 internal public debt, which will bring the total public debt of the United States on July 1, 1940, to $65,000,000,000, or a little more than $1 for every second since the birth of Christ.

Mr. GIFFORD. Debt is a healthy condition, according to Governor Eccles.

Let me tell this simple story to you new Members: In March 1933 this party came into power with $3,500,000,000 of Hoover assets in the Treasury. They have collected $3,000,000,000 of that and spent it. They have passed three tax bills increasing taxes and revenues, and they have spent it all. They gave us rum taxes, raising about $700,000,000 a year. They have spent that. They have taken our socialsecurity taxes to the amount of approximately $960,000,000 and used the money for current expenses. They have spent it.

By June 30 they will have borrowed $19,000,000,000 and spent it. And at the moment, instead of having $3,500,000,000 of assets in the Treasury, as shown by the last Treasury report giving what we have in good R. F. C. securities, there are only $3,500,000,000 of assets, counting the capital stock of those corporations still going merrily on with their loaning and spending and for which an estimate of 50 percent of their face value would be a liberal one.

Some authorities estimate these capital stock issues to be worth 50 cents on the dollar, while others maintain that in a final accounting not 20 cents on the dollar. You may form your own opinions.

In 1936 the President told the Nation:

We have $6,000,000,000 of assets in the Treasury besides debts due from other nations.

Then, almost immediately afterwards, we had to mark off $2,500,000,000. Let not the President of the United States again make such statements. It is impossible that he should be ignorant of the real conditions.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. When we entered 1933 there was $3,500,-000,000 in the Treasury. Will the gentleman state what the deficit was for 1932 and 1933, incurred by the Hoover administration?

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, yes.

Mr. SABATH. Was it not over $5,000,000,000?

Mr. GIFFORD. Counting both those years, it was five and one-half billion, because he loaned money to the banks, railroads, and the insurance companies, receiving in return a large amount of real assets, which were largely recovered.

Mr. SABATH. Without that?

Mr. GIFFORD. No; not without that. I have the figures here.

Mr. SABATH. Was the loan made to the bank of former Vice President Dawes paid back?

Mr. GIFFORD. I can put that into the Record if I so desire. I am so sorry for the gentleman to be forced to refer to that unfortunate condition in his city.

Mr. SABATH. Did Dawes pay back what was loaned?

Mr. GIFFORD. Go back into antiquity if you desire.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think we should clear up now once and for all this session the matter of the Dawes loan. Jesse Jones, appearing before the Committee on Banking and Currency, stated that he was a member of that Board when the loan was made. He did not evade any responsibility for making the loan. He said he would do it now as Chairman of the Board as he did at that time as a member of the Board. He said the most the Government should ever lose on that loan would be $10,000,000, but that if the loss were the whole amount of that loan of $90,000,000 it would have been a good investment by the Government. It saved billions of dollars of investments and deposits in the Midwest. It prevented, in the Chicago area, losses comparable to those suffered because of the closing of the Michigan banks.

Mr. SABATH. Does the gentleman-

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield no further at this time. That is a complete answer. The alibi speeches can come forth later.

I sympathize with you deeply, with you real Democrats, I do not desire to be facetious today, but a little later on we shall remind you how you even played "political poker with your charity chips," as recently stated by one of our able columnists.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. In his message yesterday the President stated that the American people are wiser and tougher than they used to be. They must be tough, or they could not have survived 5 years of the New Deal. November 8 proved that they are wiser. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. I was greatly interested in the terminal remark of our beloved Speaker when he delivered his address on the radio just recently: "As an American citizen I cannot refrain, in closing, from expressing my very great satisfaction over the bright prospects for the New Year." I believe he visualized the increased membership on this side of the House and felt that the Nation may now be saved. [Applause.]

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the reading of the Journal and following the disposition of business on the Speaker's desk, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Woodrum of Virginia). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. RAYBURN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, in order that there may be no misunderstanding may I say that last year the policy was adopted that when unanimous-consent requests were preferred that a Member might speak on a day certain it was always understood that he would speak after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and following the legislative program of that day, if there was any such program. Whether or not there will be a legislative program on Monday I do not know, but I doubt it. However, I want it understood that it will be the custom this year that when a Member requests time to speak this condition is coupled with his request.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the majority leader I tried to make my request in such form that it would embody that condition

Mr. MAPES. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, while the gentleman from Texas is on his feet, may I ask if he can tell the House what the program will be for the first few days of next week?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not believe there will be any program for the first few days.

Of course, a few committees will be named by that time. A majority of the minority and majority members of the Committee on Appropriations have already been named. I believe that committee is now working, but I do not see any prospect that they will report out anything before the middle or the last of next week.

Mr. MAPES. Then practically nothing will be done except these speeches on general subjects.

Mr. RAYBURN. That is what I think, yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have the privilege of addressing the House for 15 minutes on Wednesday next after the legislative program, if any, has been disposed of.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record, and include therein a report made by me to Mr. Rankin, chairman of the World War Veterans' Committee, covering a survey of veterans' hospital facilities in eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, and in the State of Delaware, as well as an inspection of the United States Naval Hospital in Philadelphia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Somers of New York, for an indefinite period, on account of illness.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the House, in accordance with its previous order, adjourned to meet on Monday, January 9, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

MODIFICATION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW-PETITION

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I present a petition signed by Rev. A. J. Blaufuss and 800 other citizens of Topeka, Kans., protesting against modification of the provisions of the Neutrality Act so as to allow sale of munitions and war supplies to participants in the Spanish civil war. The petition reads as follows:

We the undersigned respectfully petition the Congress for as long as we shall adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on our statute books the further and corollary principles enunciated in the act of May 1, 1937, extending the original act to include civil as well as international conflicts.

In this connection, Mr. President, I desire to say that I believe the United States should adhere to the principle of neutrality as attempted to be laid down in the existing Neutrality Act. I conceive the Neutrality Act was written to enable the United States to remain neutral and not for the purpose of enabling the United States to help decide foreign wars without actually participating as a belligerent. I believe that is the proper basis for our foreign policy.

I ask that the petition be referred to the Committee on

otherwise:

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the petition will be received and referred as requested by the Senator from Kansas.

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE SENATE

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should like to supplement what has just been said by stating that the able Senator from Kentucky and I will report the committee assignments for the respective sides tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Oregon simply stated what is obvious, that we hope to be able to report the committee lists tomorrow. The Senator from Oregon is correct. We will have to postpone doing that until tomorrow. However, the committees may proceed with their work with their present members because they are continuing anyway, and if there is any difficulty it will be cured tomorrow. We will, therefore, have a session tomorrow. That, so far as I know, will be all the business to be transacted. For that reason, unless there are routine matters to be presented, I shall make a motion. If any Senators now wish to introduce bills by unanimous consent or submit resolutions, I will withhold the motion I was about to make.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Kentucky what was the motion he intended to make?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky suggested that if any Senators desired to introduce bills or submit resolutions or make unanimous-consent requests, now is the proper time to do it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I stated that I would have no objection. of course, to the presentation of such matters, although we have no morning hour today.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 43), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per 100 words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION

Mr. RUSSELL submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 44), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Immigration, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. ASHURST submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 45), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary, or any subcommittee thereof, hereby is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

ASSISTANT CLERK, COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. ASHURST submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 46), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary hereby is authorized to employ an assistant clerk to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $960 per annum until the end of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

ASSISTANT CLERK, COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION

Mr. RUSSELL submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 47), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That resolution No. 57, Seventy-fifth Congress, agreed to February 10, 1937, and continued by subsequent resolutions through the Seventy-fifth Congress, authorizing the Committee on Immigration to employ an assistant clerk to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $2,400 per annum, hereby is continued in full force and effect until the end of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

FUNERAL EXPENSES OF THE LATE SENATOR COPELAND

Mr. WAGNER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 48), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the committee appointed by the Vice President in arranging for and attending the funeral of Hon. Royal S. Copeland, late a Senator from the State of New York, upon vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

PROCEDURE IN NEGOTIATION OF FOREIGN-TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. On behalf of a number of Senators from some of the sugar-producing States I submit a resolution, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may we not have the resolution read from the desk?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 49) was read, as follows:

Whereas the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act of June 12, 1934, as extended, requires "before any foreign trade agreement is concluded with any foreign government or instrumentality thereof under the provisions of this act, reasonable public notice of the intention to negotiate an agreement with such government or instrumentality shall be given in order that any interested person may have an opportunity to present his views to the President or to such agency as the President may designate under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe"; and

Whereas an official representative of the Cuban Government announced in specific detail in Habana on November 29, 1938, that a new agreement has been concluded with the Government of the United States for further reductions in American tariff duties; and

Whereas the State Department thereafter announced on December 1, 1938, its intention to negotiate the agreement heretofore defined and opened hearings on the subject on January 3, 1939: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Finance Committee is instructed to inquire into this general situation and to determine the facts as to whether a new agreement was made preceding the announcement to American producers; and to report to the Senate at its earliest convenience whether existing procedure in the negotiation of trade agreements effectively provides for the notice to, and the hearings of, American producers preceding these agreements as contemplated and required by the act of June 12, 1934, as extended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am in accord with the objectives of the resolution. I should like to have the names of the sponsors of the resolution identified.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The names will be read. The Chief Clerk read the names, as follows:

Mr. O'Mahoney, Mr. Adams, Mr. Borah, Mr. Vandenberg, Mr. Schwartz, Mr. Murray, Mr. Thomas of Utah, Mr. Overton, Mr. Ellender, and Mr. Clark of Idaho.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I hope that early and appropriate action will be taken by the Committee on Finance, the committee to which it has been requested that the resolution be referred.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, in view of the fact that this resolution simply seeks to develop facts regarding a matter of imminence, I wonder if there would be any objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution instead of its reference to the Finance Committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think the resolution ought to be referred to the Finance Committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky suggests that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Finance. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MODIFICATION OF OIL AND GAS BOND REGULATIONS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, on December 24 last I wrote to the Secretary of the Interior suggesting and requesting certain modifications with respect to the regulations governing the filing of lease bonds under the Oil and Gas Act, as amended. This morning the Secretary of the Interior responded to my request.

Throughout the public-land States there is wide interest in these regulations, and many Members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives representing these States have discussed the matter with the Secretary. The reply which I hold in my hand advises me that it is the intention of the Secretary of the Interior now to modify the regulations to the effect that individual sureties on a bond presented by a lessee may be residents of the State and of the United States judicial district in which the lessee resides without regard to the location of the lands.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my letter to the Secretary and his response may be printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> UNITED STATES SENATE Washington, D. C., December 24, 1938.

Hon. HAROLD L. ICKES,

Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Secretarry: Numerous applications are now being filed with the Department of the Interior to exchange outstanding permits for leases under the provision of the oil and gas law. The regulations of the Department require the holders of such leases to file within 30 days a surety bond for $1,000. This bond is conditioned, among other things, upon the payment of the rental required by the law.

This provision of the regulations imposes a severe penalty upon the applicants because no surety company will issue such a bond without full indemnity. The regulation, therefore, amounts to a demand that the permittee put up $1,000 in cash.

It seems to me that to condition the bond upon the payment of rental is wholly unnecessary and places an unnecessary burden upon the lessee. Moreover, after having conferred with many persons who are interested in the industry, I have come to the conclusion that the rentals required in the law could very well be materially reduced or abolished. In any event, I feel that provision could be made to credit to oil rental account all expenditures made by a lessee for the improvement of his lesse.

These and other features of the law I desire to discuss with you and your staff with a view to amendatory legislation at the forthcoming session of Congress. In the meantime, however, may I request that an announcement be immediately made to the effect that the filing of the $1,000 lease bond will not be required for at least 90 days after the issuance of the lease instead of within 30 days as now provided by the regulations. This concession would give me an opportunity to confer with the experts of the Department and work out a solution of the problem before the filing of any lease bond would become necessary.

Sincerely yours.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, January 9, 1939.

Hon. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR O'MAHONEY: I have received your letter of MY DEAR SENATOR O'MAHONEY: I have received your letter of December 24, in the matter of lease bonds required in connection with the exchange of oil and gas prospecting permits for leases pursuant to the act of August 21, 1935 (49 Stat. 674). For the reasons stated in your letter, you request that "An announcement be immediately made to the effect that the filing of the $1,000 lease bond will not be required for at least 90 days after the issuance of the lease instead of within 30 days as now provided by the regulations".

issuance of the lease instead of within 30 days as now provided by the regulations."

The filing of the $1,000 lease bond is a condition precedent rather than a condition subsequent to the issuance of the lease. Under the regulations of the Department, prior to the issuance of a lease in exchange for a permit, the applicant is required to furnish a $1,000 bond conditioned upon compliance with the terms of the lease. This bond may be filed in one of three alternative forms, (a) with approved corporate surety, (b) with two qualified individual sureties when duly supported by affidavits of justification by such sureties and by a certificate as to their identity, signatures, and financial competency, or (c) without surety, upon deposit of negotiable Federal securities in a sum equal at their par value to the amount of the bond. If a $1,000 bond is filed with individuals as sureties, the regulations require that the sureties must be residents of the State and the United States Judicial District in which the lands are located and that they be worth in real property, not exempt from execution, double the amount of the undertaking.

In acting upon applications to exchange permits for leases, the amount of the undertaking.

In acting upon applications to exchange permits for leases, the General Land Office has followed the long-established administrative practice of allowing the applicant 30 days from receipt of notice within which to execute the lease forms and to furnish the bond. The aforesaid time limit of 30 days, however, is not a mandatory rule. The Department has always pursued a liberal policy with regard to the granting of extensions of time in proper cases, and no change in this policy is contemplated. A reasonable extension of time within which to furnish a bond will not be refused in a particular case should a request therefor be made. You and other Members of Congress interested in public land

You and other Members of Congress interested in public land matters have expressed great concern regarding the requirement of this Department that individual sureties on a bond must be residents of the State and of the United States judicial district in which the lands involved are located. It has been earnestly represented that this requirement does not afford the relief it contemplates since many of the permittees are nonresidents of the State in which the lands involved are located and, therefore, cannot secure personal sureties except in the State in which they reside. In the light of that situation, the Department is urged to waive the requirement that individual sureties on a lease bond must be residents of the State and United States judicial district in which the lands involved are located.

While I am not fully convinced of the need for changing the regulations in view of the alternative form of bond which may be submitted, there is some merit to the contention that with regard to individual surety bonds nonresident permittees do not receive the same favorable treatment that is accorded permittees who reside in the State in which the lands involved are located. Appropriate revision will, therefore, be made in the regulations to remedy that situation. Pending such revision, I have instructed the Commissioner of the General Land Office to issue a general notice to all applicants who have applied to exchange their permits for lesses that individual super bonds if otherwise notice to all applicants who have applied to exchange their permits for leases that individual surety bonds, if otherwise satisfactory, will be regarded as acceptable if the principal and sureties thereon reside in the same State and United States judicial district, notwithstanding that the lands involved may be located in another State. In order that all applicants may be afforded ample opportunity to submit the required $1,000 lease bond, I have also directed the Commissioner to withhold for a period of $60 days adverse action on all applications to exchange permits for leases.

I have noted your comments regarding the rental provisions of the act of August 21, 1935, and your suggestion that appropriate amendatory legislation appears necessary. While I am now unable to perceive the need for amending the act, this Department will, of course, give full and careful consideration to any proposals made in the course of the discussions which you suggest.

Sincerely yours,

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES, Secretary of the Interior.

NOMINATIONS OF HARRY HOPKINS AND JAMES P. POPE

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if there is nothing further to come before the Senate, I am ready to make a motion to adjourn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair feels that he should recognize the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. There being nothing before the Senate, any discussion must be by unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It must be by unanimous consent. Mr. BARKLEY. And subject to a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky is correct. The Senate is proceeding now entirely by unanimous

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no desire to choke off the Senator from New Hampshire, but I want him to understand that if he takes the floor he will proceed by unanimous consent and not under the rule.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, on Thursday last when I was speaking before this body, question was raised by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] and the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] to the effect that I had failed to put in the RECORD letters from Mr. Harry Hopkins to Mr. Krock and to the New York Times relative to the part of my discussion concerning the nomination of Mr. Hopkins to be Secretary of Commerce. Inasmuch as this question has been raised, I have secured copies of Mr. Hopkins' letters and copies of Mr. Krock's replies, which I should like to have incorporated in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times of November 24, 1938]

Mr. Hopkins Excepts—W. P. A. Administrator and Mr. Krock Differ on a Quotation

To the Editor of the New York Times: In the New York Times, under Washington date line of November 12. Arthur Krock, in a direct quotation, reports me as having said, "We will spend and spend, tax and tax, elect and elect."

I have never made such a statement, and there is no basis in fact for such a quotation.

HARRY L. HOPKINS,

Administrator, Works Progress Administration.
Washington, November 21, 1938.

MR. KROCK REPLIES

To the EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

This quotation of Mr. Hopkins' views was first published elsewhere, and in September, long before the New York Times issue of November 12, and between those dates it was often reprinted, twice by me. I used and reprinted the quotation after careful verification, because, while it fitted completely into Mr. Hopkins' political philosophy as I have understood it, I wanted to be certain of the language.

Among those who heard it is a most reputable citizen of New York and, in lighter hours, a playmate of Mr. Hopkins. They were at the Empire race track in Yonkers at the time and were discussing spending and the New Deal in serious vein. Had the quotation not previously been published, or had I not verified it and been assured that it was said seriously, I should not have reprinted the remark.

I am sorry Mr. Hopkins is embarrassed by the publication, and I can well understand that it may cause special difficulties with the Senate if he is nominated to the Cabinet. But, since I know the informant to be accurate, and since his recreational associations with Mr. Hopkins are very close, I can only conclude that Mr. Hopkins has forgotten the incident, though he should easily recognize the consistency of the remark.

ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, November 23, 1938.

HOPKINS REPEATS "SPEND-TAX" DENIAL-SECOND LETTER TO THE Times Asserts He Did Not Make Quotation Ascribed to Him— Asks "Source" Be Told—Krock Replies That He Verified State-MENT, ALTHOUGH PUBLISHED WIDELY AND NOT THEN DENIED

Washington, November 25.—Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, issued in the form of a general press release today a second letter to the New York Times reiterating his denial that he had ever at any time said in any form:

"We will spend and spend, and tax and tax, and elect and elect."
This quotation has been twice ascribed to Mr. Hopkins by Arthur Krock in his dispatches to this newspaper, the last publication having been November 13.

In reply tonight Mr. Krock stated that although the substantial

In reply tonight Mr. Krock stated that although the substantial quotation had previously been printed in many newspapers other than the New York Times, and Mr. Hopkins had made no denial, he had, nevertheless, before making use of it, verified the utterance in confidence to his own satisfaction. He said the source was "a friend of Mr. Hopkins of excellent repute and not at all hard of hearing"; and that this informant was at liberty to reveal himself if he wishes to do so.

THE LETTER FROM HOPKINS

Mr. Hopkins' letter read:
"Because of the increasing widespread publication of a statement attributed to me—a statement which I never made—it becomes necessary to write to you again. The statement to which I refer was quoted by your Mr. Krock under his by-line in the New York Times of November 13.

York Times of November 13.

"On November 24 you published my letter in which I flatly denied ever having made the statement attributed to me by Mr. Krock. Along with it you also published Mr. Krock's reply, explaining he had twice used the quotation 'after careful verification.'

"What does he consider 'careful verification?' It would seem to me that the first obvious move in any sincere attempt to learn the truth would have been for Mr. Krock to ask me about it. He made no effort to consult me. I would have told him, as I have since stated, that the quotation was absolutely inaccurate.

"Bepublication of the statement has reached such proportions."

"Republication of the statement has reached such proportions that if only in the interest of truth and in entire disregard of me as an individual the record should now be set aright.

ASKS "SOURCE" OF THE STORY

"I appreciate the fact newspapermen seldom disclose sources of information coming to them. I have not therefore previously asked Mr. Krock to disclose the identity of the person from whom the statement allegedly came. On the other hand, however, you have a perfect right, as Mr. Krock's publisher, to ascertain the

"Has not the public now an equal right, without transgressing upon the principle of freedom of the press, to be told who started this unfounded story? Only by identifying the source of Mr. Krock's information can you best serve the cause of truth and justice.

"Public officials expect to be criticized by newspaper columnists.
But I am astounded that a columnist for the New York Times should stoop to the level where he employs his column in much the same way that opposition politicians deliver themselves of stump

"In the name of simple justice, permit me the columns of your newspaper to say again there is not a word of truth in the statement Mr. Krock has twice published and defends."

THE REPLY BY MR. KROCK

The statement by Arthur Krock in reply follows:

"The first reference I saw to the quotation from Mr. Hopkins was published September 25, 1938, not in the New York Times but in many other newspapers. It mentioned his 'comments * * * on the subject of spending, taxes, and elections.'

"The second publication was October 14, 1938—not in the New York Times but in many other newspapers. This was specific, viz: 1f he (Mr. Hopkins) hadn't been excitedly telling acquaintances that we are going to "spend and spend and spend, and tax and tax and tax, and elect and elect and elect."

"Days passed Mr. Hopkins made no denial. I naturally assumed "Days passed Mr. Hopkins made no denial. I naturally assumed

"Days passed. Mr. Hopkins made no denial. I naturally assumed he had none to make and therefore did not apply to him. But, conceiving the quotation to be important, and a crystallization of his political philosophy as I understood it, I made inquiries at the source. I verified substantially the quotation—and the belief that it was seriously uttered—before making any use of it. I then used it twice, but Mr. Hopkins took no notice until November 21, after election day

"I submit I showed Mr. Hopkins unusual consideration in seeking verification before reprinting, despite the fact he had long made no denial of a nationally published, direct attribution. Actually I saw him on November 13, the very day of the publication to which he now so violently objects, and he said nothing about it at all.

"The friend who quoted Mr. Hopkins as substantially repeated is of excellent repute and not at all hard of hearing. He is at liberty to reveal himself if he so desires. I learned his identity in confidence and that confidence—unless I am released—I shall maintain."

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that this episode also was reported by Mr. Frank Kent in the Baltimore Sun and by Mr. Joseph Alsop, who is a very sympathetic spokesman for some administration viewpoints; and if there is to be any inquiry into the matter, I suggest that it cover all three, so that we may be fully informed.

Mr. BRIDGES. I agree with the Senator's suggestion.

The nomination of a former Member of this body, Mr. Pope, to the Tennessee Valley Authority Board having been made, I merely wish at this time to point out to this body that there is a parallel case which should be considered in connection with the Pope appointment. The Federal statute-I refer to section 4, paragraph (f), of the T. V. A. Act-contains this provision:

The Board shall elect a treasurer and as many assistant treasurers as it deems proper, which treasurer and assistant treasurers shall give such bonds for the safekeeping of the securities and moneys of the said Corporation as the Board may require: Provided, That any member of said Board may be removed from office at any time by a concurrent resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives.

Referring to the Humphrey case, I find that in 1933 the President of the United States addressed a letter to Mr. Humphrey, in which he said:

Without any reflection at all upon you personally, or upon the service you have rendered in your present capacity, I find it necessary to ask for your resignation as a member of the Federal Trade Commission. I do this because I feel that the aims and purposes of the administration with respect to the work of the Commission can be carried out most effectively with a personnel of my own

In his second letter to Mr. Humphrey, the President said:

You will, I know, realize that I do not feel that your mind and my mind go along together on either the policies or the adminis-tering of the Federal Trade Commission, and, frankly, I think it is best for the people of this country that I should have a full con-

In my remarks about ex-Senator Pope I desire to say that I have no objection personally to his appointment to this Board; but I do take the position, and I believe that any person who examines the statutes should take the position that there is no vacancy now existing in the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Let us go back to the Humphrey case. In 1933 Mr. Humphrey was removed from the Federal Trade Commission by the President of the United States because he "failed to see eye to eye" with the President; and in his place the President appointed George C. Mathews as a member of the Commission. The Senate confirmed that appointment on January 31, 1934. At the time of the confirmation there was considerable discussion of the matter. The Senate recognized that Mr. Humphrey was going to resort to an appeal to the courts, and he did so appeal to the courts. On February 14, 1934, while the case was still under advisement, Mr. Humphrey died. On May 27, 1935, some time after Mr. Humphrey died, the Supreme Court upheld Mr. Humphrey, found that the President had illegally removed him, and that, although Mr. Humphrey had passed on, his estate was entitled to receive his salary as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

This case is very similar to the Humphrey case. At the present time there is pending in the Federal District Court of Eastern Tennessee an appeal by Dr. Arthur Morgan contesting his removal in a similar manner. If it is decided in his favor, the United States Government will be liable for Dr. Morgan's salary and he will still be a member of the Board. I believe that any action by the Senate at this time in filling this post may prejudice this case which is now in issue before one of the courts of the country.

While it is true that we in the Senate have no power to approve the removal of a man by the President, action by this body in approving the appointment of a successor will be automatically taken as prejudicial to the one removed in the minds of the people of the country and, perhaps, in the minds of the courts. I believe that we could well consider, and that the fact should be a direct issue in this body, whether or not there is now a vacancy in the Tennessee Valley Authority, and whether or not Mr. Pope's nomination should be considered until it has been determined before the courts of the land whether or not a vacancy does exist. I believe we have every reason to take that position, and that the Humphrey case is nearly a parallel one.

In that case Mr. Humphrey's contention was not upheld until after he had died and passed on, and only his estate benefited. Dr. Morgan is alive and well today. He is a sincere, honest gentleman. He has placed his case before the courts of the country. He contends that no vacancy exists, and that the President has illegally removed him. For that reason I believe this body should refrain from taking action on the Pope appointment until action by the courts, either favorable or unfavorable to Dr. Morgan. I understand that the case has been argued in the eastern Tennessee court before Judge Taylor; that no decision has been reached; and that, in the event of a decision being reached, there may be an appeal, either by Dr. Morgan or by the Federal Government.

The issue is clear; we should have the facts first. The action of the courts should not be prejudiced. I trust this body will give consideration to these facts before taking action. Let us not be a party to an illegal appointment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] is discussing something which is not now before the Senate. The President sent to the Senate the nomination of ex-Senator Pope, and the Senate referred it to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. There is a dispute as to whether or not there is a vacancy on the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority. I assume that both sides, or at least some on each side, are acting in perfectly good faith. Whether or not there is a vacancy depends upon whether or not the President of the United States has authority to remove Dr. A. E. Morgan. If he had no power to remove, there is no vacancy. If he had the power to remove, there is a vacancy,

I am not now going to discuss the Humphrey case, because I think it is almost immaterial for us to consider it in connection with this matter. The Morgan case is in the courts, and properly there. Dr. A. E. Morgan, believing that the President had no authority to remove him, has commenced an action for his salary. The case has been heard by the district court in Tennessee. The judge has it under advisement. No matter which side wins the case, without any doubt whatever it will go on to the Supreme Court of the United States. So we may confidently say that the question will not be determined by the Court for some time, it may be not for a year or two; and if, under the circumstances I am about to relate to the Senate, we should refrain from confirming the nomination on the ground that there is no vacancy, we would strike almost a deathblow at the T. V. A.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator contend, then, that the President should have the right to make an appointment to a board when it is not known whether or not a vacancy exists?

Mr. NORRIS. Whether or not the President has a right to make this appointment will be determined by the court, just as it was determined in the Humphrey case. The Senator from New Hampshire is objecting to confirmation now because he says our action might have some influence on the court. In the Humphrey case the President removed Humphrey, and the Senate confirmed an appointee to take his place, and after all that was done the Supreme Court passed on the question. In that case nobody contended that the action of confirmation had any influence on the court, and there will not be any such influence in this case. To say that the action of the Senate in confirming the nomination of Mr. Pope would influence the court is to say that the court would be influenced entirely outside of the case before it.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I yield.

Mr BRIDGES. Am I to understand the Senator to imply, then, that the Humphrey case has no bearing whatever on

Mr. NORRIS. I do not believe the Humphrey case will settle this case.

Mr. BRIDGES. But has it no bearing? Mr. NORRIS. I do not think it has. The question on which the court is going to pass is a legal one, and it is now in the hands of the court.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I yield again.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is it or not true that when the legislation creating the Tennessee Valley Authority was first proposed, the distinguished Senator from Nebraska used his influence to prevent powers of removal being vested in the President, and very much favored the clause I have read, limiting the power of removal to the Congress of the United States?

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator has asked two questions in one. As to the first question, I will say no, emphatically no; I did not. As to the second question, I will say that I did. I think I am the author of that language. I wanted to place in the hands of Congress the definite power of removal if they desired to exercise it. That has not anything to do with this case, either, as I look at it. So far as the President's power of removal is concerned, the action of the Senate is not going to affect it one iota either way. It did not do so in the Humphrey case. It would be insulting to the Court to say, "In the settlement of this legal question you are going to be influenced by the action of the Senate in confirming or not confirming."

Mr. President. I concede that any Senator has a right to vote against the confirmation of any nominee for any reason which satisfies him, and if he desires to do so he may vote against confirmation in this case for the reason that has been discussed—that in his judgment the President did not have the power of removal.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I yield again.

Mr. BRIDGES. Under what section of the act does the Senator from Nebraska contend that the President had the legal power to remove?

Mr. NORRIS. I am not now going to argue that question. It has not anything to do with the question before the Senate: and before I sit down I am going to see whether the Senator from New Hampshire is acting in good faith in trying to present here a question of that kind.

I shall contend-I do contend-that the President did have the right to remove Dr. A. E. Morgan; but, again, that is a question of law. I may be wrong, and the court may decide the other way. I concede that the Senator or anyone else has an undoubted right to take either side of the question as he believes the legal question involved controls or does not control. But, as I see the matter, that has nothing to do with the question before us.

Former Senator Pope's name was sent to the Senate last Thursday. On that day it was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The Senator from Oregon asked the chairman of the committee to call the committee together for the next day to pass on the nomination. For some reason the chairman did not see fit to call the meeting. I asked him to call a meeting for Saturday. Again he did not call it. I supposed the committee would meet today, but it was not called. That is the situation in which the nomination now stands

Now I desire to tell the Senate why, in my judgment, it is necessary to confirm this appointment immediately, if we want to be fair to a great institution, if we do not want to prevent it from doing anything that requires Board action, and, for the time being at least, kill it. If we want to let it proceed in an orderly way under the law, we must, as I shall show in a moment, confirm someone for the vacancy, or the alleged vacancy, perhaps I had better say, to satisfy the question that is now raised.

Mr. DAVIS. Is the nomination of former Senator Pope now pending before the committee?

Mr. NORRIS. I take it that it is. It was sent to the committee last Thursday. The committee has not had a meeting, and has not taken any action on the nomination.

The T. V. A. Board consists of three members. When the President removed A. E. Morgan two were left on the Board. One of them was Mr. Lilienthal, a member of the Board, who I think every one will agree is one of the most competent of men for a position on that Board. He has been a member of the Board from the beginning, through all the litigation and trials and tribulations and during the fighting that has occurred. He was charged with being dishonest, with malfeasance in office, by the Chairman of the Board, A. E. Morgan, who spread all over the country the charge that two members of the Board, men who were handling millions of dollars and employing thousands of men, carrying on a governmental operation of great magnitude, were dishonest public officials. That charge went all over the country.

When the President sought to have Dr. A. E. Morgan give him the evidence on which he made that charge, Dr. Morgan refused to do anything about it. One can have his own idea as to whether he had a right to take that attitude. Personally, I think it was an insult to the President of the United States on the face of it. Dr. Morgan did not give anything in the way of evidence. He did not modify any charge he had made until the congressional committee was appointed, and before that committee he practically apologized.

All this time Mr. Lilienthal had been suffering under the public charge, printed all over the United States, that he was a dishonest public official, was guilty of cheating the Government, was guilty of malfeasance in office. The investigation which proceeded disclosed that Mr. Lilienthal and the other Morgan, H. A. Morgan, were entitled to a clean bill of health. Not a single dishonest act has been proven against them. It will be conceded by men who are honest, and who consider the evidence, that there has not been any evidence of corruption on the part of Mr. Lilienthal or H. A. Morgan. They have not robbed the Government of a penny, they have accounted for every dollar that came into their hands; they have been scrupulously honest. But all the time while these charges were going over the country, while in the examination Lilienthal and H. A. Morgan were subjected to police court treatment on the part of some members of the committee, they had to bear the brunt of this fight.

In addition to that, the T. V. A. had to have a large number of its officials here, and many in Tennessee and in other places, following the investigation. They were called on by members of the committee to produce all kinds of evidence; and properly so. I am not complaining of that; but it was necessary to keep a large number of men available to comply with the requests of the committee members.

It became perfectly apparent that the charges against this man Lilienthal were untrue, but he is a man with a family. with children, who thinks a great deal of his reputation, as we all do of ours, and he does not want it besmirched by false insinuations or false charges. As a result of the charges he practically collapsed; the burden upon his shoulders was too great; he became almost a nervous wreck. His health was seriously affected. He contracted a fever incident to a malady which is not understood by the medical profession. He was taken to a hospital, but no good resulted from the hospital treatment, because the medical profession does not understand the disease. He suffers from a fever for a few days, then apparently recovers for a few days or a week, and then the fever recurs.

The T. V. A. Board could not act without Mr. Lilienthal; there was not a quorum. Dr. H. A. Morgan, overburdened with the increased labors that fell upon his shoulders, was himself practically sick. He had to take the problems of the Board to a man in the hospital, on a sick bed, and when he could reach him outside, when Mr. Lilienthal would have a day or two of relief, he found him weakened physically by the fever; he found his nerves shattered by the terrible ordeal through which he had gone, making him unfit to transact business.

I remember that Dr. H. A. Morgan came to my office one night, and said he had been taking up some things with Lilienthal, when Lilienthal was up and the fever had subsided, but he said Lilienthal went to pieces, and Dr. Morgan stated to me, "I am afraid to carry on. I am afraid I will be guilty of killing this man if I persist in taking these things to him even at those moments when the fever is not wracking his body."

Mr. Lilienthal must be taken away; he must be relieved of all responsibility, practically, for 2 months and perhaps longer. In what position will that leave this great Tennessee Valley Authority organization, which is doing Government work, handling millions of dollars and employing thousands upon thousands of men? In what position will Mr. Lilienthal be left? If this situation continues, I am afraid it will mean his life.

These facts were presented to the President, and he appointed ex-Senator Pope in the place of Dr. A. E. Morgan. Every Member of the Senate knows Senator Pope personally. No charge has been made against him. His ability and his honesty are unquestioned. I assumed, under those circumstances, that his nomination would be confirmed unanimously and without any delay, but we have been unable even to get the nomination brought before the committee to which it was referred.

Now comes the Senator from New Hampshire, who has often come in the past, to show his hatred, his malice, I will say, against the T. V. A., and he would like to cripple it now by preventing the appointment of a man to the vacant place on the Board so that they could proceed in the ordinary way to transact their business. Does the Senate want to kill the T. V. A.? If it does, all it has to do is to refuse to confirm the appointment of anyone to fill the position on the Board.

Under those circumstances I went to the leader on the Republican side and explained the conditions. He agreed with me that we ought to act at once. I thought that possibly when the nomination came in, unanimous consent could be obtained so that it could be confirmed without reference to a committee, but, after talking with the leader on the Republican side, I agreed with him, when he told me what he knew about it, that the better way would be to let the nomination go to the committee. He said, "We will have a committee meeting at once, have the nomination reported to the Senate, and then if Senators want to oppose on any ground they see fit to suggest, that will be all right; debate will not be limited."

That is the situation in which the nomination is at this time, but before the committee acts, even before the committee meets, comes the voice of the Senator from New Hampshire saying, "There is not any vacancy."

Mr. President, in connection with the Humphrey case, the same argument could have been made as is now being made by the Senator from New Hampshire. The same thing could have been said in connection with the Oregon post-office case, the case in which the Supreme Court held that the President had the right summarily to remove a postmaster. In those cases it could have been said that the proposed action of the Senate might have the effect of influencing the Court. The Senate's action in the Humphrey case did not influence the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held in that case that the President had no right to remove Mr. Humphrey.

I have no quarrel with the Court; I am not finding fault with it; I am trying to uphold the dignity and the honor of the Supreme Court of the United States. The Supreme Court is made up of just men. They are going to decide on the record and say whether they will follow the Senate. There is no danger of the Court doing otherwise. The excuse would not be a good one even if there were such danger.

Here we have a great arm of the Government practically paralyzed on account of sickness of one of its directors, and some action ought to be taken. The Senate should confirm the appointment of a director to fill the vacant place on the Board.

Mr. President, I had not intended to discuss this question at this time. I should not have said a word had not the Senator from New Hampshire made the assertion he did in connection with the matter. I really think that what I have said is out of place now, but I felt I ought to say as much as I have said, in view of the statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire.

REFERENCE OF NOMINATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that several nominations have been submitted, and the Chair suggests to the Senator from Kentucky that, as in executive session, those nominations be properly referred to committees.

Mr. BARKLEY. I make the request that the nominations be appropriately referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn. The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, January 10, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 9 (legislative day of January 5), 1939

DIRECTOR OF GRAZING

Richard H. Rutledge, of Utah, to be Director of Grazing, vice Farrington R. Carpenter, resigned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 9, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Thou who art power, truth, and knowledge over all the earth, so enrich us that we shall go on to virtue, to aspiration, and to the utmost endeavor. By faith, hope, and love enable us to hold fast to Thee. O Thou who dost robe Thyself with fadeless light as with a garment, throb through the fevered veins of our times. With the uplifted gaze, with the eyes of the spirit, may we catch a glimpse of the Eternal; let it be the answer to our waiting, doubting hearts. Impress us that our right to be in this Chamber is our absolute fidelity to common duty; herein lie honor and distinction. To this end, our Father of mercy, may we lift up a standard for the people—a standard of brotherhood of man, of civic and religious liberty, of the glory of the excellency of the kingdom of God on earth. In the holy name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, January 5, 1939, was read and approved.

THE FISCAL SITUATION

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, at this time I want to wish you all a very pleasant 1939. [Applause.]

To the new Members who are assembled here for the second week in the Congress of the United States, we give you a hearty welcome.

It is certainly a pleasure for me to come before the House today for the first time during the Seventy-sixth Congress, and to try in some way to help solve some of the problems we have confronting us during this session of the Congress. We have a grave responsibility.

I was very much interested in listening to the President's report on the state of the Nation on January 4. Almost the first paragraph that was discussed in that address was the fact that we must prepare for war.

When a nation starts preparations for war on a large scale it generally gets into war. We, as Members of Congress, must be very, very careful that we do not permit the President of the United States to get us into that position, because I firmly believe that if it would require a war in order for him to cover up some of the misdoings of his administration, we will go to war. I am against it in every way I can possibly be. A sacred trust is imposed upon the Members of Congress to see to it that no one, no committee, or no bureaucrat should try in any way to get us into a position where we must fight the battles of some foreign country. It seems to me that if we as a nation would look after and take care of our own people, we have a job to do that should be uppermost in the minds of all the Members of Congress. A great responsibility for you and me. We must have Members who think; not rubber-stamp Congressmen.

Then, I was very much interested in listening to the President's address on the Budget for 1940. That is a question that ought to be very near and dear to the hearts of all the Members of Congress, and more so especially to the people back home who pay the taxes, to the wage earners, to the man who wants a job; to all of us Americans who believe in happiness, who believe in our country, who believe in our Constitution, and who believe in our form of government.

I cannot help my thoughts turning to the promises made by the Democratic Party now in power in the 1932 platform. Let me read from it:

We advocate an immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating extravagances to accomplish the saving of not less than 25 percent in the cost of the Federal Government.

This quotation is from the Democratic platform of 1932, to which Mr. Roosevelt subscribed 100 percent. We find Mr. Roosevelt in 1934 standing here speaking to you of a balanced Budget. In 1935 he came to the Congress and reiterated the statement that we would have a balanced Budget in 1936. In 1937 he at first talked about a balanced Budget but then decided that he would not balance it, so he asked for several billions of dollars to carry on. He was so far off balance in 1937 that he lost his balance. He has been out of balance ever since he has assumed public office. Last year he did not talk about a balanced Budget, because he knew he could not do it; he knew it was beyond his ability, beyond his desire to meet the situation. Now he says we will get a balanced Budget only when we get a national income of $80,000,000,000,000.

Let me call your attention to one further statement of Mr. Roosevelt about squandering money and spending. In speaking of the Hoover administration he said that the Hoover spending was at the most reckless and extravagant pace he had been able to discover in the statistical records of any peacetime government anywhere at any time. Those were Mr. Roosevelt's words on October 19, 1932.

In his acceptance speech on July 2, 1932, he stated:

I propose to you, my friends, that the Government be made solvent and that the example be set by the President of the United States.

When he made that statement, it was something that the American people looked forward to, it was something that they really expected, because of the promises made in the Democratic platform, and because the people of this country thought he would carry it out. Has he done it? No, never. He, I think, has forgotten his promises entirely.

I want to make clear and plain once and for all that so far as the President of the United States is concerned I hold no animosity or ill will toward him as an individual, but I certainly do object to the things that he has been doing after the promises he made to the American people that he would do otherwise. It is not fair, it is not just, nor is it honest. You men know that if a man tells you he is going to do a certain thing you expect him to be as good as his word, especially after he has made the promise three, four, five, or six times. When he still fails you just lose faith in him, and that is the position I have reached so far as thinking that Mr. Roosevelt will ever be able to handle the finances of this country to the advantage and to the safety of the American people.

I say to you that a man who has never been able to control his own finances, or handle any business of his own; a man who has never met a pay roll in industry, a man who has never given employment to individuals, or been able to handle men is unable to handle the financial situation of this Government, and the burden of operating this Government is going to devolve on this Congress. What has happened in the past 3 or 4 years? Government finances have been getting worse all the time. Every Member of Congress realizes that last year we were promised a balanced Budget by the President but that balance was exceeded by a billion and a half. We are going from bad to worse.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I will in a few moments.

Let me read to you a statement contained in the message of the President read to you last Thursday by the Clerk of the House. The President said that he expected expenditures for this year which will end on June 30, to be $9,492,-000,000 and our receipts to be $5,520,000,000, or that we would be in the red $3,972,000,000. Think of that, men! Three billion nine hundred and seventy-two million dollars in the red!

What is our condition so far as it is revealed by the Treasury statement of January 3? Let us see how fast we are arriving at the condition of unbalance the President indicated, and remember also in this connection that last year his estimate of the national deficit was increased in each of his three different messages. He is not able to fathom the situation; it is beyond his ability. The Treasury statement of January 3 discloses that since July 1, 1938, he has expended $1,678,000,000 more than he has taken in. This shows that the deficit will be about $4,000,000,000 by the 30th of June next. A horrible situation. Our national debt will be about forty-two billion by the end of this year.

I ask you Members now that old familiar question: Where are you going to get the money? That is the question you will have to consider. If you do not, you are going to see one of the greatest financial wrecks that has happened in the history of the world. America broke, America ruined, America sunk. The country is in such condition that it cannot stand it. This cannot continue indefinitely. It must stop, and stop very shortly.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. Yes; I yield to my colleague from North Carolina, one of the best parliamentarians that ever sat in the House of Representatives.

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania understands, of course, that Congress appropriates this money through appropriation bills, and that at the last session we had 10 large appropriation bills. I find that the gentleman from Pennsylvania voted for 8 of these 10 bills, or at least made no protest against 8 of them.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from North Carolina cannot show me where I voted for those particular bills, nor where I advocated the expenditure of the funds which have been spent during the last 4 or 5 years.

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman voted against only two appropriation bills.

Mr. RICH. The Record will not disclose that fact nor will the committee hearings disclose approval on my part of such enormous expenditures. If the gentleman finds in the Record facts to substantiate his statements, let him put them in the Record, but not on my time.

Mr. WARREN. I shall do it.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. At this juncture I think the RECORD should show that the gentleman from Pennsylvania has been one of the most active opponents of all this needless, wasteful spending.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I cannot yield any further,

Mr. Speaker, may I call the attention of the House to the fact that we are getting ready for appropriations for 1940. The President, continuing in his Budget message, stated that he wants to spend $8,995,000,000. He stated further that our receipts for next year will only be $5,669,000,000. In other words, next year he figures that he wants to spend $3,326,-000,000 more than we will receive. Mr. Speaker, if the Members of Congress permit any such spending as that every one of them ought to be driven out of the House of Representatives for voting for such ruthless expenditures

We have to stop the spending of that gentleman in the White House, because, as I said before, he does not know any better. The responsibility is yours. Stop it before it is too late

Mr. HOUSTON. Will the gentleman yield for a friendly

Mr. RICH. I decline to yield.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Roosevelt is going to ask the Ways and Means Committee to report a bill which would authorize increasing our national debt from a maximum of $45,000,-000,000 to $80,000,000,000. If such a bill as that is passed by the Members of this Congress something ought to happen to each one of them in the next election. He should not be sent back here. You should not tolerate any such thing as that. Tell him now such a bill shall not pass as long as he is in the White House.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. How do you expect the present administration to get out of the habit of spending when they feed on $100-a-plate dinners, all in violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, shaking down the Government employees?

Mr. RICH. I may say to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Schafer]; there will be someone else speak about that $100-a-plate dinner. It is a shame when so many poor people want soup or a sandwich or coffee.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. For a question. Make it snappy.
Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. The gentleman objects to an unbalanced Budget. Would he sooner have the Budget balanced or see ten or fifteen million people starve?

Mr. RICH. I will answer that question.

Mr. KNUTSON. Why not put them to work?

Mr. RICH. If we will start to economize we will instill some confidence in the business people back home-a million of them who want to go ahead and do things. There is at the present time frozen capital and frozen industry. They are willing to go ahead just as soon as there is a ray of hope from this administration. They will put 500 to work in industry or agriculture while we put 1 on the Government pay roll.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to continue for an additional 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, if we restore confidence in the businessmen of the Nation, we will do more to put men to work than anything else we can do. They will be put to work in industry and will be taken off the pay rolls of the Government, the P. W. A., and these other governmental agencies that have been set up by this administration. You promised this administration would not put the Government in business, but you have violated that promise more than all the administrations in our history put together.

Mr. Speaker, we should take the Government out of business. If the Members have any intelligence at all, they ought to realize that when the businessmen of this country want to quit, the only thing to do is restore confidence, and that is the greatest aid you can give toward putting these 12,000,000 men back to work. There is not anything in this country that will do more good, and we should realize the situation that confronts this Nation so far as industry and frozen capital are concerned. Only confidence in the Government will do it; men working together will do the trick.

We should have a happy, contented people in this country, and that is the greatest problem of the age. Men should be entitled to go to their work in the morning and work 8 hours a day in order to earn money so that they may enjoy the pleasures and happiness that go with honest labor.

Mr. Speaker, I have come to the point where I am tired of seeing men on W. P. A. work leaning on shovels. They are only on jobs that have been created for the purpose of permitting these men to draw their pay. It is not right. It is not honest. It is not just for this Congress to permit that to go on any longer. Of course, we want to take care of the needy, but we must do it in a sensible, businesslike way. We must put relief back in the States and the local communities. where it will be handled to a greater satisfaction than any Congress or bureaucrat can administer it here in Washington.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am very much interested in what the gentleman is saying. I also have a lot of faith in him. Is it possible, living in the machine age that we are living in. for private industry to absorb the unemployed that exists in this country today?

Mr. RICH. That is a mighty fine question. May I say if we are not going to be able to find employment in industry in the machine age, then we ought to regulate mass production in industry until we can give the men actual employment. We can do that by the regulation of improvements until we absorb these unemployed people and put them back to work. But under present conditions we are paying people in various districts $125 a month for not working. We are unable to get men to work, and the unemployed are unable to work because they can get more on relief. When people who are on relief cannot stop and take a day's work because they may not be able to get back on relief we are encouraging shiftlessness. We are not encouraging thrift thereby. We are not encouraging anyone to do those things which will make them better people, happier and more contented.

We need jobs for all. It will require thoughtful men and considerate, intelligent Members of Congress to solve the problem. Will we act as honest, conscientious Americans? I hope so. Let us lay politics aside, use our God-given faculties, our intelligence, and we will find work for the unemployed, we will stop class hatred, we will restore confidence, we will preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution and our American liberty and independence.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and following special orders already entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes on the responsibility of the Republican Party in this Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes at this juncture.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may state to the gentleman from Minnesota that the House has already agreed to permit the gentleman from California [Mr. Voornis] to address the House for 15 minutes at this time.

Mr. KNUTSON. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to address the House for 10 or 15 minutes at the conclusion of the special orders already made.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman please indicate how much time is desired?

Mr. KNUTSON. Twenty minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the address of the gentleman from California he may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include therein the President's Jackson Day speech, the guest list for that $100-a-plate dinner, and certain extracts from the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

The SPEAKER. The Chair calls the attention of the gentleman to the fact that permission has already been given to place in the RECORD the address of the President.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my request as far as the address of the President is concerned, but I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include therein the guest list for the Jackson Day $100-a-plate dinner, together with certain extracts from the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

Mr. KNUTSON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from Wisconsin if that was the dinner where the guests ate off gold plates?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. That was a shake-down dinner in violation of the Corrupt Practices Act, which, I may say, is intended to prevent political contributions by Government employees.

Mr. KNUTSON. We all know that.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It is on a par with the $250 shake-down books.

Mr. SCHULTE. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, there is enough comedy in the Congressional Record already, and for that reason I object to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is loath to put that request. A special order has already been made giving the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis] permission to address the House at this time, so, except with the permission of the gentleman from California, the Chair will not submit at this time the request of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after that special order and after the gentleman from Minnesota has addressed the House I may be permitted to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of any special orders already made he may be permitted to address the House for 2 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis] is recognized for 15 minutes.

THE IMMEDIATE TASK OF DEFENDING DEMOCRACY

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that I was one of those who attended the Jackson Day dinner, and that though it was plenty hard to find the money, I paid for my ticket freely because I believe in the Democratic Party, because I wanted to hear the President's speech, and because I vastly prefer to see our party raise its money by contributions of that kind rather than in the ways to which the opposition party sometimes resorts. [Applause.] We do not have access to some of the sources of revenue they do.

THE REAL DIVISION

The difference between us in this House, as elsewhere among people in the world, is basically not so much a difference in party name or affiliation, although it follows fairly well those lines. On the one hand, we find those people who see in the problems of life and government the task of protecting and preserving as best we can the simple, fundamental rights of humanity generally, such as the fundamental right to life, freedom, work, and opportunity. [Applause.]

On the other hand we find those who, with however good intentions or sincerity—and I question neither—will see in the problem of life and government the task primarily of protecting and preserving special rights and particular privileges belonging to small groups of people but utterly beyond the reach of the rank and file of men.

To the first group of these people must belong those who would support the present administration of President Roosevelt, because it is from that point of view that the major policies of his administration have taken birth.

FOR DEMOCRACY-NO PROVISOS

The gentleman from Pennsylvania mentioned certain things which had been set forth by the President in prior speeches and in other ways. One evident intention of any earnest man in public office is to see the Budget of the Nation balanced. The evident intention of every earnest person in public office is to see no unnecessary Government expenditure made. However, there are certain other things that have been said by the President and certain other things which I say today on my own account that are still more fundamental. It is something basic for him to say or for me to say that we are for keeping democracy in America against any sort of difficulty or danger which may threaten it. When I say that I mean I am against any sort of dictatorship of whatever type. I mean I am for the protection forever of religious and personal liberty. I mean I am for equality of opportunity; and I mean I am for the preservation of as large an amount of freedom and economic enterprise as can possibly be preserved consistent with the accomplishment of the other three or more fundamental purposes which I have mentioned in this sentence.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. In just a moment, I shall be pleased to yield.

I am, in short, for the protection of the soul of the real America, a soul that was born and nurtured in a day when every man was his own economic master, because there was land enough for all. And I am for keeping our freedom, democracy, and equality, no matter what we have to do to accomplish it. I am not for freedom, democracy, and equality with any proviso whatsoever. I am not for these things provided I do not have to pay taxes to preserve them; I am not for them provided my defense of them does not involve any interference with financial or industrial monopoly; I am not just for them provided the Government can be kept out of the field of public-works employment. I am for a real American democracy without any proviso whatsoever, and I feel sure I know what we have to do to keep it. [Applause.]

It is already clear to me that during this session of Congress there is going to be considerable oratory, and that from the Republican side there is going to come a good deal of gleeful, optimistic oratory, and that there will be speeches made pointing out the fallacies of the New Deal and other progressive measures.

This, of course, is as it should be. I may say, however, that I surmise that in addition to that there will be speeches made, addressed to the Democratic side, in which sympathy will be expressed for some of us on the Democratic side, and I do not quite understand that. After all, there was a smaller loss suffered by the Democratic membership in the last election than has been true in any midterm election in the second term of a President for over 100 years. There is still a Democratic majority of nearly 100 Members; and so far as I am concerned, I want to assure everyone that there is not any use to feel sorry for me, for I believe the greatest thing in the world is to give one's self wholeheartedly to a cause in which he believes.

WHAT IS RIGHT REMAINS RIGHT

The winds of political fortune blow candidates in and out of office, but never do they blow hard enough to make things that once were right become wrong. And so the things for which some of us fought here in the last session of Congress are things for which we intend to go right on fighting-not because we believe they are necessarily politically expedient, not because they are sure to get us reelected but just because we believe they are right and just and fair and because we are convinced they constitute the only available means of forever protecting and defending the freedom and democracy of our country.

WHAT PROGRAM IS OFFERED?

Now, I want to ask a question. I want to ask what the opposition offers by way of a program to replace the one now in effect. What would they do if by some peculiar turn of circumstances it were no longer possible in 1940 for them to enjoy the intellectual luxury of being responsible for nothing that is done and being able to criticize practically

One of two answers is usually given to such a question. One is that they would "free business" by reducing taxes of practically every sort and repealing certain regulatory laws, and the other answer is that they believe the New Deal laws are good and should be kept, but that they should be administered by Republicans.

In the case of the second answer I must say, as a Democrat and supporter of the New Deal, that we appreciate the compliment and that I hardly think the American people will be inspired by an appeal to them to turn out the Democrats who passed the laws so the Republicans, most of whom voted against them, can have a chance to obtain political power and preferment on the basis of the very program they opposed.

The first answer-the "free business" or laissez-faire answer-deserves more consideration, because it involves a whole philosophy of government and the social order to which attention should be given whether one agrees with it or not.

I may say at this point that if I could be persuaded that I am all wrong in my economic views and that laissez-faire would work and that it was the answer to all our problems, I feel sure I would be man enough to say I had been wrong and to advocate the thing which was best for my country. I am not so persuaded, and I am not so persuaded because I have read the record of the economic history of the country for the last 100 years.

LAISSEZ-FAIRE JUST WILL NOT WORK

When it is proposed that we should completely turn the matter back to the free exercise of private finance and industry in America, I would point out to you that in all of the years of the 1920's that policy was followed clear through the whole time, and the result was the collapse of 1929; and I would point out to you further that in 1937, when we came here to consider the business of this Government the very same arguments were made as are being made now about the appropriation to provide work for the unemployed; and we were told that if we would drastically reduce those appropriations business would reabsorb and take back the people that were laid off by W. P. A. It was argued then, as it is being argued now, that it would be good for business to leave it more nearly alone and reduce public employment of the unemployed. It was said that business was ready to "go it alone" and make up for the slack in employment caused by the W. P. A. lay-offs.

DO NOT REPEAT MISTAKE OF 1937

The plain fact is that that did not happen, and I myself spoke here and warned the House that if that action were taken, and the appropriation cut, the result would be that we would be preparing for another depression in business, and the result has been as I stated at that time. I have advocated for a long time a straight-out program of public works based on work rather than on relief, and where the certifying agency will be the employment service and not a relief agency. But I appealed in 1937, and I appeal again today, that the way to cure anything you have to criticize is not by throwing a million people out on the streets, to go on direct relief, but it is to work on a constructive legislative program for public-works employment and see if Congress cannot work out a better way to get at this problem. For my part I rejoice in the clarity and wisdom of the President's message in which he asks us to appropriate $875,000,000 to protect people from being made unemployed in larger numbers, and thus protect the increase in business, and I appeal to you not to cut the ground from under this improvement in business now taking place by throwing these people out on the streets.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman is speaking in favor of the $875,000,000 appropriation.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I think that is by no means too much.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The W. P. A. figures show around 3,000,000 people employed. Mr. John L. Lewis, who is high in the gentleman's administration, a few months ago claimed there were 12,500,000 people out of work.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. That is probably right. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman propose to favor those people in the numbers between 3,000,000 and 12.500.000?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The W. P. A. has never employed all of the unemployed. That is one of the difficulties of the program, and it is one of the difficulties because of the fact that the Congress has never been ready to appropriate enough funds to meet the real needs. It is true that we are hopeful that by the employment of even a portion of these people we will be able to put into circulation enough additional purchasing power to stimulate business to the point where it will absorb others on account of the expansion of consumer demand. I do not think that is the ultimate answer. I think there are other things that have to be done before we will answer this economic problem of America. and I am for going to work on them. But I say in the meantime this Congress has no right to take out on the unemployed people its political prejudices or the feelings that it may have toward individuals in the one party or another.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman believe that the relief that is being administered now is being administered in a wise, just, and judicial manner?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I wonder if anybody could undertake the task of employing the people industry did not want to hire, employ between two and three million people over a 3-year period, sometimes have to fire 800,000 of them at a time when Congress instructed that it be done, and rehire large numbers quickly at other times-under those circumstances I doubt that anybody could do a much better job than has been done. I know that there have been difficulties, and my own observation is that most of the political difficulty was due to local pressure. That is what I believe and what I have seen, and I am sincere about the matter.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. I would like to finish my address, though I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I think I followed the gentleman correctly in his argument, and may I submit this question: The gentleman takes the position that sometimes on this side, the Republican, it has been said that if appropriations were discontinued business would absorb the unemployed.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. So I understood. If I was mistaken, I am sorry.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is the gentleman acquainted with the fact that members of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System within the last few days have stated emphatically in public addresses that these appropriations and this made-work program is not the answer to unemployment and the revival of business. Is the gentleman familiar with

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am not familiar with the fact. I understood that Mr. Eccles sometime ago-

Mr. CRAWFORD. I call the attention of the gentleman to the statement of Chairman Eccles on December 1 at New York and of Chester Davis at New Orleans December 14 and at Memphis December 15, and I suggest that that be looked into, because we will have more to say about it.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am familiar with the speech that the gentleman has in mind. I have not said that I believed that the ultimate answer to America's program has been made in a program of public work for the unemployed, but I do say that as a matter of fundamental economic justice in this hour, and because more fundamental measures would be more bitterly opposed, it is the best program that we have.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Duncan). The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 5 minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in 1930 when the Republican Party was in power and Mr. Hoover was President of the United States, 20,000,000 men and women were unemployed, and the sublime principle that the Republican Party promulgated for the treatment of the 20,000,000 unemployed, through President Herbert Hoover, was to sell apples, through getting free licenses in various cities of the country, and have those that are employed divide their employment with those unemployed.

I am fully convinced that the W. P. A. is doing fine, constructive work in comparison to what the Republicans had to offer in 1930.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. I refuse to yield further.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I refuse to yield further. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The Republican Party was not in power at that time.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. As I recall it, my colleague the gentleman from New York, Dr. Sirovich, is correct in his statement that the Republican Party was in power in 1930. When the vote was canvassed immediately after the 1930 elections, both House and Senate were Republican. The House, however, was Republican by only a few votes. Had President Hoover called a special session immediately after the 1930 elections to consider the problem of unemployment, the House would have been under the control of the Republicans. However, during the 12 months that elapsed between the election in the fall of 1930 and the organization of the House in December 1931, a number of Republican Members passed away. The people of the Nation, apparently increasingly dissatisfied with the laissez-faire policy of the Republican administration, elected Democrats in, I believe, every case to take their places, thus giving Democratic control in the House.

MORE PROGRESS, NOT LESS, REQUIRED

I am thoroughly convinced that to return to the policies and methods pursued during the 1920's is just as certain to lead to another 1929 crash as the sun is to rise tomorrow. I am equally certain that an honest appraisal of the present situation will lead any careful student to two conclusions: The first is that the solution to our economic problem of poverty and insecurity in a world of possible plenty and brotherhood lies ahead in more progressive legislation than we have yet had, rather than in less progressive legislation.

The solution lies in better protection of farm prices, a better system of retirement pensions for the aged such as the General Welfare Act would give, a more scientific control of money and credit, a more effective program of public works. and a more direct effort to bring about full production. The solution does not lie in poorer protection for the farmer, nor in a worse system of old-age pensions, nor in a less effective control of money and credit, nor in no effort at all to bring about full production. Nor does the solution lie in no publicworks program at all and throwing our unemployed people back on to some sort of miserable, degrading, debilitating charity program.

In short, I believe, and I think some of the campaign promises of successful Republican candidates bear this out, that the protection of our American democracy lies in more New Deal, not in less. I agree, too, it lies in improvement of existing law, in congressional action to take advantage to the full of the experience that has been had with some new legislative enactments that have been passed in recent years.

So the second conclusion to which I believe any honest appraisal of the present situation must lead is that, since in any democracy we cannot move forward more rapidly than the people want us to go, therefore we find ourselves obliged to depend at the moment, not on completely satisfying solutions, but on measures which will best preserve the structures, institutions, and values of American life while we are in process of working out those solutions.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

In this connection, let us consider the President's great message and its implications. I have heard that message criticized because it "did not go to the root of things," because it "dealt in generalities," because it did not propose a balanced Budget. But what else did you want beyond a statement as to how, in this year and in this period, America can keep the flag of democracy aloft? That is what he gave you in one of the greatest state papers that this Nation has ever heard.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I would rather not, please. I only have a few moments.

In this Congress already we have heard about appropriations for W. P. A. I have already pointed out what I said in 1937 and what happened in 1937 and 1938. I urge that full appropriation be made of at least the amount the President asked for, and then that we go to work on a constructive bill to straighten out this public-works program if you believe it can be improved.

WHAT THE UNBALANCED BUDGET REALLY MEANS

Now, about the Budget. I wonder whether the opposition party really wants the Budget balanced. My own choice of a way to obtain the necessary expansion of money in circulation and industrial activity, which I know we must have in America-my own choice of a way to obtain that would be not by the issuance of bonds to increase the debt, but by having this Congress take back to itself the right to coin money and to regulate its value; by having Congress set up one monetary authority with adequate powers and under careful instructions from the Congress, and by directing this monetary authority to bring about such an expansion of active money or demand deposits in the Nation as will be scientifically calculated to correspond to our capacity to produce wealth. Such action as this might enable us to balance the Budget without killing business.

Again, we all know that business people all over the Nation would like to increase their production. We know many of them are afraid to do so for fear that production cannot be sold. And we know some of them cannot do so because they cannot obtain capital and credit for the purpose. We could provide a program of coordinated increase of production with adequate protection for all who engage in it. And thus by increase in real wealth and income our Budget would come into balance.

Unless you stand ready to take such action as this which I have suggested, you can obtain expansion at present in only one way. That way is by having your Government buy into circulation with its bonds an additional amount of bank credit. That means an addition to national debt and an unbalanced Budget. When you criticize this method you ask either for another collapse of business or else for sound monetary reform and definite action to bring about an industrial expansion.

GOVERNMENT INVESTMENT AND PROPER ACCOUNTING

Certainly we all regard it as proper for a corporation to segregate its current expenses from its capital outlay, but when the President suggests that Government follow the lead of business in this matter a loud outcry is raised against his proposal.

I cannot find a single sound argument against allowing the Government of our Nation to use the same accounting methods that our businesses themselves employ.

I call no names and fix no blame on either individuals, groups, or parties. I give to every man, who sincerely loves America for what she is and for what she may become, full credit for as much love of country as I possess, whether he agree with me or not.

NO SPECIAL PRIVILEGE ASKED FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES

And I ask no special privileges for the Government of my country. All I do ask is the same privileges for that Government, as it attempts to act in the public interest, as are claimed for private interests as they act for themselves. I ask that government have the same right to employ its unemployed citizens to promote public welfare as our manufacturers have to employ workers for private profit. I ask that government have at least the same right to use the credit of the Nation as the banks now enjoy of creating and lending it. And I ask that government be allowed to indicate its assets on its books, the same as is done by every private corporation.

Now, today, we are confronted not with a choice between one perfect solution or another. I presume not even the most cocksure member of the minority will contend that if he could rule out all our legislation, repeal all the New Deal laws and taxes, anything like all the unemployed people would go back to work. Everyone admits that our present order cannot at best reemploy more than perhaps a third of them without some sort of governmental action to supplement the best private business can do. And so, at this moment, while conditions are improving and on the mend, the immediate question is whether we will do again what we did in 1937 and throw out of work several hundred thousand now dependent utterly on a $55 monthly wage on W. P. A., or whether, while we are working out a better way, we will protect not only their right to a job but also the rising tide of better times by keeping these people at work. Let me urge the "defenders of business" not to strike at that very business through the basic customers it has.

FUTURE OF AMERICA-AND BASIC JUSTICE

Furthermore, the future of America may well depend upon our action, for let no one deceive himself. The ultimate defense of democracy-or perhaps I should say its foundation-is to be found in the security of the people in the opportunity to work and earn a living. Somehow or other that opportunity must be kept present. Idleness and a dole and dependence on local charity have caused the downfall of nations. Work for the unemployed or for anyone else has never done so.

Let no one deceive himself. For better or for worse, we are one nation and one people, bound together today as never before by ties of economic and social interdependence. Fourfifths of the people of this Nation can never move forward to a new prosperity if they neglect and try to abandon the other one-fifth. There is a divine justice about things, a form and purpose to the universe, which will forever bring retribution on such an attempt. We must move forward together, taking with us those now unemployed and in distress, or we shall never move forward at all, to that better day for which every true American hopes, and works, and tries to build.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Under special order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. KNUTSON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes] to make a unanimous-consent request.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered over radio station WJAG, Norfolk, Nebr., containing a eulogy on our colleague the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

THE FEDERAL DEFICIT

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I am taking the floor today for the purpose of expressing my regret at being unable to accept an invitation to attend a Jackson Day dinner held on Saturday evening out in Minnesota. Compared to the dinner that the Jacksonians held in Washington, it was rather an attractive affair, because it only cost $25 a plate. Payments had been arranged on very attractive terms. Under one plan one could pay as little as $10 down and so much a month for so many months. Under another plan, $15 cash and the balance over a convenient term of months, so you can see the deferred-payment plan has now been approved and adopted by the party in power to meet the needs of the times.

I appreciate very much that invitation, and I presume that had it not been for the fact we are enjoying an era of so-called New Deal prosperity, I might have been able to go out there and visit with old friends. I do not suppose that the menu that our folks out in Minnesota had was quite as elaborate as the one provided at the Mayflower Hotel the same evening, which must have been quite an affair.

I noticed in yesterday morning's Washington Herald an illustration depicting the Postmaster General as showing the gentleman sitting next to him a gold plate from which they fed. Shades of Thomas Jefferson! Think of it! So-called Democrats eating off gold plate. I am wondering whether some of the gold that was taken away from us several years ago-I say "from us"-not from me because I did not have any, but from those who had-I am wondering what percentage of that gold was melted down and transformed into plates on which those who believe in the simple life and in the teachings of Andrew Jackson might dine. I guess it was quite an affair down at the Mayflower.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. Not at this point. [Laughter.]

Mr. SABATH. For only a short inquiry?

Mr. KNUTSON. Not at this point.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield on the gold proposition?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota declines to yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. This is the $100 gold-plate menu:

Russian caviar. Canape of anchovy and Deviled egg Green turtle soup with sherry—

[Laughter.]

Hearts of celery

Pecans Queen and ripe olives Butter crust

Broiled rock bass, with grilled tomato and eggplant Graves Rosechatel, vintage of 1829—

No, I guess that must be 1929-

Filet mignon with fresh mushrooms, Bordelaise New peas

I did not know we have new peas on the market as yet [laughter] but there is little going on, on the market or otherwise, that the New Deal does not know about. Let us |

New brown potatoes-

This must have been a New Deal dinner. [Laughter.] New brown potatoes, St. Julien-

You are taking the church in now. [Laughter.]

No; I guess that must be something else, because it says 1933. Certainly they would not be eating potatoes of 1933 vintage.

Mixed fresh vegetable salad with cheese wafers. Nougat ice cream and pineapple granite. Chocolate leaves. Demitasse.

Mr. HOUSTON. No spinach?

Mr. KNUTSON. They should have had spinach, but they probably had extract of spinach upstairs. [Laughter.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield now after that great speech?

Mr. KNUTSON. I am delighted to yield to the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee.

Mr. SABATH. I wish to suggest that I am satisfied that if the gentleman had been present he would not have regretted paying the $100 to listen to the wonderful addresses of the President and the Speaker of the House. Those addresses in themselves were worth the price, regardless of the meal.

Mr. KNUTSON. Well, I would give $100 to hear the Speaker of the House. [Laughter.]

It seems that they had a seance down at the White House the other night when the President communed with the spirit of Andrew Jackson. He, however, is not the first President in recent years to have held seances with spirits in

Let us see. Here is something. Here is a part of that great speech to which the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee referred—and I am quoting the President of the United States:

Last night I was thinking about this gathering, about our Demo-cratic Party and what we ought to do to help it.

God knows, you need help!

I decided to go right to headquarters, so I put in a radio call for Gen. Andrew Jackson.
"Young fellow," he said to me, "I don't know what is on your

Well, I can tell you that it certainly is not the deficit. [Laughter.] Neither is it the national debt, nor the 10,000,-000 who are out of work, nor the idle factories, nor the farmers, who are selling their products at prices far below cost of

"General," said I, "you see, it is about the Democratic Party"-

Well, that is something to be worried about. I would not be a bit surprised if there were about 100,000,000 others who are worrying about the New Deal party and wondering where it is leading us to.

"I am very fond of it myself, but the Republicans are saying that it is rotting away like pollywogs' tails"

Let us see if there were pollywogs' tails on the menu. [Laughter.] No; I do not see them listed-

"and that some of our fellows are worried. Is there anything we ought to do?"

"Certainly," replied old General Jackson. "My eyes are getting old and I am some distance away, but from what I can see from here the only trouble with you fellows is that you have been feeding too well and you scare easily."

Well, I should say that a $100 dinner would have a sort of enervating effect on those who partook of it.

The President made some very interesting observations. You recall about a year ago when he was down in Georgia he referred to the Democrats of the deep South as "economic feudalists." Evidently he thinks they are slipping, because he now refers to them as "tweedledums," and he says they are no longer wanted in the New Deal party. Well, I know the southern Democrats. They are gentlemen who believe in constitutional government, who believe in living within our income, who believe that we should keep out of foreign affairs with which we have no concern, that we should not meddle in outside matters but should try and solve the great problems we have at home. I believe that these so-called "tweedledums" would feel more at home in the Republican Party than they do in the New Deal party, because today we are the party of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln [applause]; and we invite you "tweedledums" to take the President's advice and get out. You southerners are no longer wanted in the President's party. You have served your purpose and now he wants you to get out. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. I yield. Mr. HOFFMAN. Would it not be just as well if he got out and let them have their party?

Mr. KNUTSON. He long since got out of the Democratic Party. He has organized a party of his own known as the New Deal party. Where has the gentleman been for the last 5 years? [Laughter.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. May I answer?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I thought they still retained the name "Democratic Party." At least, up in my district the ballot contained a caption reading, "Democratic Party." I knew, of course, that certain candidates were not Democrats but were Communists, even though they were labeled as Demo-

Mr. KNUTSON. Well, I have seen plateware that was stamped "sterling," but that did not make it sterling. Calling the New Deal party the Democratic Party does not make it the Democratic Party. In fact, the Democratic Party and the New Deal party are about as much alike as a sow's ear and a silk purse.

Before I close I again want to extend to those great Americans who come from the deep South, to whom the President contemptuously refers as "tweedledums," an invitation to join the Republican Party and help us work out the great problems that confront us, to help us save this country and prevent it from becoming bankrupt and even worse. Gentlemen of the South, come into the Republican Party where you will be welcomed and where you will be appreciated. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise simply for the purpose of noting in the RECORD that on Saturday, January 6, Tom Mooney, a great and honest man, was liberated and vindicated by the granting to him of an unconditional pardon by the Governor of California. This establishes legally and for all time what we have always known, that Tom Mooney was innocent and framed. I take this occasion to congratulate the present and ex-Members of Congress, as well as the great army of men and women throughout the world, who have participated in this historic struggle to right this tremendous wrong.

I also take this opportunity to state that every true believer in justice and democracy rejoices over the liberation of Tom Mooney, even though it comes exactly 22 years too late. [Applause.]

HON. GEORGE P. DARROW

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, on January 5 I was appointed by the Speaker to administer the oath of office to my distinguished colleague, Hon. George P. Darrow, of Pennsylvania. On January 6, pursuant to House Resolution 14, I swore Mr. Darrow in as a Member of the House. The oath was administered in conformity with the rules of the House at Philadelphia, Pa.; and I offer the following privileged resolution and move its adoption.

I would also add, Mr. Darrow has requested me to report his condition is favorable and he hopes to be back in the House within the next week.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 44

Whereas George P. Darrow, a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania, from the seventh district thereof, has been unable from sickness to appear in person to be sworn as a Member of this House, but has sworn to and subscribed to the oath of office before House, but has sworn to and subscribed to the oath of office before the Honorable J. William Ditter, authorized by resolution of this House to administer the oath, and the said oath of office has been presented in his behalf to the House, and there being no contest or question as to his election: Therefore be it Resolved, That the said oath be accepted and received by the House as the oath of office of the said George P. Darrow as a Member of this House.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE HONORABLE REUBEN T. WOOD

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication:

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., January 6, 1939.

Hon. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,

Speaker, House of Representatives, United States Washington, D. C.

Sir: In accordance with your designation of me, pursuant to House Resolution 32, Seventy-sixth Congress, adopted by the House House Resolution 32, Seventy-sixth Congress, adopted by the House of Representatives, to administer the oath of office to Representative-elect Reusen T. Wood, of the Sixth District of Missouri, I have the honor to report that on the 6th day of January 1939, at the city of Springfield, State of Missouri, I administered the oath of office to Mr. Wood, form prescribed by section 1757 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, being the form of oath administered to Members of the House of Representatives, to which Mr. Wood subscribed.

I have the honor to be. Yours respectfully,

James F. Fulbright, Judge of the Court of Appeals, Springfield, Mo.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 45

Whereas Reuben T. Wood, a Representative from the State of Missouri, from the Sixth District thereof, has been unable because of sickness in his family to appear in person to be sworn as a Member of this House, but has sworn to and subscribed to the oath of office before the Honorable James F. Fulbright, judge of the court of appeals, at Springfield, Mo., authorized by resolution of this House to administer the oath, and the said oath of office has been presented in his behalf to the House, and there being no contest or question as to his election: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the said oath be accepted and received by the House as the oath of office of the said Reusen T. Wood as a Member of this House.

The resolution was agreed to.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I hope the Democratic Members will not object to the gentlemen on the Republican side speaking, because they are seeking to entertain the House in an effort to make a few speeches for home consumption. They should be given this opportunity.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand this is for educational purposes; is that not true?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. To keep the record straight. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, as a new Member of this House, I rise in order to keep the record straight, the facetious remarks of the distinguished New Dealer from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] to the contrary notwithstanding.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Sirovich], in a colloquy on the floor of the House a few minutes ago, accused the Republican Party of being in control of the Government in the year 1930 and being responsible for all of the political, economic, and other ills of the country.

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. I want to correct that statement, because I attributed my remarks to the President of the Republican Party, Herbert Hoover.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman said "Republican Party."

Mr. SIROVICH. I said it was Herbert Hoover who offered as a constructive treatment for the unemployed the privilege of selling apples and having those employed divide their wages with those who were unemployed.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Do not take up all of my

Mr. SIROVICH. The record has been corrected.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I have ears. I can hear. You know, when some of these new dealers are hit, they squeal. Let us speak about facts on the floor of the House.

Since the 1930 election the New Deal Democrats have been in control of the House of Representatives. Was John Gar-NER, the distinguished Speaker from Texas, a Republican?

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. No. After the 1930 election the Republican Party had a majority of one in the United States Senate, a mere paper majority, because five or six of the brethren elected as Republicans only wore the Republican coat and pants on election day. They were in the New Deal army after the election, and they are in the New Deal army now. You had a New Deal Governor in New York in 1930 who bankrupted the State of New York, which has more wealth and greater sources of taxation than any other State in the Union. Your Congressmen from New York, the politicians from the city and State of New York, were asking Uncle Sam for hand-outs in the year 1930, when Franklin D. Roosevelt, the present President of the United States was Governor.

We also had a New Deal Governor in my State, and we retired him at the last election. We are going to retire many more New Dealers in 1940. Perhaps our New Deal President can then go into the German mark business again, as he did in the past, and into a few other international banking businesses, about which I will have something to say on the floor of the House in the near future.

My colleague the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knurson] indicated that the gold plates used at the $100 Jackson Day New Deal dinner might be made out of the gold we Americans were forced to turn into the Treasury. Oh, no; the New Deal made our American citizens turn in their gold for $20.67 an ounce or else go to the jailhouse for 5 years, just as under the Jones 5-and-10 dry law, and then imported approximately $1,500,000,000 of gold from Europe at $35 an ounce, mostly from Great Britain and France, our debtor nations, who owe us more than $10,000,000,000. Our children and grandchildren to the third and fourth generations will have to sweat and toil to produce tax dollars to pay this gold bonus of our New Deal internationalists.

Let us repeal the New Deal gold and silver steal legislation and instead of playing Santa Claus to foreigners and international bankers use that money to take care of the unemployed and the distressed people of America. Let us drive the international fakers who are linked to Moscow from the citadels of Government in America.

Talk about unemployment! John L. Lewis, racketeer No. 1, who ought to be in the jailhouse with Al Capone, and his gang of Communist leaders are responsible for much of our unemployment. He bought a mortgage on the New Deal Democratic Party for $500,000 which he shook out of the pay checks of the coal miners. A few years prior to that, Raskob, a multimillionaire munitions war profiteer, had a mortgage of several hundred thousand dollars on the same party. Not many months ago, in violation of the criminal law of my State and the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, which provides penalties for shaking down corporations and accepting campaign contributions, almost a million dollars of campaign funds were collected by means of $250 autographed book sales. Now, again in violation of the Federal law, Federal employees eat dinners at $100 a plate in order to raise campaign funds, although our Federal Corrupt Practices Act prohibits officials and employees of the Federal Government from directly or indirectly making political contributions. [Applause.]

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes to correct the record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, a few minutes ago one of our distinguished colleagues, a Member on the Republican side, cast aspersions upon the treatment of the unemployed through the W. P. A.

The Republican minority has a perfect right to oppose the program of the W. P. A., so long as it offers a constructive substitute for its deficiencies. In order that the record may be clear, however, let me emphasize the constructive statesmanship, symbolized by the leadership of the Republican Party in 1930, when 20,000,000 people were unemployed, as a result of the economic philosophy and prophecy of the distinguished President of the Republican Party, Herbert Hoover, who in 1928 promised two chickens in every pot and two automobiles in every garage.

What was the treatment promulgated, advocated, and recommended by Herbert Hoover, the leader of the Republican Party, and President of the United States in 1930 when 20,000,000 people were unemployed?

Mr. Hoover's contribution to the solution and treatment of unemployment, was the sublime and magnificent thought, of having every unemployed person sell apples on the street corners of urban communities and requested these cities and municipalities to forego receiving the payment of license fees.

Supplementing this heroic and noble contribution to the solution of unemployment by the President of the United States and leader of the Republican Party was his secondary contribution, which I respectfully submit to the Republican minority of this House, and that was, that those people who were employed in 1930 should divide their work with the great army of 20,000,000 unemployed. That was the treatment recommended by Herbert Hoover, the august leader of the Republican Party in 1930, whose disciples, as minority Representatives of the Republican Party today, are criticizing and assailing the humane, constructive, and determined desire of the great President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, to relieve the one-third of our Nation who are underprivileged, undernourished, ill-fed, and ill-housed.

Mr. Speaker, the great city of Milwaukee has returned to Congress my distinguished Republican friend, Mr. Schafer, who was a Member of this House way back before 1930. I have always entertained a sympathetic affection for his gracious and militant personality that has endeared him to many Members of the House. He has seen fit to attack the President of the United States for having bankrupted the State of New York while he was Governor in 1930. In order that the record of the House of Representatives may again be kept clear, let me call to the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin the fact that when Herbert Hoover swept the United States with his landslide vote in 1928 and elected a Republican House and Senate at the same time, the gracious personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt carried the governorship of the State of New York on the Democratic ticket in spite of the Republican landslide by 26,000 votes. That occurred in 1928. In 1930, in the year my beloved friend from Milwaukee contends Roosevelt bankrupted the State of New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt was reelected Governor of the State of New York by one of the greatest majorities ever given to a Governor. He carried the State by 750,000 majority, which was the overwhelming contribution of independent Republicans and other independent citizens to their appreciation of the fine, humane, constructive, patriotic, and wonderful leadership given by Franklin D. Roosevelt to the people of the great Empire State that ultimately elected him to the Presidency of the United States, which great position he has graced with honor, with dignity, and with the respect of all those who are interested in their fellow man and not in his exploitation. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I do not deny that, but the treasury of the State of New York was in the red over $100,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 30 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, for the past 4 years a hue and cry has been raised in this Nation about restoring the independence of Congress. Much favorable comment has appeared in recent days about the renewed leadership apparent in this Congress. All I have to say is that if the last half hour is an example of the way we have assumed that leadership, God save the Nation. This petty bickering and these cheap invectives on the floor, with the Nation in the trouble it is today, must be stopped. I hope from now on that when Members rise and ask unanimous consent to address the House it will be for the purpose of saying something constructive, something which will solve our basic problems. What we have just heard is nothing. Valuable time has been wasted. Let us get down to business. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. CREAL (at the request of Mr. Spence), indefinitely, on account of illness.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, January 10, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

173. A letter from the Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget, transmitting a list of persons employed in the Procurement Division, Public Buildings Branch, Treasury Department, and paid from the appropriation "General administrative expenses, Public Buildings Branch, Procurement Division," during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

174. A letter from the Federal Communications Commission, transmitting the Fourth Annual Report of the Federal Communications Commission for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art greater than our greatest thought of Thee, whose greatness is unsearchable, waken in us by Thy secret indwelling all slumbering possibilities of our own greatness, that we may show forth the gift of God within us, even though as yet it may be but our unaccepted, unclaimed inheritance. Keep us calm each day in the strength of ever greater things achieved and, as we sit at the feet of the Master on the heights to which He rose, help us to attain that further greater good which, foreshadowed in dreams and sown in the soil of holy aspiration, shall one day manifest itself as the fruit of Thy purpose for Thy children. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

REFUGE FOR PERSECUTED CHILDREN OF GERMANY

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred a petition submitted to the President yesterday, urging the American people to join in offering refuge to German children subject to religious and racial persecution in their native land.

The petition is signed by His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, and 47 other outstanding prelates representing the Catholic and the various Protestant

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The American people has made clear its reaction to the oppression of all minority groups, religious and racial, throughout Germany. It has been especially moved by the plight of the children. Every heart has been touched, and the Nation has spoken out its sorrow and dismay through the voices of its statesmen, teachers, and religious leaders. Americans have felt that protest, however vigorous, and sympathy, however deep, are not enough, and that these must translate themselves into such action as shall justify these must translate themselves into such action as shall justify faith.

We have been stirred by the knowledge that Holland and England have opened their doors and homes to many of these children. We conceive it to be our duty, in the name of the American tradition and the religious spirit common to our Nation to urge the people, by its Congress and Executive, to express sympathy through special treatment of the young, robbed of country, homes, and parents. A heartening token of the mood of America is to be found in the fact that thousands of Americans of all faiths have made known their eagerness to take these young children into their homes, without burden or obligation to the State.

out burden or obligation to the State.

Working within and under the laws of Congress, through special enactment, if necessary, the Nation can offer sanctuary to a part of these children by united expression of its will to help.

To us it seems that the duty of Americans in dealing with the youthful victims of a regime which punishes innocent and tender children as if they were offenders, is to remember the monition of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." And in that spirit we call on all Americans to join together without regard to race, religion, or creed in offering refuge to children as a token of our sympathy and as a symbol of our faith in the ideals of human prother head. brotherhood.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Spirit of Truth, send us forth today in obedience to the imperative command of our commission. Thou who made known our Father's name, warm our hearts with the splendor of that revelation; deliver us from the spirit of fearfulness. Merciful God, move our country into a wider, broader day and let it be blest not with corruptible things but with justice, good will, and brotherhood. Behind and beneath all are the potencies of love and longing which Thou alone can satisfy. Forbid, blessed Lord, that we should stand by the sea of human life and realize no God and see no home beyond the horizon. Take unto Thy care our President, our Speaker, and the whole congressional body; put Thy seal upon us and a deep consciousness of our sonship in our breasts. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Hess, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that Mr. Bulow, of South Dakota, had been appointed as a member of the Joint Committee on Forestry on the part of the Senate, vice Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo, resigned, in accordance with the provisions of Senate Concurrent Resolution 31, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session.

The message also announced that Mr. Logan, of Kentucky, had been appointed as a member of the Joint Committee to Investigate the Adequacy and Use of the Phosphate Resources of the United States on the part of the Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of service of Hon. James P. Pope, former Senator from the State of Idaho.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. Barkley and Mr. Gibson members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," for the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

- Census of Partial Employment, Unemployment, and Occupations.
  - 2. Tennessee Valley Authority.
  - 3. Smithsonian Institution.
  - 4. Veterans' Administration.
  - 5. Department of Agriculture.
  - 6. Department of the Interior.
  - 7. Department of War.
  - 8. Department of State.

WAGES PAID W. P. A. WORKERS

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand a statement furnished me by the Works Progress Administration showing the minimum and maximum wages paid to the various types of labor employed by the W. P. A. in the 48 States of the Union and in the District of Columbia. This information I know is of interest to the House at a time when we are about to begin the consideration of the deficiency W. P. A. appropriation bill. I understand that the information does not appear in the hearings which have been had before the deficiency subcommittee, and for that reason I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Recompat this point by incorporating this statement, which comprises only one page.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

REGENTS OF SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of title 20, section 43, United States Code, the Chair appoints as regents of the Smithsonian Institution the following Members of the House: Mr. Goldsborough, of Maryland, Mr. Cannon of Missouri, Mr. Gifford, of Massachusetts.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Appendix of the Record by inserting therein an address delivered by our former colleague, Hon. Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio, over the Columbia Broadcasting System on December 17, 1938.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENTS

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] is recognized for 40 minutes.

THE GENERAL DOWNWARD TARIFF REVISION UNDER THE TRADE-TREATY PROGRAM

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, since the adjournment of the Seventy-fifth Congress the administration has entered into two new trade treaties—one with Great Britain, the other with Canada—the purpose and effect of which will be to further encourage importations of competitive foreign products which displace the products of our own farms and factories and take jobs away from our workers. I wonder if this House and the country realize that approximately 1,000 reductions in tariff duties ranging up to 50 percent have now been made under the treaty program.

With our home market already glutted with surplus agricultural products and our farmers subject to production control, with farm prices the lowest in years, with mills and factories either idle or on a part-time basis, with millions of unemployed still roaming the streets in search of work that is not to be found, with economic recovery dependent in a large measure upon confidence in the future, the administration has nevertheless continued to pursue its ruinous tariff policy which can only result in adding to our ills.

PROGRAM BASED ON FALSE PREMISE

The trade treaty program is based upon the fallacious premise that we can restore prosperity at home by giving up our rich domestic market to other countries, which would then, it is said, have more purchasing power with which to buy American goods. Of course, the fact is that foreign countries, while they will take advantage of every opportunity to flood our market with their own cheap products, will nevertheless buy what they need in the cheapest market, wherever that may be, and there is nothing in the terms of the trade treaties to prevent them from doing so. Indeed, the trade treaties do not compel them to buy a single dollar's worth of our goods with the purchasing power they obtain by selling their own products in the American market. This fact was admitted by Secretary Wallace in his annual report for the fiscal year 1934, and what he feared might happen has happened.

TREATY PROGRAM RECALLS ONE OF AESOP'S FABLES

When we consider that we consume at home 90 percent or more of what we produce, it must be obvious that our prosperity is almost wholly dependent upon the domestic market and not the relatively lean foreign market. The trade-treaty program follows the absurd theory that the "tail wags the dog."

Speaking of dogs, I am reminded that the treaty program places this country in somewhat the same position as the dog in Aesop's Fables, about which we have all read. It will be recalled that he carried a bone in his mouth, and in passing over a stream saw in the water what appeared to be another dog with a bone. In his anxiety to grasp the bone from the dog that appeared in the water, he lost the bone which he already had. Substitute our rich domestic market for the bone in the dog's mouth, and the lean and illusory foreign markets for the image in the stream, and you have a perfect analogy to the present trade-treaty program.

ONLY JUSTIFICATION FOR FOREIGN TRADE IS TO EXCHANGE OUR SURPLUSES FOR THINGS WE NEED

Mr. Speaker, it can hardly be denied that the only purpose of carrying on foreign trade is to exchange our surpluses for the things we need but do not produce ourselves. The importation of the latter class of articles injures no domestic industry and no group of workers. The quantity of such goods annually purchased by us furnishes ample dollar exchange for the purchase of our own surpluses by foreign countries.

There is no need or justification for buying foreign products the like of which we already produce for ourselves. An individual, for example, would not buy potatoes from his neighbor if he produced an ample supply of his own, and this should be equally true of a nation.

TREATY CONCESSIONS LARGELY ON FOREIGN PRODUCTS THAT DISPLACE OUR OWN

The trade-treaty program, if it were restricted to making concessions on noncompetitive foreign products, would conceivably be of great benefit to this country, but since it is largely confined to widespread and drastic reductions of duties on foreign products that directly compete with and displace our own, its effect can only be to injure American producers.

It is idle for the apologists for the trade-treaty program to contend that these tariff reductions will not seriously affect American agriculture, industry, or labor. The purpose of the reductions admittedly is to allow foreign countries to sell us more of their goods. Why else are they being made? And if such is not the case, would anyone suppose that the foreign countries would have signed the treaties?

We must accept as a premise the fact that the purpose of the treaty program is to make possible and encourage increased imports of competitive foreign products. Proceeding from this premise, it follows that increased imports of competitive foreign products means less goods produced in the United States. And it follows, further, that less goods made in the United States means less work for our own men and women.

It has been truly said that there is need for putting more purchasing power in the hands of the great masses of the people, but this cannot be brought about by denying American farmers and American workingmen the opportunity to produce the goods consumed in the home market. Nor can it be brought about by forcing them to compete with the products of the cheap labor of Europe and the Orient. Even if the tariff reductions made under the treaties do not in every case actually result in displacing American goods, they at least force a reduction in wage levels if our own producers are to continue to compete with foreigners for the home market.

TREATY PROGRAM DISCRIMINATES AGAINST CERTAIN GROUPS OF WORKERS TO HELP OTHERS

The administration, under the trade-treaty program, is supposedly trying to help certain branches of industry and agriculture by sacrificing others to foreign competition. In other words, it is taking from Peter to give to Paul. Aside from the fact that one American citizen has as much right to a livelihood as another, the Nation as a whole gains nothing by such unfair and discriminatory procedure. Even if the trade we lose in the domestic market is offset by increased foreign sales, we are in no better position than before. Certainly the workers who have lost their jobs are not better off. But when these increased exports fail to materialize, as is usually the case, we are playing a losing game all the way around.

When the Czech treaty was concluded, the shoe workers of Massachusetts who were injured thereby were told by the administration spokesman that they would indirectly benefit from the increased prosperity which would come to Detroit auto workers by reason of increased exports of American cars to Czechoslovakia. But the fact was overlooked that the Detroit auto workers would use their increased purchasing power, if any, not to buy shoes from Massachusetts but to buy the cheap shoes of Czechoslovakia which would flood our market under the treaty. Moreover, there is some question as to just how much the purchasing power of Detroit auto workers will be increased, since under the treaty the quota on American cars is limited to 1,600 per year, and there will still be a tariff of $595 imposed, which few people in that country can pay, not to mention the cost of gasoline to run them.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TREADWAY. Very briefly.

Mr. KNUTSON. So that I may read at this time into the gentleman's remarks a very pertinent and interesting item that appeared in the Washington Post this morning. It appears that 10 Senators, most of them Democrats, are asking for an investigation of the Cuban reciprocal-trade agreement. They contend that Cuban officials announced in Habana on November 28 that a new agreement had been concluded with this Government, while the State Department here said on December 1 that hearings would be held January 3 on the matter

In other words, according to the contention of these Senators, most of whom are Democrats, the State Department agreed to hold hearings on the Cuban treaty after it had been ratified and accepted.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am not at all surprised at that statement. Where has the Congress, either the Senate or the House, or Democrats or Republicans, been consulted at any time in relation to the trade-treaty program? The newspaper item to which the gentleman referred only carries out that very idea that they open the barn door and let in importations and then hear you talk about it.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman will recall that when the reciprocal-trade bill was before the House, the gentleman himself offered an amendment that would have compelled House and Senate ratification of the trade agreements before they would become effective, and it was voted down on a strict party vote, the Democrats voting against it and Republicans for it.

Mr. TREADWAY. And I have not gotten discouraged, I may say to the gentleman. I have reintroduced that measure and will refer to it later in my remarks.

Mr. KNUTSON. And may I say to the gentleman that it will not do any good until 1941 to do so.

Mr. TREADWAY. But I say it will do good, because it will call attention of the country to the iniquity of the program as being carried out by the Democratic majority, reduced as it is.

Mr. KNUTSON. Oh, yes; it will accelerate the movement back to sanity.

Mr. TREADWAY. Correct. Therefore, it is useful.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. Yes. Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman from Minnesota should not be surprised at the article in the Post this morning, for if he will think back when the Brazilian treaty was under consideration some of us on this side wanted to get information about what was being considered. We were unable to get it at the State Department, but we did get it through the Brazilian foreign representative, because in Brazil the Congress must ratify before the treaty is entered into, whereas in this country the President and the Secretary of State enter into a treaty and then we are permitted to go through the form of a hearing.

Mr. TREADWAY. Let me call the gentleman's attention further to the fact that when this treaty with Great Britain was up for consideration a stuffed committee was appointed to hear us people against it. Does the gentleman suppose this protest had the least effect on the men ready to render their decision before the hearing was held?

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. At this point it might be pertinent to have the RECORD show that we are the only country that does not require congressional action on trade agreements.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman is correct insofar as the great majority of the countries are concerned, as I shall later show. We have much less to say about what is being done than other legislative bodies in foreign countries.

Mr. KNUTSON. We have absolutely nothing to say. TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN DOUBLES NUMBER OF TARIFF REDUCTIONS

Mr. TREADWAY. Following these general remarks-and I want to say that I am glad to have the interpolations by others-I desire to briefly review the new British trade treaty, as well as the revised Canadian treaty, which takes the place of the one previously negotiated.

I shall discuss first the British treaty, which became effective on January 1.

Some idea of the scope of the treaty may be gained from the astounding fact that this country made 468 actual duty reductions, or approximately as many as had been made under all the 17 previous treaties. Other concessions included the binding of 47 duties against increase during the life of the treaty and the binding of 106 articles on the free list.

That shows the scope of the British treaty. Practically as many reductions in tariff rates were made in that one treaty as in the previous 17. I submit those 468 reductions are practically all on competitive articles, the like of which are manufactured by our own industries or produced by our own farmers in this country.

The actual number of tariff concessions made under the treaty does not tell the whole story. It is the fact that they affect approximately 70 percent of our imports from the United Kingdom that is important; likewise, the fact that they affect 94 percent of our imports from the British colonial empire.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. Nothing would give me greater satisfaction than to have the endorsement of the gentleman from Missouri. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHORT. I merely wanted to point out to the gentleman that on November 17, about 9 days after the election, it was made public that the treaty with Canada had been consummated. Although it did not go into effect until January 1, the price of lead and zinc ore, much of which is produced in my congressional district, dropped $5 a ton. Many of the mines in southwestern Missouri, northeastern Oklahoma, and southeastern Kansas closed, and over 4,000 miners have been thrown out of employment.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am certain the gentleman from Missouri impressed those facts on the voters in his election district previous to the election period.

Mr. SHORT. I predicted, I may say, the week before election that the treaty would not be made public until after the election.

Does not the gentleman believe that a great mistake was made when, in 1934, the Congress of the United States abdicated its power and turned over to the Executive the authority to negotiate those treaties without them ever being considered. let alone ratified, by the United States Senate, as is required by the Constitution?

Mr. TREADWAY. During the 26 years I have been a Member of this body, if there is any one subject I have dwelt on more than another, it is the iniquity of our agreeing to those trade treaties without any authority from the Congress what-

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman have an idea that the Congress, at this session, will assume its responsibility and take that power back unto itself, where it rightfully belongs, so that we can determine whether we want imports of foreign countries to come in here and put our men out of work and put our farmers off of their farms?

Mr. TREADWAY. My answer to the gentleman from Pennsylvania is this: We have, I believe, at least 80 new Members on this side of the House. I am very confident that every one of those 80 will vote with those of us who have been here before against these treaties. The answer to the gentleman's question is in the hands of the gentlemen of the majority. If there are enough of those gentlemen over there with the same sanity that the gentleman from Pennsylvania has, we will abrogate those treaties during the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Mr. RICH. I will say that I believe there are enough Jeffersonian Democrats in the House today who will come to the rescue of the American workingman, the American businessman, and the American farmer. I am in hopes that that will happen at this session of the Congress.

Mr. TREADWAY. As I understand it, that group was purged on Saturday night from the Democratic Party by the speech of the President. He does not want their society any more.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Short] mentioned the great mistake that was made back in 1934, May I remind the gentleman from Missouri that a much greater mistake was made 2 years previously. [Laughter.]

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman's remark was correct in that for a year or two after they came into office they did not bring up their trade-treaty program.

Mr. SHORT. I may say further, if the gentleman will allow, that I have just come from my office, where I had a telephone call from a gentleman by the name of June Walker, who was sent up here by the mine workers themselves from Picher, Okla., in the congressional district of my worthy colleague the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. Disney. We are meeting this afternoon in Senator Thomas' office at 4 o'clock. I invite all the Members of this House, on both sides of the aisle, who are interested in seeing lead and zinc exempted from this reciprocal-trade agreement to meet with us.

Mr. RICH. Why limit it to those interested in lead and zinc?

Mr. TREADWAY. I want to continue briefly, if I may, along my own line, welcoming these interruptions as appli-

WHOLE WORLD GETS BENEFIT OF OUR REDUCTIONS IN TARIFF RATES

It should, of course, be kept in mind that under the administration's so-called most-favored-nation policy the concessions which this country makes under all trade treaties except the Cuban are extended freely to all other countries, save Germany, without requiring these other countries to give us reciprocal concessions in return. Hence to call the treaty program "reciprocity" is a misnomer.

For all practical purposes the tariff reductions made under the treaties have the same effect upon world imports as if they had been made by statute. What the treaty program is doing is to bring about, piecemeal, a general downward tariff revision all along the line. I recall that when he was majority leader the late Speaker Rainey once said to this House and I was sitting on the floor when he made this remark. I quote:

Lower this tariff drastically? You (Republicans) will not do it and we (Democrats) dare not do it with conditions as they are. We do not want this market flooded with the products of cheap labor in other countries.

I would almost think that Speaker Rainey would turn in his grave could he see what has been done by his former colleagues since he made that statement on this floor.

What the present administration does not have the courage to do directly by legislation it is doing indirectly through the means of trade treaties. Even in connection with its backhanded method of tariff revision it has shown a distinct lack of political courage, as evidenced by the fact that the announcement of the British treaty was withheld until after the election last fall, although its terms had already been agreed upon.

And I will pause at this point to say that in many instances during the campaign I made that statement, and I defled any of the Democratic powers to produce what was to be contained in that treaty. They did not, however, dare do it. The reason they did not dare do it was that instead of 80 we might have had 180 new Members on the Republican side—if they had announced that program in advance.

ARTICLES AFFECTED BY TARIFF REDUCTIONS UNDER BRITISH TREATY

Time does not permit me to refer to the six-hundred-odd concessions of one kind or another granted to Great Britain, but it must be obvious from their large number that they will adversely affect a major part of our domestic industries which will henceforth find it more difficult, if not impossible, to compete in the home market against the products not only of Great Britain but the rest of the world.

Among the articles on which duty reductions of up to 50 percent were made were some 39 items in the chemical schedule; 27 items in the earthenware and glassware schedule, including bath bricks, tiles, china clay, earthenware, bone china, and glassware; 111 items in the metal schedule, including wire rope, balls and rollers for bearings, power cables, pens, telegraph apparatus, most electrical products, knives, razor blades, rifles, bicycles, and a wide variety of machinery and miscellaneous items; 2 items in the wood schedule, including furniture; three items in the sugar schedule, including molasses and confectionery; 2 items in the tobacco schedule, including cigarettes; 31 items in the agricultural schedule, including venison, fish, catmeal, biscuits, blueberries, limes, jellies, and so forth; 8 items in the wines and liquor schedule; 40 items in the cotton schedule, including cotton varn and cloth, and various manufactures of cotton; 30 items in the schedule covering flax, linen, hemp, and jute products; 50 items in the wool schedule, including wool waste and yarns and practically all woven fabrics of wool and manufactures thereof; 6 items in the silk schedule; 24 items in the paper and book schedule; and 95 items in the sundries schedule, including asbestos products, golf balls and clubs, golf tees, toilet brushes, toys, nettings, leather, shoes, gloves, and fishing tackle.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. Before the gentleman concludes, I hope he will weigh the results of the evangelistic appeals for peace and good neighborliness among nations. Has there been actual result?

Mr. TREADWAY. The fact that we are being called upon for the largest appropriation ever made for the so-called national-defense program would indicate to me that the effort to secure peace with our neighbors and friends of other nations has absolutely failed.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman listened to the President's message the other day. Was that a good-neighbor address?

Mr. TREADWAY. I would prefer to have some gentleman

Mr. TREADWAY. I would prefer to have some gentleman from the other side of the aisle defend the President's address rather than that I be asked.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield briefly.

Mr. GROSS. It so happened that yesterday morning I marketed a load of fat cattle on the Lancaster, Pa., market. Farmers from a number of counties had cattle there. Permit me to say on this matter of reciprocal-trade agreements that they are matters of common conversation among those farmers and cattle feeders and dairymen of southeastern Pennsylvania.

Mr. TREADWAY. And they realize what is happening to their industry and their livelihood by the carrying out of these trade treaties, do they not?

Mr. GROSS. They are a unit in their opposition to this program. Our industrial men are of the same opinion about it. There is general opposition to the trade-treaty program throughout that great district.

Mr. TREADWAY. Now, let me return to the industries of Massachusetts.

NEW ENGLAND INDUSTRIES SACRIFICED UNDER BRITISH TREATY

The concessions made under the British treaty more seriously affect New England than any other section of the country. The industries of that section are being sacrificed in what will undoubtedly be a fruitless effort to help the export trade of other sections, as I shall presently show. This administration will have to assume full responsibility for the consequences. The people of New England are already aroused over the lack of consideration shown for them, and when the full effect of the tariff reductions begins to be felt they may be expected to show their resentment by actions rather than words.

There is not a single major industry of my State that will not be injured by the treaty. You can go right down the line of the principal industries—those giving the largest employment and upon which the prosperity of Massachusetts principally depends—and you will find that they have all been traded off by the administration, along with the workers employed therein. These industries include shoes, leather goods, cotton textiles, woolen and worsted goods, electrical machinery, textile machinery, paper, confectionery, cutlery, and so on. In addition, there are a host of other lesser industries adversely affected which, while perhaps not as important to the Commonwealth as a whole, are frequently the source of livelihood of whole communities.

I may say that I represent a large number of small towns in which there is likely to be one small industry, comparatively small, but it is the livelihood of that whole community. These treaties are closing these little shops and causing the hardships from which they are suffering in those communities today.

The jobs of thousands of workers employed in our industries have been turned over to workers in foreign countries. The fact that workers in other sections and in other industries may possibly be benefited thereby is beside the point. The administration has no right to discriminate against or in favor of any of our citizens. It has no right to impoverish one group to help another. Its action in bringing about such a result under the treaty program is to be severely condemned.

Of course, the full extent of the injury that will be afflicted upon American producers by the British treaty is speculative at this time. Until the treaty has been in operation for at least a year we will not know what all the consequences will be. But this much we do know: The purpose of the reduction in our tariff rates, as admitted by administration spokesmen, is to make possible increased imports, which are already coming into our market in large volume despite the statutory tariff rates. This is especially true of cotton cloth, the imports of which have tremendously increased in the last few years, particularly from Japan. Japan, I may say, will, along with other low-wage countries, get the full benefit of the reductions under the British treaty, thus making possible even greater imports of cotton cloth which will displace that which ordinarily would be produced in our own mills by American working men and women.

That situation, so far as importations from Japan are concerned, ought to be a subject of discussion alone as an argument against this trade-treaty program.

That a reduction in our tariff duties on competitive foreign products jeopardizes the jobs of American workers is plain. When the hearings were held on the British treaty, prior to its negotiation, representatives of numerous labor groups appeared to protest against such reductions. The workers of America know that they cannot compete on equal terms with the cheap labor of other countries. They realize that the tariff is all that stands between them and the low-wage scales and living standards which obtain in other countries.

BRITISH CONCESSIONS OF LITTLE OR NO VALUE

As compared with this country's sweeping concessions under the British treaty, which, as I have said, are extended to all other countries but one, let us see what was obtained for the United States in the way of concessions from Great

First, as to agricultural exports: Concessions to this country, including, in addition to duty concessions, the binding of other rates of duty at existing levels and the freezing of items on the British free list, purport to cover a large part of our exports of farm products to the United Kingdom, thus making it appear that for once we are actually getting some worthwhile concessions for our farmers. But the joker is that while some duty reductions have been granted on a few specialty items, no real concessions are extended to the major farm exports.

EMPTY "CONCESSIONS" ON COTTON AND TOBACCO

Cotton is our chief export to the United Kingdom, and since time immemorial it has been on the free list. Hence all that was or could be done for American cotton under the British treaty was to bind it on the free list, which, of course, does not assure any increased exports of that commodity.

It has always been a favorite argument of trade treaty proponents that the reason our foreign trade in certain farm products had disappeared was because of the erection of retaliatory tariffs against us. The fact that cotton is and has been on the British free list is evidence that this is not so. There are other reasons for the loss of our foreign markets, particularly as regards cotton. Cotton production has been opened up in many new countries and expanded in old production areas. Our cotton exports have fallen off because of increased competition for world markets and the fact that other countries are producing their own. Under the circumstances it is almost hopeless to expect to increase our cotton exports. Likewise it is a losing proposition to bargain away our rich domestic market in the hope of finding export markets for cotton, particularly when the only alleged concession we obtain is preservation of the status quo so far as tariff treatment for our cotton is concerned.

Mr. BREWSTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Maine. Mr. BREWSTER. Is it not the theory of the advocates of these agreements that we sell as much as we buy? Is not that their contention in favor of these agreements?

Mr. TREADWAY. But we do not agree with that program.

Mr. BREWSTER. Is not that their contention? Mr. TREADWAY. Yes.

Mr. BREWSTER. Has the gentleman examined the result of the first agreement with Cuba wherein before the agreement the balance of trade was $14,000,000 in their favor, whereas in the first 2 years after the agreement it was $132,000,000 in their favor? What is the effect of that $132,000,000 balance upon the wage earners of this country?

Mr. TREADWAY. I think anyone engaged in beet growing or cane growing in this country would be of the opinion that they will find themselves down and out.

Mr. BREWSTER. It means they are put out of business. Mr. TREADWAY. I received a letter this morning, and probably the other Members of Congress did, from the distinguished Member from Michigan [Mr. Woodruff], covering the very point to which the gentleman is referring.

Mr. BREWSTER. Has the gentleman followed the announcement of Colonel Batista regarding the agreement he made with the State Department on his recent visit?

Mr. TREADWAY. I regret to say I have not that information at hand, but I would be very glad to have the gentleman give it.

Mr. BREWSTER. Colonel Batista announced that he made an agreement with the State Department, although no hearings whatsoever had been held. Is that within their power?

Mr. TREADWAY. What difference does it make whether they have hearings or not, as long as they have decided what they are going to do before they have hearings? I think they might as well throw aside that camouflage and make the trade agreements without any hearings. It does not do any good to have hearings. The gentleman appeared with me at hearings last spring. Where did we get before a packed committee? It was a committee set up to defeat us before we started

Mr. BREWSTER. That was the result.
Mr. TREADWAY. That is what was intended, too.

To return to the treaty with Great Britain:

Unmanufactured tobacco usually is our second most important export to the United Kingdom. Yet the only alleged concession obtained for that product was an assurance that the present margin of preference accorded to tobacco from the British colonies, now amounting to 50 cents per pound, would not be increased. In other words, under the treaty, our tobacco exporters will continue to be at the same competitive disadvantage in the British market as heretofore. Thus on our two principal exports to the United Kingdom we got no actual concessions.

Wheat also has always been an important export to the United Kingdom, and our treaty negotiators did succeed in getting a small concession on this product, namely, the removal of the so-called Empire preference amounting to 6 cents per bushel. However, it should be understood that the Empire countries are able to supply all British requirements for wheat and they will still enjoy advantages in production costs which will enable them to retain their present market in the United Kingdom.

A number of alleged concessions were granted by the United Kingdom on other less important agricultural commodities, but in a great many instances they amounted to no more than slightly increasing some quotas, or binding existing rates of duty, or agreeing not to increase the unfavorable position of the United States in the British market. Hence there is little likelihood of any substantial benefit to American agriculture under the treaty.

MOST CONCESSIONS ON NONAGRICULTURAL EXPORTS CONSIST OF BINDING EXISTING TARIFF TREATMENT

As regards the so-called concessions made by the United Kingdom on nonagricultural products of the United States, it will be found that they, too, hold little hope of substantial benefit to this country. The United Kingdom normally takes only about one-tenth of the total American exports of this class of goods. Total concessions on such products cover exports which in 1936 amounted to $80,000,000, or about 40 percent of the total nonagricultural exports to that country. However, duty reductions were granted only on about onethird of these commodities, the alleged concessions on the remainder consisting merely of binding the present tariff treatment or the existing Empire margin of preference, which, of course, will not be of any increased benefit to American products.

Taking both agricultural and nonagricultural concessions together, the commodities on which improved tariff treatment is accorded to American products under the British treaty accounted for only about $50,000,000 of our exports to the United Kingdom out of a total in 1936 of $440,000,000.

Agricultural products accorded improved tariff treatment accounted for $26,000,000 and nonagricultural products for $24,000,000.

The great majority of the so-called concessions made by the British colonies to American exports consisted of binding existing tariff treatment and Empire preferences, the actual duty concessions being limited to reductions on American products which in 1936 were imported into the colonies to the amount of only $4,439,000. Of this total, but $673,000 was in American agricultural products.

WHAT PRICE RECIPROCITY?

Judging from the one-sided nature of the British treaty it is apparent that this country paid a tremendous price for its negotiation. It must be that Secretary Hull was more interested in consequences and considerations other than trade advantages for this country. Before the treaty negotiations began, a British trade paper suggested that Great Britain had everything to lose and nothing to gain as a result of a treaty with the United States since it was already obtaining the benefits of concessions made under other American trade treaties without giving up anything in return. Perhaps that explains why we had to give up so much more to obtain so little.

It is well known that Secretary Hull looked forward to the negotiation of the British treaty as his crowning achievement, and he was doubtless willing to pay any price to secure an agreement. Our citzens may well concern themselves as to whether additional commitments were made which do not consist of mere tariff concessions—secret commitments which may involve this country in entangling foreign alliances. There is at least reason for believing that the treaty was greatly desired simply for the psychological effect it would have on certain other countries which I need not mention.

One of the responsible officials of the State Department has publicly stated that the purpose of the trade-treaty program must be broader than "mere horse trading" or "selfish trade advantages." If that is the view taken by the treaty negotiators, then it explains a great deal, not only the failure to secure for this country an even exchange but the fact that considerations other than trade may be involved.

Secretary Hull takes great satisfaction in the approval of his trade-treaty program by the Lima Conference which was recently held. Of course it is not hard to understand why the South American countries should be wholeheartedly in favor of our treaty program, which is a part of the administration's "good neighbor" policy. Why should they not be in favor of it, since its purpose is to let them send more goods into our market to displace our own products? It is just like the administration's spending program: Nobody is going to shoot Santa Claus.

THE NEW TREATY WITH CANADA

Turning to the new trade treaty with Canada, I may say that it is, of course, in substitution for the previously existing agreement which became effective January 1, 1936. The new treaty continues most of the important concessions made on both sides under the previous agreement, enlarges upon some, and in addition provides for a considerable number of new concessions.

OUR CONCESSIONS AFFECT 83 PERCENT OF CANADIAN IMPORTS

Concessions on the part of this country under the new Canadian treaty affect 83 percent of all our imports from Canada in 1937, indicating virtually a complete tariff revision insofar as Canadian imports are concerned. Of the dutiable imports, articles imported in 1937 to a value of about $73,000,000 have been granted increased concessions over those made under the old treaty. These concessions include reductions in the duties on brick, lime, cement, not specially provided for, crude feldspar, mica, talc, woven-wire cloth, objects of cast iron, iron and steel chains, motorboats, aluminum, nickel, zinc, veneers of birch and maple, certain manufactures of wood, and maple sugar and sirup.

As regards agricultural products, the quota on dairy cows was removed and the quotas on calves, cattle, and seed potatoes were increased, along with a reduction in the duty on the latter two items. Duties were also reduced on pork and swine, bacon, milk and cream (subject to quota), Cheddar cheese, eggs, horses, honey, barley, buckwheat, oats, rye, bran shorts, dried beet pulp, blueberries, certain seeds, white or Irish potatoes (subject to quota), hay, and straw. Among other products on which duty reductions were made were fish, paper, fox furs, patent leather, leather gloves, pipe organs, and Christmas trees.

AGRICULTURAL TARIFFS NOW DRASTICALLY REDUCED

As a result of the new concessions, the rates of duty on many agricultural products have now been reduced under the rates of the tariff acts of 1921 (emergency act), 1922, and 1930. In other words, the existing rates approach the level of the free-trade Underwood Act of 1913, under which most agricultural products were on the free list. The consequences of free trade or inadequate tariffs on farm products are a matter of history. The outbreak of the World War in 1914 set up an artificial tariff barrier for the time and saved this country from foreign competition. However, with the signing of the armistice and the resumption of production abroad, the flood of foreign imports broke loose upon our market, displacing our own farm products and breaking down the price structure. A Republican Congress in 1920 passed an emergency agricultural tariff bill which was vetoed by President Wilson.

However, it was reintroduced under President Harding and became a law in 1921, stemming the tide of imports until the general tariff act of 1922 could be enacted. Just as in 1914, the undeclared wars throughout the world today have saved us from the full effects of the recent tariff reductions. However, the administration is paving the way for a recurrence of the flood of imports we had after the World War. Another emergency tariff will soon be in order.

Those branches of American agriculture which have not yet been affected by any of the existing trade treaties have cause for fear as to what may happen to them if treaties are negotiated with such countries as Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, Argentina, and other agricultural competitors. Officials of Australia were recently in Washington going over the possibilities of a treaty with this country. The precedent having been established for drastic reductions in farm tariffs under trade treaties, despite the President's promise in 1932 that such duties would not be reduced, we may expect the policy to be continued. It is significant that the British treaty contains a provision that if the duty on wool is reduced under any future treaty—possibly one with Australia, a large wool-producing country—compensatory benefits will be extended to the United Kingdom.

CANADIAN CONCESSIONS TO THE UNITED STATES

Concessions granted by Canada on American products follow the general line of the concessions under the old treaty. In addition, Canada undertakes to remove the special import tax of 3 percent applicable to a large volume of Canadian imports.

Duty reductions apply to articles exported to Canada in 1937 to a value of $80,000,000, or approximately 27.6 percent of our dutiable exports to that country.

The new Canadian agreement continues to provide for most-favored-nation treatment of American exports, but the value of this provision is largely offset by the fact that the British Commonwealth of nations continue to get the so-called Empire preference in the Canadian market. What we actually receive in the way of most-favored-nation treatment is merely the benefit of treaty rates extended to non-British countries. This still leaves us at the same substantial disadvantage in trying to compete with the Empire countries for the Canadian market.

TREADWAY BILL TO LIMIT AMOUNT OF TARIFF REDUCTIONS AND REQUIRE CONGRESSIONAL APPROVAL OF TREATIES

Mr. Speaker, I would like now to call attention to a bill which I introduced on the first day of the session (H. R. 923) which I ask permission to insert in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Patman). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts? There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to read the bill to the House. It is as follows:

A bill to limit the President's authority in proclaiming modifications of existing tariff duties in connection with foreign-trade agreements, and to provide for the submission of such agreements to the Congress for approval

Be it enacted, etc., That the President, in entering into foreign-trade agreements under the authority of section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and in proclaiming modifications of existing tariff duties pursuant thereto, shall in no event reduce the duties on articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of any foreign country below the amount necessary to equalize the differences in the costs of production (as defined in section 336 of such act) of such articles and like or similar domestic articles, if such domestic articles are produced in the United States in commercial quantities.

SEC. 2. Any foreign-trade agreement entered into by the President after the enactment of this act, and any renewal or extension of a previously existing foreign-trade agreement, shall not become effective until it shall have been approved by concurrent resolution of the Congress.

The purpose of the bill, as is obvious from its reading, is twofold: First, to prevent any reductions in our tariff rates below the amount necessary to offset the foreign cost-of-production advantage, and second, to require the approval of both Houses of Congress before the trade treaties shall become effective.

I might say that while I wholeheartedly favor the complete repeal of the President's authority under the Trade Agreements Act, as provided for in bills introduced by several of my colleagues, I realize that it is too much to hope for the passage of any measure for that purpose. It would meet with a certain veto at the hands of the President, and it is quite possible that he could muster sufficient votes in one House or the other to prevent passage over his veto. He also would unquestionably veto the measure I have presented should it or any similar measure be passed, but there is a very strong likelihood that this Congress would pass it over his veto if a vote could ever be had.

If any justification is needed for my bill, it is amply furnished by the British and Canadian treaties recently concluded. The administration has never hesitated to reduce tariffs under the treaties without reference to the difference in foreign and domestic production costs. While this has always, to my mind, been a serious objection to the treaty program, it becomes all the more so by reason of the increasingly large number of commodities affected. Moreover, the fact that these treaties so vitally affect the welfare of our people is a compelling reason, aside from constitutional considerations, why they should be approved by the Congress before becoming effective.

The Secretary of State has repeatedly said that his only concern was in reducing rates of duty that were excessive or unreasonable. Apparently he is satisfied in his own mind that the reductions he has made fall in that category, although he would find few people who would agree with him.

No one, I believe, can successfully challenge the statement that a rate of duty which does no more than equalize the competitive advantage of the foreign producer in the home market is not excessive or unreasonable, provided we produce the domestic article in commercial quantities at a cost not economically prohibitive. Such being the case there can be no reasonable objection to restricting the reductions in duty under the trade treaties in the manner provided by my bill. Such a limitation is imperative if we are going to protect the interests of American agriculture, industry, and labor, and maintain our American wage and living standards.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts and Mr. COCHRAN rose. Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The gentleman does not believe these reciprocal-trade agreements are constitutional, does he?

Mr. TREADWAY. No; decidedly not. I was just about to deal with that phase of the question.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I hope the gentleman will cover that matter.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH EXERCISES LEGISLATIVE POWER IN FIXING TARIFF RATES UNDER TREATIES

Mr. TREADWAY. In securing the enactment of the law authorizing the trade-treaty program, the administration was careful to omit from the act any legislative rule or yardstick on which tariff concessions should be based. executive branch of the Government has complete discretion in the matter, both as to the choice of articles on which concessions are to be made and as to the amount thereof within the 50-percent limitation. In effect, therefore, the President exercises legislative power contrary to the Constitution. The cost-of-production yardstick laid down under the so-called flexible tariff provisions of the 1930 tariff act, to which the Executive had to adhere in making tariff increases or decreases thereunder, is completely eliminated insofar as changes under the trade treaties are concerned. This legislative formula was the basis upon which the Supreme Court upheld the validity of the flexible tariff. The absence of such a legislative formula in the trade-treaty legislation makes the latter clearly invalid. However, no court test of its constitutionality can be obtained because the New Deal master minds craftily included a provision in the law taking away from American producers the right to appeal or protest, as formerly allowed them under section 516 (b) of the Tariff Act of 1930.

TREATIES NEGOTIATED IN SECRET

The trade treaties are, of course, negotiated in secret starchamber proceedings, in which agents of this Government who are in no way responsible to the people or to Congress sit around the council table with foreign agents to decide what our citizens shall be allowed to produce in this country and what they must buy from abroad. Through their manipulation of our tariff rates they exercise what amounts to a power of life and death over every domestic industry, both agricultural and manufacturing, which is dependent upon tariff protection for its continued existence. They can regiment our workers in certain lines of activity and undermine their wage scale. While the President must take the ultimate responsibility for their actions, he cannot possibly be conversant with all the details, but must rely upon their recommendations. Even the Secretary of State, under whose general directions the negotiations are carried on, must do the same.

The Congress of the United States, which, under the Constitution, is supposed to have complete and exclusive authority over the tariff, is denied the power to review the terms of the treaties, no matter how disastrous may be their effect upon our home industries and our workers. The provisions of the treaties are not even made public until they have actually been concluded and the President has affixed his signature, thus making them binding and effective insofar as this country is concerned.

American interests have no opportunity to be heard on the terms of the treaties except before their negotiation is begun, and little heed is ever paid to their representations. They are relegated to much the same position as a convicted criminal who is asked by the judge whether he has anything to say before sentence is pronounced. In a way, they are in an even less favorable position, because the criminal at least has the right to appeal, which they do not.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS HAVE LESS TO SAY ABOUT UNITED STATES TARIFFS THAN FOREIGN EMISSARIES

We Members of Congress have less to say about the tariff policy of this country than the foreign agents who take part in the treaty negotiations. They have a hand and voice in the negotiations. We have neither, nor do we even have any knowledge of what goes on behind the closed doors. This is a situation which should no longer be tolerated. While the Congress is moving toward the resumption of its legislative functions under the Constitution in other lines, it should also move toward the resumption of its legislative powers over the tariff.

It was argued at the time the trade-treaty legislation was before Congress for consideration that it was necessary for the President to have a free hand in the treaty negotiations so that he could deal on a basis of equality with the heads of foreign governments, the representation being made that they had similar broad authority. However, it is noteworthy that with respect to the great majority of the trade treaties which have been negotiated, the foreign legislative bodies concerned have reserved the right to approve the treaties before they become finally effective. Why should not the Congress of the United States exercise the same right of review?

HOUSE SHOULD APPROVE TREATIES AS WELL AS SENATE

Some of those who are advocating congressional ratification of the treaties propose to limit such ratification to the body at the other end of the Capitol, on the theory, I suppose, that it has the exclusive constitutional right to do so. In my bill, however, I have provided for approval of the treaties by the House as well as by the Senate, because they directly affect the revenue, and this House has the exclusive power to originate revenue measures. I might point out that while the other body formally ratified the Cuban reciprocity treaty of 1902, the treaty did not become effective until enabling legislation, which originated in the House, had been passed, putting into effect the reductions in duty therein provided for. It is interesting to note, also, that the Collier tradeagreement bill which the Democratic majority of this House formulated and passed in 1932, during the last Republican administration, provided for House and Senate approval of the trade agreements authorized thereby. It will be remembered that the general trade treaties which the President was authorized to negotiate under the tariff acts of 1897 and 1913 also required House and Senate approval.

This House, in the interest of preserving its constitutional prerogatives, should never recognize that approval of the present trade treaties by the other body alone would be sufficient. They have that right so far as ordinary treaties are concerned, but a trade treaty which reduces rates of duty fixed by Congress is not an ordinary treaty.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. Can the gentleman give the House any information at this time or will he place in the Record figures showing the value of exports from this country as well as the value of imports so that we will be able to see just how many million dollars the balance of trade is in favor of the United States?

Mr. TREADWAY. I may say to the gentleman I endeavored to secure and did secure the estimate of the cost of including in my remarks tables showing the difference between the rates in the trade treaty and existing law previous to the trade-treaty program, but the expense was so great that in the interest of economy I did not ask permission to insert that with my remarks.

Mr. COCHRAN. Cannot the gentleman place in the REC-ORD the balance in favor of the United States? That will only take a few figures.

Mr. TREADWAY. I shall be glad at some future time to go into that whole subject.

Mr. COCHRAN. How about putting it in his speech now? Mr. TREADWAY. It is not part of these remarks.

Mr. COCHRAN. Those figures alone would show that the gentleman's argument is not sound.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman is mistaken in that respect.

Mr. COCHRAN. Does the gentleman want to go back to the Smoot-Hawley Act?

Mr. TREADWAY. We have ample ways of amending the Smoot-Hawley Act that you gentlemen never availed yourselves of, and until you do so do not force any more of these trade treaties down our throats.

Mr. COCHRAN. We found a way to repeal it, which was much better.

Mr. TREADWAY. Why do you not put it into effect? Mr. COCHRAN. We are putting it into effect.

Mr. TREADWAY. Why do you not come before Congress with your rates rather than go around the back door and behind locked doors telling foreign people they can make our rates and treaties? That is what you did. We will not stand for that at all.

Mr. REED of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. REED of New York. It would be very interesting if the gentleman would include in his remarks the value of the pay rolls of the United States which have been the principal export of this country during the trade-agreement program.

Mr. TREADWAY. I believe that is a very good suggestion, although I have not the figures at this time.

The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case] tells me that the figures he would like to see put in the Record are those which would show the extent to which these so-called trade treaties have traded off the prosperity of our own producers. He feels, as I do, that we should be more concerned with the purchasing power of our own people than those in foreign countries, inasmuch as domestic trade is also a two-way street.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Minne-

Mr. KNUTSON. Carrying a little further the thought of the gentleman from Missouri, when the gentleman from Massachusetts gets around to putting in the Record the figures of exports and imports he might divide the subject of exports and separate from the other items the amounts of old iron we have been shipping to Japan and which is being used to kill the Chinese. This is one of the big items of export. [Applause.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Following up the idea of the gentleman from Minnesota, it will be found that the chief item of export from this country today is war materials.

Mr. KNUTSON. Why, certainly. It is 52 percent.

TRADE-TREATY PROGRAM A CERTAIN MAJOR ISSUE IN 1940

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that in my opinion the ruinous trade-treaty program of the present administration will be one of the principal issues in the next election. The newspapers of the country have been flooded with the one-sided and frequently misleading propaganda of the State Department purporting to show the alleged benefits thereunder, but nothing is ever said about the increase in imports as a result of the treaties or the great cost at which small increases in exports to individual countries are obtained.

It seems to me that in the public interest some of the facts on the other side should be brought out. It is the duty and responsibility of the minority party to bring these facts to the attention of the people, and I, as one minority Member, expect to do my share in endeavoring to awaken the country to a realization of what is actually going on under the tradetreaty program.

It should, of course, be understood that the treaty program is strictly a New Deal proposition. It was vigorously opposed by the Republican minority in both branches when it was enacted in 1934. At the time it was extended for another 3 years in 1937, we again opposed it with all our vigor, and we shall continue to oppose it as long as the present destructive methods are continued.

The issues between the two parties over the tariff are clear: The New Deal administration favors the importation of foreign goods that compete with and displace the products of American agriculture, industry, and labor. The Republican Party favors a reciprocity policy which goes hand in hand with protection for our own people, under which adequate duties will be maintained on competitive foreign imports, and our surplus products will be exchanged for foreign products we need but do not produce ourselves.

The doubling of the representation of the Republican Party in the present Congress shows that the people are beginning to realize what the New Deal is doing to them. In the next Congress we are going to have more than enough Republicans to wipe out the present trade-treaty program, which is so detrimental to the interests of our people, and restore the Republican policy of protection under which our country prospered for a century and a half.

INCREASED EXPORTS NOT DUE TO TREATY PROGRAM

Mr. Speaker, under permission granted to extend my remarks, let me refer to the results of the operation of the tradetreaty program. Statistics for the full year 1938 are not yet available. However, we may compare our foreign trade in the calendar year 1937 with the calendar year 1935, the first year in which the trade-treaty program began to be effective.

One of the chief points stressed by the State Department propaganda has been that our exports to treaty countries increased by 60 percent, whereas our exports to nontreaty countries increased by only 39 percent, from 1935 to 1937. On the surface, this makes it look like the treaty program has been an important factor in increasing our export trade. However, if the trade is analyzed on a regional basis it will be seen that the figures prove nothing. For example, exports to Europe show a greater increase to agreement countries—59 percent as compared with 22 percent in the case of nontreaty countries.

But just the reverse is true in the case of South America. There exports to nonagreement countries increased by 93 percent as compared with only a 65-percent increase in our exports to countries with which we have treaties.

Analyzing our European trade more closely, we find that while exports to Switzerland, a treaty country, increased by only 26 percent, exports to Norway, a nontreaty country, increased by 63 percent. Likewise exports to France, a treaty country, increased by 40 percent, while exports to Czechoslovakia, at that time a nontreaty country, increased by 306 percent. Even our exports to Germany, a nontreaty country and a nonbeneficiary of the generalization of our tariff reductions, increased by 35 percent.

All of which proves that the increase in our export trade cannot necessarily be credited, even in the case of treaty countries, to the treaty program. Indeed, it will be found that the bulk of the increase in exports to several of the treaty countries is in articles on which we were not granted concessions in duty. For example, in the case of Sweden, out of a total increase in our exports to that country from 1935 to 1937 amounting to $26,000,000, commodities granted a reduction in duty accounted for less than $400,000, or 1½ percent of the total.

IMPORTS HAVE INCREASED FASTER THAN EXPORTS

The fact that this country has been on the losing end of the trade-treaty program is clearly proven by the fact that since it has been in effect our imports have increased much faster than our exports. From 1934 to 1937 the increase in the physical quantity of our exports was less than 40 percent. On the other hand, the volume of our imports increased by 52 percent. But here is the significant fact: During this period the quantity of imports of dutiable items on which tariff concessions had been granted increased by 123 percent.

On the basis of dollar value, our imports increased by 93.4 percent from 1934 to 1937, while our exports increased by only 56.9 percent.

WAR MATERIALS ARE IMPORTANT PART OF INCREASED EXPORT TRADE

An analysis of our export trade shows that most of the increase in exports consisted of war materials and goods needed in connection with programs of national defense abroad. Of the total increase in exports from 1934 to 1937, only 25 percent of the value was represented by products of farms, forests, and fisheries.

In 1934, when the trade-treaty legislation was passed, we had a favorable balance of trade, or excess of exports over imports, amounting to $478,000,000. In 1935, as a result of the more rapid increase in imports than in exports, our favorable balance dropped to $235,000,000. The next year, 1936, it fell to only $34,000,000. This downward trend continued until the middle of 1937, at which time we had an unfavorable balance of $145,000,000. During the last half of 1937, however, the trend was reversed, due principally to an increase in our exports of war materials and supplies.

The value of our exports of these commodities rose from $447,000,000 in 1936 to $776,000,000 in 1937. This increase in the exports of war supplies more than made up our favorable trade balance for 1937, showing that without these exports we would have had a heavy adverse balance in that year.

It is somewhat ironical that the trade-treaty program, which is supposedly dedicated to world peace, should by reason of an increase in our exports of war materials, be spared the responsibility of having brought about an unfavorable trade balance for the first time in half a century. Of course, the increase in these exports of war materials is not due to any concessions obtained under the treaty program, but the State Department proudly assumes full credit for the favorable trade balance.

Let me just call attention to a single item in the war materials group, scrap iron, of which Japan is the largest purchaser, having bought from us 1,900,000 gross tons in 1937. In the March 12, 1938, issue of Commerce Reports, published by the Department of Commerce, there is an article entitled "United States Leading Scrap Iron Exporter." This article refers to the fact that we exported in 1937 more than 4,000,000 tons, valued at $80,000,000, as compared with exports of 773,000 tons in 1933, valued at only $6,874,000.

FAVORABLE TRADE BALANCE FOR 1938 NOT DUE TO INCREASED EXPORTS Trade figures for the full year of 1938 are not yet available, but when they are published they will undoubtedly show a large favorable trade balance for the past year. We may expect the State Department to come forward once more and attribute this fact to the trade-treaty program. However, if we analyze the trade for the first 9 months of 1938, as referred to in the November 5 issue of Commerce Reports, it will be found that this favorable trade balance cannot in any way be attributed to the treaty program. In the first place, through September 1938 our export trade had fallen off slightly, as compared with the same period in 1937, apparently indicating that foreign markets have not been opening up as expected. On the import side of the ledger we find that imports declined materially in 1938 over 1937. Again, this is not due to the trade-treaty program. since its policy and purpose is to increase, and not curtail, the importation of foreign goods. It is this decline in imports, coupled with the large exports of war materials, which enable us to have a favorable trade balance in 1938.

The Commerce Department gives us the reason for the decline in imports last year. In the publication to which I have just referred it says:

Import trade reflected the recession in business activity and the improvement in agricultural production in the United States.

The Department of Agriculture, in its publication Foreign Crops and Markets, for August 13, 1938, says, in referring to the decline in imports last year:

The decrease in business activity influences the value of practically all our imports, both aricultural and other. It was accompanied by lower prices and by a general falling off in demand. Raw materials were needed in smaller quantity by factories and finished products were purchased to a lesser extent by workers.

I commend this latter quotation to the Secretary of State and all others who attempt to defend the present trade-treaty program. The Secretary contends that it is the tariff which prevents foreign countries from trading with us. However, the fact is, as proven by both the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce, that the amount of goods we buy from abroad depends directly upon the purchasing power of our people. If they are prosperous, they buy foreign goods, which are needed to supplement our own. If they are not prosperous, they reduce their purchases in proportion. That is plain. Our prosperity depends very little upon the foreign market. If more attention were given to improving the lot of our own people, foreign countries would have plenty of opportunity to sell us merchandise. Even under reduced tariffs our people will not buy foreign goods if they do not have the purchasing power.

The bumper farm crops of 1937 affected both the reduction in the imports of farm crops and the increase of farm exports. Imports were no longer needed to supplement our own curtailed production, while the grain surpluses available for export, says the Department of Agriculture, "gave foreigners an opportunity to buy United States grain at competitive prices for the first time in more than 4 years." In passing, I might point out that there is an object lesson in this latter statement.

Trade-treaty proponents will doubtless claim that the increase in grain exports last year was due to the treaty program. The Department of Agriculture shows that there is no basis for that claim. Moreover, the fact is that few concessions have been obtained for American grain under trade treaties, and, in any event, most of the increase in exports had been to nontreaty countries. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the Record at this point such figures as I can secure from the Department of Commerce with respect to exports and imports.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

SUMMARY OF FOREIGN TRADE OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. COCHRAN. The following table shows the foreign trade of the United States as published by the Department of Commerce for the first 11 months of 1938 as compared with a similar period for 1937:

[Millions of dollars]

[Permons of donars]	Secretary of the second
19 April 6 Tan and 1 Tan and 2 Tan a	11 mo	Percent
	1937	1938	decrease
ExportsImports	3, 026 2, 875	2, 825 1, 789	7 40
Total	151 698 1, 483	1, 036 763 877	- 3 . A

The above figures show that there was a slight decrease in total exports from the United States during the first 11 months of 1938 in comparison with a similar period of 1937, while exports of agricultural products increased by some $65,000,000. On the other hand, the table shows that the imports of agricultural products, including noncompetitive articles not produced in the United States, decreased by more than one-half billion dollars for the comparative periods.

The question frequently arises as to the effects of trade agreements on our foreign trade. The latest study by the Department of Commerce shows the effects of the agreements for the year 1937–38 in comparison with nonagreement years, as follows:

[Millions of dollars]

August firm en 11. 185 û	Comparison of last 12-month period, end- ing June 1938, with preagreement period calendar years 1934 and 1935
A STATE OF STREET	1934 and 1935	Fiscal	Change
	(annual average)	year 1937–38	Value	Percent
UNITED STATES EXPORTS, INCLUDING REEXPORTS	Ercsus (5) ult (Esu)		Andey	Wallian Syrq Sa
Total, all trade agreement countries	756. 8 1, 451. 0	1, 257. 7 2, 143. 4	+500.9 +692.4	+66. 2 +47. 7
Total, all countries	2, 027. 8	3, 401. 1	+1, 192. 3	+54.0
UNITED STATES GENERAL IMPORTS	4		SILE	(C ST)
Total, all trade agreement countries Total, all nonagreement countries	774.4 1,077.9	977. 6 1, 383. 7	+203. 2 +306. 7	+26. 2 +28. 5
Total, all countries	1, 851. 4	2, 361. 3	+509.9	+27.6

The above data show that during the latest 12-month period, ending with June 1938, the relative increase in value of American exports, as compared with the 2-year preagreement period, 1934-35, was 66.2 percent to the agreement countries and 47.7 percent to the nonagreement countries. It is seen that there was only a slight difference between the relative increase of imports from agreement and nonagreement countries.

The Department of Agriculture has broken down the figures by farm products as follows:

[Millions of dollars]

United States (domestic) exports	Year ending June 30,	Increase (+) or decrease (-)
	1938	1937–38 over 1935–36
Farm products: To the 16 agreement countries. To all other countries.	288 600	+102 +20	Percent +55 +3

This table shows that exports of United States farm products to the 16 countries rose by $102,000,000, or by 55 percent from the fiscal year 1935-36—when only three of the agreements were in effect throughout the year—to the fiscal year 1937-38, the latest year for which data are available. Farm exports to all other countries rose only $20,000,000, or by 3 percent, for the same period.

The imports of agricultural commodities from the tradeagreement and nonagreement countries for a similar period have been as follows:

[Millions of dollars]

United States imports (for consumption)	Year end- ing June	Increase (+) or de- crease (-)
one will have a desired - new	30, 1938	1937–38 over 1935–36
Agricultural commodities: From the 16 agreement countries From all other countries	454 701	-14 +27	Percent -3+4

These figures should finally and definitely show that agriculture has not suffered through imports influenced by trade agreements.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the special orders for today I may be permitted to have 5 minutes to make a statement to the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Eaton] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, as a humble taxpayer under the New Deal economy I was privileged by means of the radio to gather a few crumbs of political and economic lore that fell from the rich abundance of the master's table at the Jackson Day feast on Saturday evening.

To one who has been denied participation in the blessings of the more abundant life it was reassuring and comforting beyond measure to realize that even after 6 years of the New Deal there were still left some thousand or more princes of privilege who could pay $100 apiece for a meal.

I am sure that this exhibition of Spartan self-denial will greatly encourage the one-third of our people who still remain ill fed, ill clothed, and ill housed and who have been the object of such tender and expensive solicitude on the part of the New Deal.

The only fly in the rich ointment of the published menu of this Lucullian feast seemed to be the wine, which was of the sour vintage of 1929, before the sun of the New Deal had risen to bathe the Nation's vineyards in sweetness and light.

The speech of our versatile and always unpredictable President was unique in several particulars. It was a well-balanced speech garnished with an equal combination of war clubs and olive branches. It might be fairly described as an ambidextrous speech, for in it with one hand he buried the hatchet of political strife, while with the other he immediately

In one particular the President's Jackson Day address to the faithful and the faithless alike was unique beyond any public utterance of any Chief Executive in our entire history. It was based upon a personal radio contact and conversation which, in the quiet of an evening hour, the President had had with the dead.

Parenthetically—to use the President's phrase in which he served notice that there might be a new party in 1940-it would have been of immense theological interest if during this conversation Mr. Roosevelt had thought to ascertain exactly where the late President Jackson is now located and in what form of labor he is now engaged.

I am glad that our President has been able to make this supernatural contact with one whom he so greatly admires and with whose political policies, methods, and achievements he is in such complete accord and has so closely copied. The striking similarity in objectives and achievements between these two Chief Executives is outlined in the closing paragraph of the Encylopedia Britannica's biography of Andrew Jackson. I quote:

Jackson is perhaps the only President of whom it may be said that he went out of office far more popular than he was when he entered. When he went into office he had no political opinions, only some popular notions.

Now, listen to this: Here is where Jackson and Roosevelt join hands and march like two lovers along the lane of human progress.

He-

Jackson-

left his party strong, perfectly organized, and enthusiastic on a platform of low expenditures, payment of the debt, no expenditure for public improvement, or for glory or display in any form, and—low taxes.

Mirabile dictu-

Now that we are communing with Mr. Jackson without the use of the radio, I may be permitted to read another sentence or two from one whom, although I dwell in the Stygian darkness of Republicanism, I consider one of the great Americans of our history.

Mr. Jackson, in a letter under date of July 4, 1824, makes this statement. I am reading this to show how intensely loyal the New Deal has been to the Jacksonian method and is considered a national blessing, then we, like Great Britain, can get on by borrowing. But as I believe it a national curse, my vow shall be to pay the national debt, to prevent a moneyed aristocracy from growing up around our administration-

If a national debt-

Parenthetically, that suggests that within the New Deal itself there may even be some of these princes of privilege. these economic royalists, sneaking right up on the President here and now if he does not watch out-to prevent a moneyed aristocracy from growing up around our administration that must bend it to its views, and ultimately destroy the liberty of our country.

Again Mr. Jackson writes:

The management of the public revenue-that searching operation in all governments—is among the most delicate and important trusts in ours, and it will, of course, demand no inconsiderable share of my official solicitude. Under every aspect in which it can be considered it would appear that advantage must result from the observance of a strict and faithful economy.

The Members of the House must be startled as I go on reading by the close resemblance between Mr. Jackson's ideas and the ideas of the present incumbent of the White House.

LXXXIV-12

This I shall aim at the more anxiously, both because it will facilitate the extinguishment of the national debt, the unnecessary duration of which is incompatible with real independence, and because it will counteract that tendency to public and private profligacy which a profuse expenditure of money by the Government is but too apt to engender.

This is the Seventy-sixth Congress of the United States. It is composed of a high-minded class of representatives of character and ability. I have never been able to associate myself with the view so widely disseminated nowadays that the Congress of the United States is composed of accidents and weaklings. I have been associated all my life with able and devoted groups of men and women in religion, in politics, in business, and in education, and I say here that in a long career of 50 years I have never had the privilege of being associated with a group of men and women of higher moral and mental caliber and character, taken as a whole, than the Members of the Congress of the United States. And this is equally true on both sides of the aisle. So, when Andrew Jackson calls our attention to the dangers inherent in public debt, I lay it heavily upon the conscience and intelligence of the new Members and the old Members of this House to face our present chaotic and menacing debt situation with courage and competence.

Mr. Jackson continues:

Powerful auxiliaries to the attainment of this desirable end are to be found in the regulations provided by the wisdom of Congress for the specific appropriation of public money and the prompt accountability of public officers.

In other words, Andrew Jackson's message to this Congress is that when the leader of the New Deal came here the other day and laid on our doorstep the mangled remains of the fiscal policy of his administration and said, in effect, though not using the words, "Here is your baby; take care of it," it is up to every one of us to discharge our constitutional obligations, assume our individual responsibility, and see if, by united and intelligent action, we cannot at least begin to lift this Nation out of the abyss into which it has fallen.

In the brief time allotted I can only touch upon a few of the points made by the President in his historic Jackson Day address. In general, I gather that he is much perturbed by the voters' rejection of the New Deal in the election of November 8 on the ground that their adverse verdict indicates the return of the Republican Party to power in 1940. I gather further that the President disapproves of the Republican Party as a whole, which is somewhat surprising, and further, which is even more surprising, he disapproves of that important element in the Democratic Party which still bases its political faith upon the fundamental principles of American life and government as set forth in the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, would you be good enough to quell these New Deal disturbances over here?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PATMAN). The Chair calls the House to order on both sides of the Chamber and the Sergeant at Arms will please help maintain order.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. It is really surprising what noise rubber stamps can make at times.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Since the iron of discovery and defeat has entered into the soul of the rubber stamps, they naturally make a little more noise than usual.

These two great steadying sections of our citizens, the Republicans and real Democrats, Mr. Roosevelt classifies as "tweedledums" and "tweedledees." But I cannot agree with him in locating all the "dum" tweedles in the Democratic Party. Evidently he fears that there may be enough of these two species of "tweedles" in 1940 to defeat the New Deal.

The President attributes the success of the Democratic Party in 1932, first, to the excessive fat of the Republicans. and, second, to the fact that the Democratic Party during that summer and autumn had a program of action and sounded sincere.

I generally agree with his analysis of the 1932 turn-over, but the President seems to be oblivious to the fact that the turn-over in November 1938 was due to the fact that the people have lost their faith in the sincerity of the promises of the New Deal, which Mr. Roosevelt and his unofficial advisers have managed to substitute for the real Democratic Party. Let us examine for a moment a few of these New Deal promises made by the President himself and see if we can determine just why they no longer sound sincere. Mr. Roosevelt has said:

Campaign promises are supposed to be the responsibility of the whole party. At least that is the theory. But in practice the head of the party alone is held responsible for them.

Now, to just what campaign promises did Mr. Roosevelt in this statement refer? Was it his promise that "the cost of government will be reduced at least 25 percent?"

Or was it his promise to balance the Budget; and if so, which of his several promises?

Or his promise that a lot of "useless commissions, bureaus, and functions" in government shall be abolished?

Or his promise to "get more more service from the Department of Agriculture for less money"?

Or his promise that taxes were too high and must be reduced?

Or his promise that there must be no taxes on food and clothing, whose burden is actually shifted to the consumer?

Or his promise to reduce the Federal deficit; and if so, which of his several promises?

Or his promise that "we must stop borrowing to meet these continuing deficits"?

Or his promise that there must be no "doctrine of regulation and legislation by master minds * * *"?

Or his promise that there must not be brought about "a government by oligarchy masquerading as democracy," under which "it is fundamentally essential that all authority and control be centralized in our National Government"?

Or his promise to "halt this steady process of building commissions and regulatory bodies and special legislation like huge inverted pyramids over every one of the simple constitutional provisions"?

Or his promise that "this 'home rule' is a most important thing, a most vital thing, if we were to continue along the course on which we have so far progressed with unprecedented success"?

Or his promise that "every new or old problem of government must be solved, if it is to be solved to the satisfaction of the people of the whole country, by each State in its own way"?

Or his promise that "the first and foremost" provisions of the Constitution must be enforced, that "every citizen is entitled to live his own life in his own way so long as his conduct does not injure any of his fellow men"?

Or his promise that "Washington must not be encouraged to interfere in the conduct of public utilities, of banks, of insurance, of business, of agriculture, of education, of social welfare, and of a dozen other important features"?

Or his promise that there should be "no interference by the Government in business"?

Or his promise that his administration would "cooperate" with business in a "spirit of helpfulness" instead of treating it with "hostility"?

Or his promise that "the Government should assume the function of economic regulation only as a last resort"?

Or his promise that there "must be no governmental control of prices"?

Or his promise that prices were too low and must go up?

Or his promise that prices were too high and must come down?

Or his promise that prices were both too low and too high and must go up and come down at the same time? [Laughter.]

Or his promise that "we condemn the unsound policy of restricting agricultural products to the demands of the domestic market"?

Or his promise that "there must be no coercion in the farm plan"?

Or his promise that, to quote his own words, "I dislike regimentation, not only when it is carried on by an informal group amounting to an economic government of the United States, but when it is done by the Government of the United States itself"?

Or his promise that the Government should not become "a prying bureaucracy"?

Or his promise that the Government would not be taken off the gold standard?

Or his promise that the three coequal, coordinate, independent constitutional departments of Government should be kept that way?

Or his promise that "the Bill of Rights must always be upheld" and no citizen coerced through relief or otherwise to surrender his political independence?

Or his promise that relief must not be polluted with politics?

Or his promise of a fact-finding tariff commission "free from political interference"?

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. EATON of New Jersey. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I want to warn the gentleman that if you keep somebody in a hot chamber too long fatal results are often reported. This matter of New Deal promises is a pretty hot chamber. I think the gentleman ought to be careful. [Laughter.]

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. I am not surprised that the gentleman makes an appeal for mercy, but he must remember that all of these promises sounded sincere. Well, I am nearly through, although the glut of material makes it possible for me to continue almost indefinitely.

Now, to answer the gentleman's suggestion, since few or none of these 57 varieties of promises made by the President, as head of the New Deal, seem to have been fulfilled, is it surprising that the New Deal program of 1938 did not "sound as sincere" to the voters as did the constructive American program of the real Democratic Party in 1932?

One other statement in the President's address is of prophetic interest. He said:

The younger generation of Americans, by a very large majority, intend to keep on "going places" with the New Deal.

Whatever the intentions of the youth of the land may be as to their "going places with the New Deal," there is one place to which, because of the New Deal's fiscal policy of waste, extravagance, and debt, they and their children after them will have to keep going as long as they live, whether they wish it or not. That place is the tax collector's office. That is where we are all, of every age and condition, now "going places" with the New Deal.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Or the poorhouse.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Notwithstanding the President's unique privilege of taking "shooting" and "counting" lessons from a supernatural instructor; in spite of his glowing eloquence and his loyal following of devoted New Dealers who not only "sound sincere" but are sincere, I find myself impelled today to take my place along with that great and growing army of Democratic tweedledums and Republican tweedledees in opposition to the New Deal. In fact, I have been opposed to it ever since it turned its back upon the sound and constructive American platform of the Democratic Party in 1932.

It rests upon two unsound principles: First, that you can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear; and, second, that you can get more meat out of an egg than there is in it.

It is not Democratic. It is not Republican. It is an irrational concatenation of economic and political cacophonies. [Laughter.] It will pass like an abnormal convulsion of Nature, but it will leave behind it a grim harvest of loss and ruin which American-minded men and women will have to reap.

The reasoned opposition to the New Deal which found expression in the last election, of November 8, and which is growing stronger every day among all classes and sections has little or no interest in the current political cant about "liberalism" or "conservatism." It is against the New Deal for causes and reasons furnished by the New Deal itself. It admits the glamorous personal qualities of Mr. Roosevelt, the father and founder and permanent high priest of the New Deal. It admits the desirability of those excessively noble objectives in which the New Deal claims exclusive right.

The people of what used to be free America are going to blast the New Deal out of power in 1940 because the policies of the New Deal prevent the return of good times. They have made up their minds that it is not necessary for our country to keep on floundering in the bog holes of economic depression.

Their reasoning rests upon a rock foundation of economic fact. In the 11 years from 1919 to 1929, inclusive, the American people on their own private initiative invested in durable goods, permanent construction, and maintenance over $210,000,000,000, or an average of $19,000,000,000 a year. In the period of the great depression and during the 6 years of the New Deal this form of private long-term investment has shrunken to an average investment of around five or six billion a year. It is this long-term private investment for future spending and profit which is the chief factor in solving the problem of unemployment. This is the foundation stone of good times. And this supreme source of prosperity for all the people is being destroyed by the New Deal's policy of wasteful experimentations, punitive taxation, and continual intrusion into the private affairs and personal liberties of the people. Except where absolutely necessary, people are afraid to invest because of their fear of the future under the New Deal and its aftermath of uncertainty.

Here lies the key to real recovery. Here is the real problem with which we Members of the Seventy-sixth Congress, regardless of party labels or livery, must deal.

If we can succeed in reopening this fountain of employment and prosperity for all the people, we shall save America. If we fail, who dares predict the result? [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford] is recognized for 20 minutes.

DOMESTIC SUGAR INDUSTRY

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, as announced yesterday, what I desire to discuss at this particular moment is the domestic sugar industry; meaning by that, those producers of sugar operating under the American flag located in Puerto Rico, in the Virgin Islands, domestic cane in Louisiana and Florida, domestic beet in the Northern and Northwestern States, cane in the Philippine Islands, and cane sugar in the Hawaiian Islands; and the relationship of the domestic industry to the current so-called reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba and what I like to term the "subsidized agreement" with the Cuban Republic.

In 1934 President Roosevelt signed a bill under date of May 9, known as the Jones-Costigan Sugar Act, an amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Section 8a (1) of that act reads:

Having due regard to the welfare of domestic producers and to the protection of domestic consumers and to a just relation between the prices received by domestic producers and the prices paid by domestic consumers, the Secretary of Agriculture may, in order to effectuate the declared policy of this act, from time to time by orders or regulations, "establish market quotas."

These last three words are not in the bill except in a very expanded form.

Under date of September 1, 1937, the President signed another sugar bill, which provides:

That in the interest of international trade and for the purpose of protecting the domestic sugar industry and provide sugar to our people at a cost and at a price not in excess of that necessary to perpetuate the domestic sugar industry, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to establish marketing quotas.

The Secretary has proceeded under these acts to say to those engaged in the production of sugar in the continental United States and our offshore areas—Hawaii and the Philippine Islands, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands—that they may produce and ship in interstate commerce a designated amount of sugar for our people to consume. In establishing marketing quotas they have also extended those quotas to the sugar producers of Cuba—which is a foreign country, a republic—shipping sugar to United States market.

The marketing quotas established for the year 1939—expressed in short tons, raw value—which we are now entering into, gave to Cuba 1,953,759 tons to be sold to our people the coming 12 months; gave to the domestic beet-sugar industry 1,584,083 tons; to the cane people of Louisiana and Florida 429,434 tons; to the Hawaiian Islands 922,082 tons; to Puerto Rico 815,582 tons; and the Virgin Islands, 3,923; the Philippine Islands 991,020 tons; and to foreign lands the sum of 80,683 tons. These are the selling quotas established for the coming year by the Secretary of Agriculture under the authority given him by the present sugar act, signed September 1, 1937.

What has happened and what is happening from the standpoint of the treaty with Cuba, from the standpoint of the strain which is being put on the capital structures of the domestic sugar industry under the American flag as a result of this working out of the sugar plan, which has now been in operation a little more than 4 years? I want to acquaint you with a few of the facts brought down to date as quickly as I can in this short period. When the President presented to Congress a message early in 1937 looking forward to the enactment of the September 1, 1937, Sugar Act he dealt with a price structure on sugar in this country to the consumer; and I think every man and woman who watched the situation had reason to assume that the enactment of the 1937 act was not for the purpose of putting up the price of sugar to the consumer, but was for the purpose of protecting the consumer along with the domestic sugar industry. The preamble of the act reads as follows:

To regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes.

That was the purpose of the 1937 act. I think that is supposed to be the purpose, to a great extent, of this reciprocal trade agreement program which we have heard so much about—to promote trade and lift the standard of living of our people. I ask the new Members of Congress—and it does not hurt us older men to review our sugar history a little bit—to keep in mind where these areas are located, where our sugar bowls are. About twenty-two hundred miles off the coast of California is one—Hawaii. About 8,000 miles from San Francisco by boat lie the Philippine Islands. A short distance from Ke; West lies Cuba, and a little farther away lies Puerto Rico. In the continental United States we have the southern cane, the north and northwestern beet. These places I have mentioned are our sugar bowls.

Incidentally, the one time that we had to depend upon Cuba for our sugar supply for a period of 5 or 6 months, in 1920, the price of sugar went to $35 per 100 pounds to the American consumer, because we were then dependent upon Cuba for our sugar supply; we were dependent upon a foreign country for our sugar supply. The exploitation by Cuba at that time of the pocketbooks of the American housewives was sufficient to pay, in that 6 months' period, for your domestic beet-sugar industry. We do not want that to happen again in time of peace or in time of war. We should, therefore, produce in this area—the continental United States of America—more than 26 percent of what we are now consuming.

We should produce more in peacetime and more in wartime than we do at the present time. But if you are to have even 26 percent of that sugar produced in this area, there will have to be some type of protection afforded the domestic sugar industry, which was the intent of the Jones-Costigan Act of 1934 and the present sugar bill of 1937.

Let us get into some of the figures which the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] requested the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] to submit. I anticipated somebody might ask this question. Let us look at the picture here.

Sugar control has been in operation 4 years. Incidentally, Cuba is a sugar bowl. For 4 years prior to the sugar-control situation Cuba's total sales to the world—all in round figures—amounted to $451,000,000. For the 4 years under sugar control it amounted to $576,000,000, an increase of $125,000,000. Her total purchases from the world during the first 4 years were $336,000,000; for the second 4 years under sugar control $401,000,000, an increase of $65,000,000. That is world trade. It shows an increase in Cuba's purchases of $65,000,000.

Let us bring this down to the United States. During the 4 years prior to sugar control Cuba sold us $320,000,000 worth of goods. Under sugar control she sold us $455,000,000 worth of goods, an increase of $135,000,000.

Now, I am going to show you what it cost to get that business. She purchased from the United States during the 4 years prior to control, which were those bad, lean years of 1932 and 1933—keep that in mind—$188,000,000 worth of goods; under the 4 years of control $252,000,000 worth of goods, an increase of $64,000,000 under sugar control.

Let us consider the gross income from sugar for 4 years before and after the control program.

Cuba received a gross income from sugar during the 4 years prior to control in an amount of $223,000,000. The domestic sugar industry received $858,000,000.

Income under the 4 years of control: Cuba received $370,-000,000 while the domestic sugar industries received $1,115,-000,000. The increase to Cuba under control was 65.7 percent and to the domestic sugar industry only 30 percent. Keep those figures in mind. The loss of revenue—$213,900,000—which the American taxpayers and the American housewife suffered in order to pick up that measly increase of $65,700,000 in trade with Cuba is reflected in table 3.

When the present administration went into power there was a $2 duty on sugar coming into this country from Cuba, or $40 a ton. The first step taken by this administration was to reduce this duty from $2 per hundred on 96 degree raw sugar down to $1.50 per hundred pounds. That was a $10 per ton loss in duty. The revenue loss during that short period amounted to $1,659,000. Then we reduced the dutyand when I say "we" I mean Congress, the present administration leading-on sugar coming in from Cuba from $1.50 per hundred to 90 cents per hundred. That was an additional $12 per ton cut in duty. Under the quota system, mind you, Cuba would have shipped as much sugar into this country under the $2 duty as she will ship under the 90-cent duty or the $1.50 duty, or the proposed 75-cent duty. Keep that in mind. She cannot resist our market. That is a subsidy we are paying to Cuba and that is the reason I term this a "subsidy agreement." So altogether, to hurry on, we have paid a premium to Cuba of $213,900,000 in order to pick up an increase in trade of $65,700,000.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman tell the Members of the House if the laboring men of Cuban producers of sugar got the benefit of this magnificent subsidy; and if they did not, who actually got it and who actually owns the sugar plantations and the sugar business in Cuba?

Mr. CRAWFORD. The laboring people of Cuba have not received these benefits. Here is the proof of that statement: Any man who travels in Cuba and studies the economic conditions and standards of living gets proof of that fact. Any man who checks the stock ownership as best he can of the plantations and mills in Cuba knows it is an "absentee ownership," and as the earnings are made they flow out of Cuba to certain consolidated interests, located mostly in the United States, tied in very closely with the National City Bank, the Chase National Bank, the Royal Bank of Canada, the National Shawmut Bank, Hayden, Stone & Co., and a few lesser lights.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. If you will break down these export of goods from the United States, you will find that that type of goods which the worker in Cuba uses has not increased in a manner which reflects that the worker in Cuba, the common herd, received these increased benefits of $213,900,-000. Keep this in mind: As you reduce the duty on sugar coming into this country from Cuba you increase the amount of net earnings to the Cuban companies and fortify their capital structure. They take advantage of the decrease in duty, and the benefit flows to the Cuban industries. Of course, the State Department, in my opinion, desired to do that when it promoted the enactment of these bills. I am not objecting to that particular phase of the situation primarily provided the situation is handled in a way that it does not destroy the domestic sugar industry in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, the United States cane- and beet-sugar industries; permits our people to have sugar at a reasonable price and all at the same time lets the domestic industry expand as it desires to do so.

I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of the President's indication of potential wars brewing, does the gentleman not think it would be well to expand the American sugar industry and raise the tariff on Cuban sugar as a matter of national defense?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Directly answering that question, I cannot imagine, I cannot comprehend the situation which has developed during the last few days wherein the dictator of Cuba, Colonel Batista, visited our State Department and our Capitol, as published under date of November 29 in the New York Times, a photostatic copy of which I have here, and then returned to Cuba and made an announcement to the effect that he had reached an agreement. Who had reached an agreement? The little dictator from Cuba had reached an agreement with the State Department under which the duty on Cuban sugar is to be further reduced through the reciprocal trade agreement set-up from 90 cents per 100 to 75 cents per hundred. I believe that almost borders on scandal, myself.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Michigan may be extended 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAPES. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman from Michigan let me finish my answer to the question of the gentleman from Wisconsin? Then I shall be pleased to yield.

As a result of that situation, which borders on scandal, and which in my opinion is teetotally in rank violation of the provisions of the reciprocal trade agreement acts, a Member of the body at the other end of this Capitol only yesterday afternoon, in defense of his party and the procedure of the administration, was forced to introduce a resolution which has been referred to the Senate Committee on Finance calling for an investigation to find out on what basis the little dictator from Cuba can come up here and obtain such assurance before hearings are held on an extension of or an amendment to the reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba.

Furthermore, at the present time, with the President putting such stress on the evidence of war and the necessity of fortifying our people against invasions of the dictatorships, why in the name of our people do we add dignity in such a manner as we have during the past few weeks to the dictatorial powers which have been maintained over the people of the Republic of Cuba? With all the scare of war which is gripping this country, why in the world should we move in a direction that makes our consumers of sugar almost teetotally dependent upon the island of Cuba for our sugar supply if there is to be war?

I now yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes]. Mr. MAPES. In connection with the alleged agreement that the dictator of Cuba states he has made with the State Department, to lower the tariff rate from ninety to seventy-five cents a hundred, will the gentleman elaborate a little on the statement he made earlier in his remarks that it does not matter what the tariff rate may be, the same amount of sugar is shipped into the United States from Cuba regardless of the tariff duty?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is one of the tricks in this whole proposition. Keep this in mind. Let me repeat just for a moment that the United States sugar market is allocated to certain producing areas by the Secretary of Agriculture, and, those allocations having been made, Cuba can ship to our people a definite quantity of sugar irrespective of what the world supply may be or what our needs may be, Cuba can ship her quota. Hawaii can ship a certain proportion, as can Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Although our farmers in the South and the West and the North produce more than their quota amounts to, they cannot move it into interstate commerce. These burdensome supplies hang over the shoulders of the farm producers and factory operators and all sugar owners and bear down and put a strain on their capital structures, which will begin to break in the coming months as present prices and even lower ones are realized against the stocks now on hand. It will be then the whole story will be told. The losses are not yet recorded on the balance sheets of the companies involved. We face a repetition of what happened in 1932 unless we change the course in which we are now traveling.

We learn from reports issued by the commodity houses in New York that during the year just closed and at this particular hour refined sugar is selling on the lowest basis in all history.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. MAPES. The Cuban allotment is shipped here, regardless of whether the duty is 75 cents a hundred or $2 a hundred.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman is correct. That is exactly the situation.

Keep this in mind: The island of Cuba enjoys a 40-percent preferential over other foreign countries. The full duty, for instance, is $1.87½ a hundred. Cuba is shipping sugar here on a 90 cents per hundred duty basis. Cuba should take advantage of her preferential. That would be a most constructive step for all, and by not doing so Cuba "bears" down the market price to the detriment of the whole industry. Why should the preferential be continued unless Cuba takes advantage of her gain? With the preferential, Cuba can hold the American market against other foreign shippers, and that is why she has been granted the preferential.

They—Cubans—have another advantage there, and let me point this out for just a moment.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska. Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I believe the gentleman from Michigan has been making a very good analysis of the situation. I wonder if the gentleman knows that the Department of the Interior has just recently protested the reduction contemplated in the proposed new trade agreement with Cuba? I believe the friends of sugar should do likewise.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Department of the Interior, which has charge, you might say, of the economic welfare of the people located in the Hawaiian, Puerto Rican, and the Virgin Islands, appeared before the Committee on Reciprocity Information within this last week and made one of the most scathing attacks on this proposal to reduce further the duty on sugar coming from Cuba which has ever been made in sugar history, insofar as I have been able to ascertain. Of course, the Department of the Interior must speak in behalf of the islanders.

Let me ask this question: Why was not the Department of Agriculture of the United States of America up there before that Committee on Reciprocity Information asking that this industry be protected for the benefit of the people who live on the farms of the United States?

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. REED of New York. I am very much interested in the splendid statement the gentleman is making with regard to the sugar situation. I think that he could enlighten me and the Members of this House on one question which has always puzzled me. I understand that we have literally millions of acres of land suitable to the raising of sugar beets. If that be true, why is it that these markets are given to these foreign countries rather than to developing the sugar industry here with the idea of being self-sufficient at home?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let me answer that question by reference to a map. Take the large map of the United States and starting down here around New Mexico, move northeasterly, north of St. Louis, through Indianapolis to Wheeling, W. Va., and north to the Atlantic seaboard, and one may say that nearly all of that tillable land, including the Panhandle of Texas, the north and south plains, is ideal sugargrowing territory, insofar as beet sugar is concerned. And if you will give Louisiana its proper part, it will produce 1,000,000 tons of sugar per annum in due course, and Florida will produce 500,000 tons.

Mr. REED of New York. I was just going to ask that question. We have available how many acres, would the gentleman say?

Mr. CRAWFORD. We could produce every pound of sugar needed here, which means one bag of sugar for every person in the United States per annum if we willed to do so, and we could do it on a profitable basis.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. The question asked by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Reed] recalls the fact that the Cuban sugar interests are owned by the big New York banks, and it may be possible that they have more influence here in Washington than many of us suspect.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is an observation which I support, with 20 years of study of this proposition.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Reed] asked if the gentleman knows of any reason why we were not producing our sugar at home, and why the discrimination in favor of offshore producers? I ask the gentleman whether he recalls being in the office of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes], and a Michigan delegation, when two representatives came up from the Department of Agriculture and in answer to that very question stated that the reason they proposed to give this market to the offshore area is because that area can produce it more cheaply, and that it is not profitable to grow sugar in the United States?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Oh, they even held that it is uneconomical to produce sugar in Michigan, in Indiana, and Ohio, where it is already being produced on a profitable basis, if given at all a reasonable price for the refined product.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not inclined to put that request without the consent of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners], who has been assigned time.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, the Department of Agriculture said it is uneconomical to produce sugar in the area of Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Indiana, although sugar can be produced in that area on a profitable basis to the hand laborer, to the farmer, to the mill owners, and sold to the grocery trade at not to exceed 41/2 cents per pound net. Yet the Department holds that it cannot be produced on an economical basis. It is one of the most unusual positions. I think, that has ever been taken by any Department of Agriculture, and my contention is that this Cuban experiment, in order to expand world trade, is the costliest experiment of its kind ever carried on in the history of the world.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In order to clear up some of the reasons why the American sugar interests are sacrificed, and the Cuban sugar interests taken care of, it might be interesting to know that Moody's Industrials indicates that Vincent Astor, the owner of the yacht on which the President has traveled on many occasions, is one of the heaviest stockholders of the United Fruit & Sugar Co. and the owner of Guantanamo lands and mills, and it is further interesting that the hearings of the Senate will show that 2 days before he assumed a Cabinet position Mr. Daniel C. Roper was the paid lobbyist for the Cuban sugar interests and certain American banks holding Cuban sugar property.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Some years ago a very interesting speech was made by our colleague from Iowa [Mr. COLE | pointing out the future of corn sugar and of the Jerusalem artichoke. I am anxious to know what progress has been made in that direction?

Mr. CRAWFORD. If we would go into the production of the Jerusalem artichokes—and I think that process is being kept submerged like some patents are-we would have a more digestible sweet which would replace sugar, in my opinion, and at a less cost per 100 pounds than we have at the present time, and we could grow then almost unlimited production.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. He pointed out that the Jerusalem artichoke had a richer sugar content than even our cane sugar, and could be produced successfully on every acre of tillable soil in this country.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Now, let me make this point and then I want to yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Marc-ANTONIO]. While this increase I was showing by my figures awhile ago was taking place, bear in mind that the whole world was on the upgrade insofar as international trade was concerned. In other words, if you will take the sugar-control plan, the effects of the multilateral, unilateral, and bilateral agreements and all these various things that enter into the question, if you will make a laboratory test of all that and get the figures and put them on the boiler plate, put them to a fair test, you can come to the conclusion—and my prediction is that you will come to the conclusion—that we are indeed the poorest, most inefficient, most incapable international horse traders in the ring today. [Applause.] I think it is time we began to take notice of it. [Applause.]

UNFAIR TO PUERTO RICO

Let us consider Puerto Rico for a moment with relation to this proposed further reduction of the Cuban duty from 90 cents per 100 pounds to only 75 cents per 100 pounds. It appears to me-and I feel sure the facts will support the assumption-that Puerto Rico will have to bear a most unreasonable and unjust burden. I refer you to the statement of the representative of the Department of the Interior before the Committee for Reciprocity Information. These are staggering facts we are here dealing with. To further reduce the duty when the price on refined sugar is so low and after Cuba has been treated so generously is to impose an unfair treatment to our own people. I protest against such action. I sincerely trust the Senate resolution will bring about an arrest of this speedy action. The record shows that entirely too much was said by our State Department to the Cuban official, and it was said too quickly. This all indicates the vigilance we must exert when such vast powers are extended to departments and bureaus. If an error is made in judgment, great industries may be destroyed and whole groups of people, such as the Puerto Ricans, reduced to actual peonage. Such fast work breaks down the confidence of our people in the agencies of government, and that is indeed destructive. Let us have more light on these hearings and a better check on the powers of departments and bureaus.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS HAVE A BIG STAKE IN THE AFFAIR

Mr. Speaker, let us look at the Filipinos' problem for a moment. Take the recent report of the Joint Committee on Philippine Affairs along with the Philippine Independence Act. Consider the staggering situation that will govern if the Cuban duty is reduced to 75 cents and the Filipinos find themselves paying $1.875 per 100 pounds duty. The serious problem wrapped up in "Philippine uncertainty" is another reason why we should proceed more carefully in fortifying Cuba at this time.

If it is the aim of the administration to move directly toward free trade with Cuba or to have not to exceed, say, 25 cents per 100 pounds duty on Cuban sugar, this reduction now proposed to be given to Cuba further fortifies Cuba in being able to eliminate the entire domestic sugar industry and hold the market of the United States against producers in the Philippine Islands.

APPEAL TO MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

I appeal to every Member of Congress to make a thorough study of the problem of the domestic sugar industry in continental United States, in Hawaii, in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and all in connection with the reciprocal trade-agreement policy. In addition, let me urge you to carefully consider the Philippine report above referred to. In the meantime, urge the Department of State to defer action on further reducing the Cuban duty.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] is recognized for 5 minutes.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am taking these 5 minutes to call attention to a very interesting and important situation that obtains with reference to the election of President and Vice President. It would not be too strong a statement to say that under conditions which now obtain a President of the United States could be elected by fraud and nothing could be done about it. That is a statement that ought to startle us, but I have been making it now for 6 years, ever since the "lame duck" amendment was passed, and nobody has yet paid any attention to it. This condition arises out of the fact that whereas prior to the passage of the "lame duck" amendment, we inaugurated the President on the 4th of March we now inaugurate on the 20th of January, a month and a half earlier. Prior to the "lame duck" amendment there was not too much time between the time when the electors were elected and the time they met to cast their votes, to determine the question of fraud in the election, But when we moved the time for the inauguration of the President from the 4th of March back to the 20th of January, and left the other end of the arrangement as it had been when we were inaugurating the President the 4th of March we created an impossible situation. So we cut down the intervening time in which the question of fraud could be discovered and something done about it, by about 54 days.

So we have a situation now, as I remember it, where there are only 41 days between the time when the electors are elected and the time they meet to cast their votes.

Now, there is considerable uncertainty. The matter as to just who would have jurisdiction was examined a long time ago, about 1838, by a very distinguished group of men constituting a joint Senate and House committee. Henry Clay and men of that type made that investigation on behalf of the House and the Senate, and they reported to their respective bodies that there was a great deal of uncertainty about that. But there is no uncertainty about the fact that the electors are State officers. The Constitution provides that the States shall make the appointments. The Congress has the power to determine when they are to be elected and when they are to meet to cast their vote. There is not a single State in the Union that can gear up its judicial machinery fast enough to try the issue of fraud in 41 days. The Houses of Congress might act; I have not examined as to their power; but even if they possess it, its exercise would be dangerous for many obvious reasons.

Now, it has been suggested, and there are a great many difficulties about getting more time between the election of the electors and the casting of their vote, and that we should do away with the electoral college, but that would require a constitutional amendment. Having shortened the intervening time, as I have indicated, I see nothing that can be done about it except to move back the time when the election of the electors is to be held. The necessity to do that was fixed when the "lame duck" amendment moved up the inauguration of the President and Vice President from March to January. Before that amendment was adopted we had two controlling fixed points of time, Tuesday after the first Monday in November, when the electors were elected, and March 4, when the President and Vice President chosen by the electors were inaugurated. I drew the bill which changed the method of bringing up the returns from the old method of bringing them up by messenger to the existing method of bringing those returns up by registered mail. It was more or less an experiment. Well, I can hardly say that, but there were some experimental features about it.

I was very careful in drawing that bill fully to protect the record of the determination of the electors. I believe that law can be redrafted preserving the safeguards, and we can gain about a week by revamping that bill. That would give about 48 days. Then if we could move back the time of the general election from the first Tuesday in November to the first Tuesday in October, that would give us 30 days more. It would give us enough time to have a fair chance to determine the issue of fraud.

I have introduced this bill each Congress since the passage of the "lame duck" amendment. I have endeavored to call the attention of my colleagues and the country to the gravity of the situation. I am simply repeating what I have been doing for the last 6 years. The matter does not come within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. It is a matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee for the Election of President and Vice President, a committee that does not frequently meet. What I am saying is not in criticism of that committee particularly. I am not bragging on what it has done about it, however. Now, when we can do this thing in a deliberate way, we ought to do it; and we ought to do it very quickly, because a serious situation might develop. Possibly some other method could be worked out, but it is certain it is not going to work itself out. It requires no great imagination to visualize what might develop in a close election when feeling was running high with a belief that wholesale fraud had been perpetrated in one or more pivotal States with no possibility of a final judicial determination prior to the time for the inauguration of the President and Vice President. I do not go so far as to say that nothing could be done about it, but I do say that nothing calculated to preserve either confidence or harmony could be done. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—REPORT OF PANAMA RAILROAD CO.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the Eighty-ninth Annual Report of the Board of Directors of the Panama Railroad Co. for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 10, 1939.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—REPORT OF THE CENTRAL STATISTICAL BOARD

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and or-ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, a report of the Central Statistical Board on the Returns Made by the Public to the Federal Government. I recommend that this report be printed as a public document.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 10, 1939.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a letter from the director of public health of the State of California.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, January 11, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

193. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers consisting of 95 items from the War Department which the Department has recommended should be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

194. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of motion-picture films consisting of 16 items from the Department of the Interior which the Department has recommended should be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

195. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting lists of papers consisting of 383 items from those recommended to him for disposition by the Department of Agriculture; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

196. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers from the Veterans' Administration which the Administration has recommended be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

197. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers consisting of two items from the Smithsonian Institute which this agency has recommended be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

198. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers from the Tennessee Valley Authority consisting of seven items which the Authority has recommended be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

199. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers, consisting of 105 items, from the census on partial employment, unemployment, and occupations, which the agency has recommended be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

200. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to change the designations of the Abraham Lincoln National Park, in the State of Kentucky, and the Fort McHenry National Park, in the State of Maryland; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

201. A letter from the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, transmitting the report of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation for the fiscal year 1938; to the Committee on Agriculture.

202. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a report on one item, recommended to him for disposition, by the Department of State; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

203. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1909, as amended, so as to extend commissary privileges to civilian officers and employees at naval stations beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

204. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WELCH:

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

77. By Mr. CASE of South Dakota: Resolution unanimously adopted by the Retail Merchants Association of South Dakota at a meeting on December 15, 1938, urging a change in the present method of surplus commodity distribution, and recommending some plan similar to the 1934 program of relief distribution be adopted; to the Committee on Appropriations.

78. By Mr. CONNERY: Petition of citizens of Massachusetts, protesting against the supplying of war and other materials to Japan by American manufacturers; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs,

79. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Loyal Order of Moose, Borough Hall Lodge, No. 222, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning Dies investigating committee; to the Committee on Rules.

80. By Mr. KINZER: Petition of the citizens of Drumore, Lancaster County, Pa., to promote the general welfare of the people of the United States by abolishing the great advertising campaign for the sale of alcoholic beverages now going on by press and radio; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

81. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Wallnut Hall Realty Corporation, New York City, concerning the Patman chainstore bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

82. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Loyal Order of Moose, Borough Hall Lodge, No. 222, Brooklyn, N. Y., urging continuance of the Dies committee; to the Committee on Rules.

83. Also, telegram from the American Federation of Musicians, Local 802, New York City, urging support for adequate appropriations for the arts and Federal theater projects in New York City; to the Committee on Appropriations.

84. By Mr. RICH: Petition of citizens of Williamsport and Lycoming County, Pa., favoring the policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, and also the act of May 1, 1937, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

85. Also, petition of citizens of Williamsport, Pa., and other towns in Lycoming and Clinton Counties, Pa., favoring the so-called retain chain store tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

86. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of the Catholic Daughters of America, Court Carroll, No. 299, Wheeling, W. Va., urging the continuation of the Dies committee, unhampered and well financed; to the Committee on Rules.

87. Also, petition of the Purity Council, No. 62, Daughters of America, Weirton, W. Va., opposing any action that will suspend the present immigration laws thus permitting the free influx of political refugees without compliance with the laws requiring ability to maintain themselves and also setting aside the quota provisions of the present laws; and urging the cancelation of the naturalization papers of those naturalized citizens who are members of groups spreading un-American activities; and opposing the adoption of any measures proposing to change the present established quotas and regulations now in effect in connection with the admission of aliens; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

88. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Philadelphia, Pa., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to finger-printing of all persons in the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever.

Heavenly Father, at the altar of prayer we give Thee praise and our humble devotion. Thou who art so abundant in wisdom, help us to live by our higher natures. Inspire this day by Thy holy presence that our labors may conform to the precepts of the Teacher of Nazareth. Thou who dost breathe upon the cloud, lifts the mist and reveals the shore line to the courageous mariners, give clearness of vision and show the truth to all who seek it. May the power of the Most High God move among all the peoples of the earth and let His glory fill the whole world. We beseech Thee to remember the sick. However cold the day, weak the hand, or dim the sky, be with them as an angel of light in their presence. In the blessed name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record by printing a radio address by the Honorable William B. Bankhead, delivered on December 25, 1938, on the Reconciliation Hour, under the auspices of the United States News.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the special order today I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN]?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand the program is to start consideration of the relief bill tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Mr. RAYBURN. That is correct.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What is the understanding as to the debate?

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman from Virginia will propound the unanimous-consent request in reference to hours of debate and control of time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The purpose is to come in early because it is desired that the legislation be passed this week?

Mr. RAYBURN. The request of the gentleman from Virginia will be that general debate be limited to not more than 10 hours.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. When is it expected we will arrive at a vote?

Mr. RAYBURN. I understand it is agreeable to the members of the Appropriations Committee on both sides that general debate shall run until not later than 2 p. m. Friday, at which time we will begin the reading of the bill.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. TABER. As I understood it, we are to meet also at 11 o'clock on Friday?

Mr. RAYBURN. If the present request is agreed to, I shall immediately ask that when the House adjourns tomorrow it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock on Friday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING FRIDAY

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns tomorrow it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. on Friday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

GENERAL DEBATE ON RELIEF BILL

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order at any time after it is reported to the House to consider the joint resolution making additional appropriations for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939; that all points of order against said joint resolution shall be considered as waived, and that general debate on the said resolution shall be confined to the joint resolution and shall conclude not later than

2 p. m. Friday, that the time shall be controlled one-half by the gentleman from Colorado, Mr. Taylor, and one-half by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Taber.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understood we were going to run along on Thursday as long as there was anyone who cared to talk; so that if we are unable to meet our situation within the 10 hours we can run along on Thursday until we exhaust the demands for time. I do not anticipate it will require more than the 10 hours, but that is the understanding I thought we had yesterday.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. The gentleman understands we will not begin reading the bill until 2 o'clock Friday?

Mr. TABER. That is right, the debate to run not beyond 2 o'clock on Friday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, the points of order that would be waived would be these: There is no legislative authorization for any of the funds that are in the bill and, therefore, coming from the Appropriations Committee that point would have to be waived, and also with reference to the Civil Service Commission that is involved in the bill, and that sort of thing. Those are the only two items I know of that would be subject to a point of order. I have had some questions asked since the request was put, therefore I thought that ought to be explained. That is the way the gentleman understands it?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is my understanding. Of course, we can secure a rule if it is necessary to do so.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object-

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] concluded?

Mr. TABER. For the moment.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, supplementing what the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] has stated, I assume this waiver of points of order is confined to the provisions of the bill as reported by the committee and does not apply to amendments offered on the floor of the House.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is right.

Mr. MAPES. Any amendments offered on the floor will be subject to the rules and such points of order will not be waived?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is my understanding. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object for the purpose of asking a parliamentary inquiry, does that mean then this bill will be interpreted as an appropriation bill or a joint appropriation legislative bill, to which legislative amendments will be in order?

The SPEAKER. In answer to the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman, the Chair may state that any amendment that may be proposed will be subject to legitimate points of order and subject to all the rules and precedents in that connection.

Is there objection?

Mr. MICHENER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, during the last session I objected continuously to the waiving of points of order of this kind. However, nothing can be gained here by objecting because this is legislation that should come up in some form or another, so I shall not object. In the future, however, I shall object to the general proposition of waiving points of order by unanimous consent, because if we are going to operate under the rules of the House in the consideration of bills we should operate generally under those rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include therein a radio address of my own in the form of a colloquy between myself and Professor Winkler, of City College.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by printing in the Record a speech delivered over the Columbia Broadcasting System last evening by the Honorable Joseph W. Martin.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for this time simply to refer to a request I am about to make. I understand, of course, that since we are beginning the consideration of the relief bill tomorrow we do not want any extraneous talk. However, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Miller] would like to have 5 minutes tomorrow to speak on the three hundredth anniversary of the adoption of the Fundamental Order. I therefore ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Miller] may be permitted to address the House for 5 minutes tomorrow morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, a day or two ago I got permission from the House to insert in the Record a statement I made before the committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority. In that statement there is included a small chart, which has already been printed, and the Government Printing Office has the plate. I ask unanimous consent that I may include that chart in my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 45 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the big headlines in the papers, "United States Debt Past $39,000,000,000," and ask the Members of the House the question, Where are you going to get the money? [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include therein a statement I made before the Committee for Reciprocity Information in connection with the negotiation of a reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba, at a hearing held in Washington, D. C., on January 4, 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under a previous special order, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] is recognized for 25 minutes.

IS THE PREVIOUS RECORD OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL SUCH AS TO SHOW THAT HE WILL PROTECT THE CITIZEN IN THE EXERCISE OF HIS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS?

TRIBUTE TO THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, on the 3d of this month those of us who were present in this Chamber had the rare privilege of hearing one of the most concise, eloquent, and patriotic declarations of loyalty to nation and country, of a desire to serve faithfully and patriotically, that can be found in the history of our Nation.

No one listening to the obviously sincere words of our beloved Speaker, just elected for the third time to preside over this body, could fail to realize that, while ever faithful to his party, we of the minority were assured that during the coming session, as in the past, his decisions on questions which may be presented to him, his treatment of minority Members during the trying days that are sure to come, will be fair and impartial, at all times tempered with kindliness and consideration.

It is well that we express our appreciation of the fact, of which we are all aware, that here in this body the presiding officer, while mindful of party demands and political opposition, will always have as his ultimate goal the welfare of our people.

Although speaking only for myself, it is undoubtedly true that we on this side of the Chamber who have been here during previous sessions know—and all new Members will soon realize—that we have in the chair a man who can and will hew to the line rigidly, but kindly; one who knows how to rule with an iron hand, but whose gentleness forces us to accept his decisions without bitterness.

We have as our Speaker during this session a man who might well serve as an example and pattern of what executive officers should be.

We have in the Speaker's chair a man who has many warm personal friends, personal and political; a Democrat who believes in the principles of the Democratic Party; who undoubtedly desires to advance in every possible legitimate way his party's fortune; a man who, when the political opposition may be in a position to press some strategic advantage under the rules, will be quick to see and appreciate the political danger.

But we have as our Speaker a man who we know, whatever the demands of personal or political friendship, whatever the opportunity for party advantage, will always give life and force to the spirit, as well as to the letter, of the rules and precedents which govern the proceedings of this body.

To no man in greater degree do I give respect for his ability, his industry, his courtesy, and his patriotism.

I salute our Speaker as the example of what all executive officers should be. [Applause.]

SPEAKER BANKHEAD AS AN EXAMPLE FOR PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN MAKING HIS APPOINTMENTS

I point to him as one whose qualifications for and whose actions in office the President of this Republic might well ascertain, consider, and list and use as the determining factors when he is required to appoint men to official positions.

Unfortunately, some of those recently appointed to high official positions, when compared to our Speaker, present such a contrast that the outlook is not only unpleasant but discouraging and makes me fearful of the future.

The lack of qualifications of Harry Hopkins for the position to which he has been appointed, his statements indicating that he is extremely dissatisfied with many of those methods which in the past have assisted us in our onward march, his apparent utter inability to understand and appreciate where tax money comes from and how it is obtained by those who furnish it are matters of national concern with which the Senate will undoubtedly deal.

The appointment of Frank Murphy as Attorney General is not only of interest to the people of the Nation but is of the greatest concern to the people of Michigan.

The Washington papers of Saturday morning carried the information that the new Attorney General had ordered the Department of Justice to investigate and, if evidence was found, to proceed against those who were engaged in subversive, un-American activities.

FRANK MURPHY HAS LEFT BEHIND HIM A RECORD OF HIS OFFICIAL LIFE KNOWN TO THOUSANDS

Frank Murphy has left behind him in Michigan a record of his official life. It is there well known to hundreds of thousands of citizens that he is a partisan; that during the last campaign, in which he was defeated for Governor, he received the open and the enthusiastic support of a large and powerful group which has openly been engaged in un-American activities.

It is well known to hundreds of thousands of Michigan citizens that during the last campaign Frank Murphy, as candidate for Governor, ignored the facts and made many misleading statements as to his activities in the sit-down strikes.

It therefore becomes my duty, a duty which cannot be shirked, which cannot be ignored, to point out from the floor of this House some of the undisputed facts disclosed by the record and to propound to the supporters of the Attorney General, as well as to him, a few inquiries.

Let us consider first the office of Attorney General, its duties, its responsibilities. Then let us ascertain the duties imposed upon an executive officer—for example, a mayor of a great city, the Governor of Michigan—for Frank Murphy has held both of these offices, and his new duties are somewhat similar to those imposed upon him in his prior official positions; and then from the manner in which he performed his prior duties ascertain, if we may, his qualifications for his present position.

THE DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF AN ATTORNEY GENERAL

The Department of Justice

The Department of Justice is 1 of the 10 great divisions among which the functions of our Government are divided. That it function efficiently, fairly, within the limits of, and in accordance with, the provisions of our Federal Constitution is essential if this Nation is to endure.

The officers of the Department of Justice, under the direction of the Attorney General, are charged with the duty of the investigation of all of the official acts, records, and accounts of United States marshals, attorneys, and clerks of the United States courts.

The officials of the Department of Justice, under the direction of the Attorney General, are charged with the duty of giving of opinions and rendering all services requiring the skill of persons learned in the law which are necessary to enable the President and the heads of the departments and bureaus and other officers in the departments to discharge their respective duties.

They are charged, in behalf of the United States, with the duty of procuring evidence, with the conduct, prosecution, and defense of all suits and proceedings in the Supreme Court and the Court of Claims in which the United States or any officer thereof, as such an officer, is a party or may be interested.

The Department is charged with the duty of giving advice to the War and Navy Departments.

Upon the Department of Justice rests the duty of giving to the President of the United States, to the heads of the departments, to the Army and to the Navy, to all Federal officers who may seek it, that legal advice and counsel which will promote the welfare of our country, render secure the liberty of the citizen.

The Attorney General is the head of the Department of Justice. All in it are subject to his control and direction. The Attorney General is charged with the duty, upon request, of giving legal advice to the President of the United States. He is the President's official legal adviser. He it is who is charged with advising the President as to the validity of our laws, as to whether they apply in particular cases and as to the effect of the application of those laws.

THE NECESSARY QUALIFICATIONS OF AN ATTORNEY GENERAL

It then can be readily seen that in the office of the Attorney General there should be a man of profound legal learning, with a wide legal experience; a man who has, in proportion to his income, a substantial and a material interest in his country; a man who believes sincerely and unwaveringly in the fundamental law of the land—the Constitution; a man who not only has the ability but who is willing to give force to and to make alive those principles founded in the Constitution and in the laws of our Nation which make secure to our citizens their freedom and their liberty.

MURPHY CONCEDED TO BE PERSONALLY HONEST, SINCERE, ETC.

For the purpose of the moment, let us concede without any mental reservations that Frank Murphy is a decent, sincere American citizen, naturally disposed to be kind and charitable; that he attends church faithfully and with regularity; that he is religious; that it is his purpose by his private and official conduct to promote the welfare of his State and Nation, to bring prosperity and happiness to the individual citizen.

In short, let us accord to him all of those admirable qualities which each of us claims for himself. Then let us turn to his official record, the record of what he has done, as distinguished from what he has said, for it is still true that "by their works ye shall know them."

OWNERSHIP OF PROPERTY AND PAYMENT OF TAX DESIRABLE QUALIFICATIONS OF PUBLIC OFFICIAL

While material wealth, the ownership of property, or contributions by way of tax are not necessary qualifications for this office, nevertheless, where there are so many well-qualified citizens for a position, those who have demonstrated by their acts, as distinguished from their words, their desire to be a part of and to contribute to the maintenance of the Government should, other things being equal, be preferred for high official positions.

DOES MURPHY OWN PROPERTY OR PAY TAXES IN MICHIGAN?

There are those on this floor who will speak in behalf of Frank Murphy and who will point out his qualifications for this office. When they do so speak, let them tell us whether Frank Murphy now owns or ever has owned real estate in the city, the county, or the State from which he hails; and if he does, let them give us a reference to the office of the register of deeds where that information can be found.

If Frank Murphy has ever paid a township, school, city, county, or State tax in the State of Michigan, let us place in the Record to whom paid and the amount of such payment.

If Frank Murphy has ever paid a tax under the Social Security Law, let us have that information. Let us be advised of his achievements during the time that he was not on the public pay roll—city, State, or Nation—from the time of his graduation from the university down to the present time.

DID MURPHY RECEIVE A SALARY AS HIGH COMMISSIONER WHILE CAMPAIGNING FOR GOVERNOR IN MICHIGAN?

Let these questions be answered:

Was he not appointed Commissioner of the Philippine Islands at a salary of $18,000 per year?

Did he not on May 13, 1936, or shortly prior thereto, resign as High Commissioner to the Philippines, effective December 31, 1936?

Did he not, on May 13, 1936, sail from Manila, go to Japan for a tour of that country, and land at San Francisco on June 4, 1936, and, on July 9, 1936, announce that he had resigned his post in the Philippines to become a candidate for Governor of Michigan?

Did he not, on or about July 20, 1936, addressing a meeting of Democratic county chairmen, discuss the reasons which he said induced him to relinquish a lucrative position as High Commissioner to the Philippines to enter the political arena in Michigan?

Did he not, at Ironwood, Mich, on August 25, 1936, say?—
Why did I give up a great international post,

* * the best paid diplomatic post under the stars, to seek an office

where the salary is less than a sixth as much?

The salary of the Governor is $5,000 per year, plus $5,000 for his own use, for which he is not required to make an accounting.

Did he, on August 27, 1936, at Menominee, Mich., state in substance that he "didn't consider he had made any sacrifice in giving up a salary of about $35,000 a year as High Commissioner of the Philippines to seek the governorship"?

Frank Murphy, as a matter of fact, received as salary as Commissioner to the Philippines from January 1, 1936, to and including September 4, 1936, $12,200.

He received a salary as Commissioner to the Philippines while he was absent from his post campaigning in Michigan.

His name went off the pay roll as High Commissioner on September 4, 1936, and after the election went back on the pay roll on November 4, 1936. This information is furnished by the Acting Comptroller General.

Between November 4, 1936, and December 31, 1936, after he had been elected Governor, he received as salary as High Commissioner to the Philippines $2,850. And was he not, during practically all of that time, vacationing in Coral Gables and Miami, Fla., and Habana, Cuba?

Did not the War Department, on February 10, 1936, ask for an appropriation from Congress for $161,000 for the salary and expenses of High Commissioner Frank Murphy for the year 1936?

Has he a home in Michigan other than at a hotel at 415 Burns Drive, Detroit?

The foregoing questions are asked because it was charged during Murphy's campaign by a newspaper printed at Plymouth, Mich., that the answers were in the affirmative. It is unjust to permit these charges to remain unanswered. The truth should be known.

MURPHY'S RECORD AS A LAWYER, AS A JUDGE

Frank Murphy is a graduate of the University of Michigan-of the law department of that great university. Will his friends kindly place in the RECORD a statement of his achievements as a lawyer, showing his connection with any litigation which entitles him to distinction over and above the average lawyer of a small town?

He was elected and served as judge of the recorder's court of the city of Detroit. As a judge, Frank Murphy served with no less, no greater, distinction than the average recorders judge.

Thereafter he was elected and served as mayor of the city of Detroit, and still later was chosen by the people and served as their Governor during 1937 and 1938.

HIS RECORD AS MAYOR AND GOVERNOR MAY SHOW WHAT HE WOULD DO AS ATTORNEY GENERAL

As the duties of a mayor and a Governor are similar in character, the one being the head of the city, the other of the State, let us look with some degree of particularity at the duties of a Governor, for his record as Governor and mayor, as a law-enforcing officer, may well indicate what he will attempt to do as Attorney General, charged with the interpretation of the law and the duty of determining whether United States marshals and attorneys are faithfully enforcing the law.

AS MAYOR OF DETROIT

He was mayor of Detroit from 1930 to 1933, resigning in May of 1933.

While Murphy was mayor and on March 7, 1932, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, a group of Communists, only a small percentage of whom were ex-Ford employees, gathered on Fort Street in the city of Detroit to march to Dearborn to present a petition concerning unemployment relief for laid-off Ford workers.

The Unemployed Council of Detroit and the Auto Workers Union, according to the press, issued the following joint statement as to the demands of this group:

The marchers simply proposed to present the following demands for relief from the Ford Motor Co. out of the millions of profit Ford has ground out of their lives in the past year:

Jobs for all laid-off Ford workers; immediate payment of 50 percent of full wages; 6-hour day without pay reduction; slowing down of speed-up; two 15-minute rest periods; free medical aid in Ford hospital for Ford workers; no discrimination against Negroes; tors of coke or coal; abolition of the company police; no fore-closures on homes of former Ford workers, Ford assuming responsi-bility for all mortgages; immediate payment of a lump sum of $50 winter relief; full wages for part-time workers; and the right to

The assembling place for the group which was to march on Dearborn to press the foregoing demand was Fort Street. Some 70 Detroit police were assigned to watch this crowd. But although many of its members were disorderly and the placards displayed carried statements violent in character, and although it was charged there was no permit for the assemblage, the police did not interfere in any manner.

In fact, the mayor, Murphy, according to the Detroit News for March 15, 1932, made the statement:

Your parade was without permit, in violation of the city ordinance, and yet we had police there to protect you and everyone

Some 1,200 persons started from Fort Street to march through the city of Detroit to Dearborn and by the time the parade reached the Detroit city limits the crowd numbered some 2,500.

At the Dearborn city limits they were met by 30 Dearborn police, who asked if they had a permit. They had no permit to march into Dearborn and the Communist leader asserted that they did not need one and attempted to proceed on their march Evidently the Dearborn police had asked for aid from the Detroit police and District Inspector William Black of Detroit sent a detail of his force to the Ford plant in Dearborn, they apparently arriving before the marchers had reached that point.

The Dearborn police force attempted to stop the marchers with tear gas, but the Communists attacked them with stones and clubs and proceeded on their way to the Ford plant.

Upon their arrival at the Ford plant, those Communists were met by police who turned the fire hose upon them. The Communists then fired upon the police and the fire was returned by the police.

This march, organized and carried on by Communists, lawless armed forces, began by a disorderly assemblage of persons in the city of Detroit. They marched through the city of Detroit, apparently without a permit, breathing threats of violence and, according to Frank Murphy's own statement, as published in the paper at the time, "We had police there to protect you and everyone else."

They descended upon the Ford plant, apparently assuming that it was unprotected. When their passage was disputed at the gates of the Ford plant, they began the battle with stones and clubs and then with firearms.

FOUR MEN KILLED, TWENTY-EIGHT INJURED

Joseph York, Joe DeBlasio, Coleman J. Leny, and George Bussell were killed.

Dearborn Policemen Dewey Roberts, Charles Slamen, Paul Papke, Reuben Orr, and Albert Wiggins, and Fire Chief Roy Mottesheard, and Harry Bennett of the Ford plant, were injured.

Ignatz Blazwski, Jame Latent, John Collins, World Wide photographer, John Avadisoff, Nick Cassatta, Joseph Otiveskiewicz, Eugene Macks, Matthew Palkins, Robert Dorn, Andrew Sylwestraowicz, Thomas Jones, Peter Tupek, Harry Cruden, Jack McLeod, Michael Supink, Karinig Assodorian, Abe Atamian, and David Gray were shot but not fatally injured. Three others were injured.

MURPHY'S DUTIES AS GOVERNOR

Murphy was elected Governor of Michigan and he upheld his right hand and before God took the following oath:

I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the constitution of this State, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of Governor of the State of Michigan according to the best of my ability.

Under State Constitution

He having sworn that he would support the Constitution, not only of the United States but of the State of Michigan. let me quote a few provisions from the State constitution.

Section 6 of article II of the Declaration of Rights contains this language:

The military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict sub-ordination to the civil power.

Section 10 reads in part as follows:

The person, houses, papers, and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures.

Section 16 has these words:

No person shall * * * be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

Section 3 of article VI provides:

The Governor shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

Under Federal Constitution

The Federal Constitution was established to, among other things—

Insure domestic tranquillity, * * * secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.

The Constitution by the fifth amendment provides that— No person shall * * * be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

Frank Murphy took an oath that he would, as Attorney General of the United States—

Support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

That he would "bear true faith and allegiance to the same."

MURPHY KNEW THE LAW

Frank Murphy was a graduate of the University of Michigan, of its legal department. He had served as a judge in the State.

Frank Murphy knew that our State constitution provided that "the military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power." He knew that men had invaded our State and, aided by a small minority of the workers in General Motors plants in Flint, had deprived citizens of Flint of liberty and property without due process of law; had driven women and men who desired to work from their places of employment, where they were lawfully and peacefully employed; and had unlawfully imprisoned other workers.

Frank Murphy knew that the court having jurisdiction over that territory, after a full and a fair hearing, had issued an order that those who had so kidnaped those factories, who had so assaulted and beaten citizens and driven them from the places where they had a right lawfully to be, be ejected from those factories. Frank Murphy knew that the sheriff of Genesee County and the peace officers of the city of Flint stood ready to enforce that court order, which was the law of the land.

SIT-DOWN STRIKERS COMMITTED FELONIES UNDER MICHIGAN LAW

When the sit-down strikers took possession of the Flint factories and while they held possession thereof, they broke windows, they destroyed personal property, and they injured the real estate. Those men were committing felonies. Governor Murphy knew it, or by the exercise of ordinary diligence he should have known it. He was in Flint when some of the offenses were being committed.

We have in our State a statute, section 16922 of the Compiled Laws of 1929, which provides that anyone who maliciously injures or destroys the personal property of another shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison not more than 5 years, or by fine not exceeding $1,000, and imprisonment in the county jail not more than 1 year.

We have another statute, section 16925, which provides that every person who willfully and maliciously injures or destroys any building of another, or the appurtenances thereto, if the damage exceeds $25, shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison not more than 5 years, or in the county jail not more than 1 year, or by a fine not exceeding $500, or by both; and, if the damage does not exceed $25, by a fine not exceeding $100, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding 3 months, or by both.

These two sections of the statute were violated time and time again.

DUTY OF THE STATE POLICE—MURPHY KNEW IT

It was the duty of the State police and of the National Guard, when present, to prevent these violations of the law, and it was the duty of Frank Murphy to see that the law was enforced. He took the oath that he would do so. Let him answer whether he complied with that oath.

Frank Murphy knew, or in the exercise of ordinary diligence he should have known, that those armed invaders of our State had not only taken possession of the motor plants in Flint, that they had driven men who had committed no offense against the law, public morals, or contrary to fair dealing from their places of employment, but that they were breaking windows, destroying material, welding together iron fire doors, and injuring the real estate.

He knew, or in the exercise of ordinary diligence he should have known, that they were violating the statutes of our State, that they were committing felonies, and this in the presence of members of the State police under command of Lt. Harold Mulbar.

MURPHY HAD THE POWER AND ABILITY TO ENFORCE THE LAW

No one contends that while he was Governor he lacked either the ability or the means to enforce the laws of the State. No one contends that while Governor he was subject to physical coercion. He acted as a free agent. He determined the course which he desired to follow and he followed it voluntarily, willingly, and he told us during the campaign that he was proud of the record which he had made.

DID MURPHY PERFORM HIS DUTY?

Knowing that it was the duty of Frank Murphy while Governor to uphold the constitution of the State, cognizant of the facts which have just been cited, let us now from the record learn whether he performed his duties as Governor; whether in a time of stress he held the scales of justice impartially, protecting the weak and the oppressed, enforcing the laws of the land, or whether he betrayed those who were forced to work for a livelihood, those who believed in justice and equality before the law.

By determining how he acted then, charged as he was with the enforcement of the laws of Michigan, we may be able to learn something of what he will do as an Attorney General, charged with the enforcement of the laws of the Nation.

Under the foregoing circumstances what, if anything, did Murphy do that he should not have done?

What, if anything, did he fail to do which he should have Know something of the things that Murphy as Governor failed to do, some of the things he did, in those sit-down strikes and subsequently.

Frank Murphy did not ask those violators of the law who were in possession of those factories to abandon their law-less activities. On the contrary, he asked, and he insisted, that the sheriff of the county and the peace officers of the city refrain from performing their lawful duty and that they permit the violators of the law to remain in possession of the factories.

Frank Murphy made it plain that the armed forces of the State and the National Guard would be used to protect those who had been and who were in possession of private property unlawfully and who threatened violence and bloodshed toward any and all who sought to exercise the lawful right to work.

MURPHY SUSPENDED THE OPERATION OF THE STATE LAW

No one denies but that he suspended the operation of the law. If a Governor can suspend the law for a day, then he may suspend it for a week, a month, or a year—indefinitely.

From whence does the Governor or any other executive officer derive the right to, by his actions, in effect set aside and repeal the law of the land?

MURPHY HAD NO AUTHORITY TO WITHHOLD THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW

He acted without authority of law and contrary to the decision of the Supreme Court of the State in Bishop v. Vandercook (228 Mich. 299), with which he was undoubtedly familiar.

Murphy says that he acted to prevent bloodshed. May we inquire as to bloodshed by whom?

There was no question of violence until those who were supported by Murphy drove workers from their tasks. There was no question of bloodshed until the C. I. O. and the Communists within its ranks came to Michigan. The employers were not threatening bloodshed. Those whom Murphy protected were the ones who were threatening violence to our citizens.

Under what law were they acting?

Let me quote from the Supreme Court:

Shall we say the law of necessity? The courts recognize no such law. The so-called law of necessity or rather lawlessness was the very curse the provision in our Constitution laid low for all time. Shall we say the end justified the means? If so, where is such law to be found?

In Michigan, as Governor Murphy well knew at the time, we have not and we cannot have a military force that is not subordinate to the civil authorities. Yet Governor Murphy, in violation of this constitutional provision, used the National Guard to defy the courts, to suspend the operation of the law, to render impotent the civil authorities.

The foregoing are general statements. Nevertheless, they cover the general situation. Let us now be more specific. Let me give the history of two claimed incidents, and then let former Governor Murphy, who now as head of the Department of Justice has at his call the whole power of the Federal Government, with its unlimited resources, with its trained body of investigators, make answer to the inquiries which will be propounded before this statement is finished.

By the sworn testimony given before the Dies committee, the following appears:

MEN INVADED THE STATE FROM OHIO-HELD WORKERS PRISONERS

On the 30th and the 31st of December 1936 men, many of whom reached Flint in automobiles which came from Toledo, Akron, and Norwood in Ohio and from other places without the State of Michigan, took possession of the Fisher Body plants at Flint, Mich.

Guards numbering from 12 to 40, many of them armed with truck stakes about 4 feet long, were established at the plant gates. After the guard was firmly established, those workers who were inside and who had not succeeded in getting out were required to obtain a pass in order to get out, and some of them, in order to get out, were forced to pay $1 each and to promise that they would join the C. I. O.

STRIKERS ADDRESSED THROUGH SOUND TRUCK BY COMMUNISTS BOY AND VICTOR REUTHER AND BOB TRAVIS

These men were addressed at different times by Roy and Victor Reuther and Bob Travis, well-known Communists, none of whom lived in Flint, and they were exhorted to hold possession of the plants, and they held possession of some of these plants for 44 days.

The strikers also took possession of some of the streets of Flint, established guards, and refused disinterested citizens the right to freely pass and repass on them.

They operated a sound truck, from which well-known Communists exhorted the strikers and others to defy the civil authorities.

PUBLIC SAFETY DIRECTOR OF FLINT CALLED IN VAIN UPON STATE POLICE FOR AID

On January 5, 1937, the city manager, realizing that a dangerous situation was developing in Flint because two of the larger factories were occupied by armed groups, telephoned Public Safety Commissioner Olander, and was informed that he could not do anything without the Governor's permission. That same evening an effort to reach the Governor was unsuccessful. His secretary promised an appointment, but the appointment never was made.

During the afternoon of January 7, 1937, over a loud speaker placed in the window of a beer tavern near the personnel office of the Chevrolet Motor Co., Roy Reuther addressed many men coming from the plant. His talks were inflammatory, and some of those emerging from the plant were angered at his remarks and proceeded to tear down the loud speaker. This brought on a fist fight.

Two men were arrested, one a strike leader and a labor organizer from Toledo, and were taken to the police station.

That night between two and three hundred men and women, led by out-of-town agitators, assembled before the police department and demanded their release. After an hour's waiting for the crowd to disperse, the police department gave the mob 5 minutes to disperse. This they did.

During this demonstration by the strikers a representative of the Flint police department phoned the sergeant in charge of the Flint post of the State police, advising of the situation, but was told that he could not act without orders from Commissioner of Public Safety Olander.

In this crowd before the station were Roy and Victor Reuther.

ON JANUARY 8, 1937, PUBLIC SAFETY DIRECTOR OF FLINT CALLED UPON GOVERNOR FOR PROTECTION—REPUSED AID

On the following morning, which was the 8th of January, the city manager and director of public safety in Flint, unable to reach Commissioner Olander, talked with his next in command, Captain Lyon, advised him of the trouble which had occurred in Flint, and was told that he could only act upon orders from Commissioner Olander.

On the same day the commissioner got Governor Murphy on the phone, told him what had happened in Flint, told him of the men coming in from other cities and States, but the Governor refused to give any assurance that he would do anything about it.

The riot and the bloodshed of the 11th followed immediately after the refusal of the Governor to give aid to the police department of the city of Flint.

RIOT AND BLOODSHED OF JANUARY 11

On January 11 a mob began storming the entrance to the first floor of Fisher Body plant No. 2. A call came for help, and the riot squad of the Flint police was ordered to the scene. When they arrived, a fight had developed and the police were greeted with a barrage of pieces of steel and iron, brickbats, milk bottles, and bottles containing an acid solution.

Here, again, Victor Reuther, from a sound truck, was inciting the men to fight the police.

CITY AUTHORITIES TOLD STATE POLICE COULD NOT ACT WITHOUT MURPHY'S PERMISSION

The battle becoming serious, the Flint police being unable to cope with it, the city manager finally reached Commissioner Olander at Detroit and was told by Olander that he could not possibly act without Governor Murphy's permission.

The Governor advised that he would not authorize help immediately, but that he would meet with the commissioner at midnight at the Durant Hotel in Flint.

GOVERNOR CAME TO FLINT—CONFERRED FIRST WITH REUTHERS AND OTHER MOB LEADERS

The Governor came and he first conferred for an hour and a half with Roy and Victor Reuther and other mob leaders.

During this time the battle was still in progress, and, after a 3-hour conference, at which were representatives of State police, of the Flint police department, the mayor, the prosecuting attorney, and the sheriff, Frank Murphy still refused to order the 70 or 75 State police who were in Flint at that time to help the Flint police department restore order.

He was told that the State police had been trapped, that they were virtually surrounded and outnumbered many times; that if they were not permitted by the mob to withdraw, in self-defense they would have to use solid shot and machine guns.

The police finally succeeded in escaping from the mob which overturned and destroyed two of the police cruisers.

While Governor Murphy was at the Durant Hotel, in the city of Flint, holding this conference; while he was stead-fastly refusing to aid the police in their attempt to restore order, the battle was continuing at Fisher plant No. 2.

WHILE MURPHY WAS IN FLINT, 11 POLICEMEN INJURED—13 STRIKERS SHOT

In this fight Flint's police force was abandoned by Frank Murphy. It was left to the fury of the mob, and the result was that, instead of preventing bloodshed, the following men were injured:

Strikers: George Scheer, 23 years old, 1208 Rose Street, face and eyes burned from explosion of a gas bomb he picked up; Pete Pavlich, 31 years old, 705 Addison Street, cut on index finger throwing bottle. NATIONAL GUARD ARRIVED IN FLINT; REFUSED TO PROTECT WATERWORKS, SEWAGE-DISPOSAL PLANT, PUMPING STATION

Early the next morning, on the orders of the Governor, the National Guard began arriving in Flint, and the Governor stated through the newspaper that-

Whatever else may happen, there is going to be law and order in Michigan. The public safety and public interest are paramount. There will be maintenance of public order and protection of private property in Flint.

Several thousand of the National Guard men arrived in Flint, but public order was not maintained; nor was private property protected. This Frank Murphy knew, but he made no move to oust the strikers.

It has been charged many times that on no occasion while the sit-down strikes in Flint were in progress during this 44day period did Governor Murphy either request or order publicly the sit-down strikers to leave the plants of the motor company.

If the Governor did make such request or give such order, a reference to that order made and dated at the time and to the newspapers in which it was published would do much to clear the situation.

In justice to former Governor Frank Murphy-and all of us here will be glad to have the information—will some Member from Michigan on the Democratic side, if he has the information, tell us when and where and to whom the Governor issued an order or made a request that the sitdown strikers vacate those plants, or that the State police or members of the National Guard request or order them to Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. COX. I know it has been understood throughout the country that Mr. Murphy, as Governor of Michigan, did obstruct the processes of the court. Has the gentleman anything in his files that evidences that there was an affirmative action on his part to obstruct the officers of the court in executing the court's orders? In other words, to what extent and in what manner did the Governor exert influence to obstruct the officers of the court in executing the orders of the court with reference to the sit-down strikers?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I have no official paper showing that the Governor issued a formal order, either to State police or National Guard, telling them to see to it that the sheriff did not enforce the order of the court. I have not the slightest idea that any such formal order was ever issued, but here is the situation:

The order was given to the sheriff. He expressed a willingness to enforce it. The State police were in Flint-I think some seventy-odd strong. The Governor had been in Flint. He knew of the situation. He had consulted on the night of the 11th of January at the Durant Hotel when so many were injured, with Victor and Roy Reuther, well-known Communists and leaders in the strike, and later with the authorities in Flint

I have no way of knowing what orders were issued or what suggestions or intimations he made, either to the leaders of the strike or the law-enforcing authorities.

I only know that at the time the sheriff was ready and willing, as were the police, to enforce the order; that the public press charged that the sheriff did not execute the order because of what was said and done by the Governor. So far as I have been able to learn, this statement made in the newspapers has never been denied.

Now, I am asking that some of the Democrats from Michigan, from his home city, get up and deny it here. If he ever did anything to aid in the execution of that order, they should tell us about it.

Mr. LESINSKI. I deny it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. You tell us now when and where and to whom the Governor made a request that the strikers vacate the Flint factories, when and where and to whom he gave an order that either the State police or the National Guard ask them to go out or tell them they would be put out. I know we will all be glad to have that information. In justice to the Governor, it should be placed in the RECORD.

Mr. LESINSKI. You tell us where and when he did not. and then I will prove that you are wrong.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Of course, it is absurd for the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Lesinski] to say that I should tell you what the Governor did not say. What I call upon the gentleman to do is to tell this House, and I hope, with all sincerity, he can tell us when and where and to whom the Governor publicly suggested or issued an order or a command that the sit-down strikers should withdraw, or made a demand that the sit-down strikers vacate the plants.

There has been sworn testimony from Lieutenant Mulbar of the State police that he was ready to act; that the State police were ready to act, especially in the labor-holiday riot at Lansing and East Lansing. The Governor was on the ground there and knew of those unlawful activities. Now, put in the RECORD here anything that he did to stop the rioting, to open the places of business, to clear the streets.

I know that the Governor said-and I quote his words:

It should not be forgotten that personal liberty will be of little value if the authority and integrity of the courts are not preserved and property rights protected.

Here was Governor Murphy present in the State's capital, with the State police headquarters within 2 or 3 miles of Lansing, almost on the campus grounds at East Lansing, where the rioting was taking place, with the National Guard, numbering several thousand, encamped at Flint while the strikers were in possession.

Now, tell us, if you will, what Frank Murphy ever did to see to it that the order of the court was enforced; that the integrity of the court was upheld. Tell me that, and tell me when and where and what he said and what he did.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield. Mr. RAYBURN. Does the gentleman have any doubt that Mr. Murphy, whose nomination was unanimously reported by both Republicans and Democrats on the subcommittee yesterday, will be confirmed by the Senate and will be the Attorney General of the United States?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Not a particle of doubt.

Mr. RAYBURN. Then why the gentleman's speech?
Mr. HOFFMAN. Because I want to disclose the purpose of the man in the White House in gathering around him the kind of men he is gathering around him and calling to his aid; in selecting as his chief law adviser a man who himself failed to keep his oath, to comply with that provision of our State constitution which reads that he shall "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." [Applause.]

I want the people to know what kind of advisers he has; whether we are to have men who believe in a government by law or whether we are to have as chief law adviser a man who has suspended the operation of the laws, permitted the orders of the court to be defied, the citizen to be deprived of liberty and property.

The President can choose the members of his official family. That is his privilege, his prerogative. He is welcome to them. But the people of Michigan, the people of the Nation, have a right to know whether the official adviser of the President, of the Army and the Navy, is a man who in time of stress, of trial, will abide by the Constitution, will enforce the laws of the land.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman from Michigan believes in law and order, I am sure, as he has so many times stated.

If so, then why should he seek to destroy the confidence of the people in the man who is going to be one of the chief lawenforcing officers of the Government when he cannot put his finger on a single violation of the law that this man has ever committed?

Mr. HOFFMAN. The people of Michigan had no confidence in him. That was demonstrated in the last election.

You say I cannot put my finger on a single violation of the law that Frank Murphy ever committed? True enough, and I have not made that charge. I am only citing the record which, in the judgment of many, shows that he failed to keep his cath of office, to protect the citizens of his State, to put down insurrection and defiance of the law.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman has failed to do so, in reply to the question of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr.

Cox].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, let me tell you something. On the 7th day of June 1937, the Governor of Michigan was in the capital of Michigan. He had a police station within 3 miles, with State police in it. A mob came in at 8:30 in the morning. They took possession of the streets in front of the capitol where the Governor was. They marched four abreast around the capitol. They closed the stores in Lansing. Is that any violation of the law? Is it in violation of the law, I ask you, to close a man's place of business? Is that a violation of the law?

Mr. RAYBURN. The Governor did not do that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Beam). The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Does the gentleman desire more time?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes. I would like to answer that question.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Michigan be extended 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will put that with the reservation that the gentleman from North Dakota and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin] will consent to the extension. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from North Dakota?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Colorado agree?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan is extended 10 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. The Governor did not close the stores. These men he had been friendly with, some of these men he had been holding conferences with—the men at the head of the strike—they closed the stores. The Governor was there and he knew about it and he spoke to them and he said that no harm should come to them.

IS MURPHY LIABLE UNDER THE DECISION OF THE MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT?

Let me cite this example:

A dozen or more Members of the House do not like what some Member addressing the House is saying. They start to throw him out. They have no right to do so; nevertheless, that is their purpose. The Sergeant at Arms, whose duty it is to maintain order in the House, and whoever may be in the chair stand idly by and let the Member be thrown from the Chamber. Is not the Sergeant at Arms, the occupant of the chair, each aiding and abetting in a violation of the rules of the House? And are they not, in a State like Michigan, where aiders and abettors are principals, law violators?

The Michigan Supreme Court has so held in the case of Washburn, the leader in the Lansing labor holiday. Consider for a moment the decision in that case (People v. Washburn, 285 Mich. 119).

In that case Lester Washburn, who, on the 7th day of June 1937, at the time of the Lansing labor holiday, told the mob to go out to East Lansing and "bring back a part of the college," was charged with having, by threats or otherwise and without authority of law, interfered with a mechanic or laborer in the quiet and peaceable pursuit of his lawful avocation.

It was not alleged, nor was there any evidence to show, that Washburn directly personally interfered with the lawful avocation of the complaining witness, Edward Evans. The theory of the prosecution proceeded upon the premise that Washburn, not being present at the time Evans was prevented from working, nevertheless was a principal, "was one who procures, councils, aids, or abets in the commission of an offense."

The record of the case shows that Washburn told one of the officers of the Capital City Wrecking Co., of Lansing, at which there was a strike, that he could not go to the office, and that he was on various occasions present at the place of the strike; that he had, over a sound car, asked for volunteers for picket duty, and that he knew that an injunction had been issued; that the pickets told one Edward Evans, who desired to go to work, as he approached the factory, "There will be no work here today." "Do you want to go to work?" "Sign on the dotted line," and that Evans and other men were thus prevented from working.

Washburn testified that he advised the local groups and consulted with the pickets at the company's plant.

The Michigan Supreme Court said:

The conclusion is inescapable that defendant aided and abetted in preventing Evans from engaging in his lawful avocation on June 4, contrary to the express provisions of the statute.

The court, quoting from other legal authority, further said:

The amount of advice or encouragement rendered is not material if it had effect in inducing the commission of the crime. Nor is the time of rendering the advice, aid, or encouragement an important element.

Apply this decision of the court, if you will, to the conduct of Frank Murphy on the 11th day of January 1937 when he was present at the Durant Hotel in Flint.

Recall that he was called to Flint by the director of public safety of that city to aid in suppressing a riot which was then taking place at a plant of the Fisher Body Co.; that he went to the hotel and consulted for an hour or longer with Roy and Victor Reuther and others who were then, and who had been for some time, directing the activities of the sit-down strikers who were destroying property, committing a felony.

Remember that, later in February, when the sheriff of the county sought to evict those who had been, and who were, violating the law, it was Frank Murphy who gave them aid and encouragement by advising the sheriff that the execution of the writ should be withheld.

Under the decision in People against Washburn, was or was not Frank Murphy an aider and abettor, a violator of the law of the State of Michigan?

Mr. RAYBURN. Let me ask, Is there not law in Michigan? Are there not orderly processes in Michigan?

Mr. HOFFMAN. There is today, but not when Murphy was Governor. Because of Murphy, civil law in Michigan was suspended. He suspended it in Flint by calling in the National Guard, who protected the strikers in their illegal possession of the factories.

Mr. RAYBURN. Certainly all the judges out in Michigan are not Democrats.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, no. Judge Gadola, of Genesee County, was a Republican. He issued the order to evacuate the factories at Flint.

Mr. RAYBURN. It would seem to me that some patriotic Republican judge would have tried to have the law executed in his jurisdiction. Is the Governor of a State to be called upon to be a policeman in every village, every town in the State?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No, no, no.

Mr. RAYBURN. That seems to be what the gentleman is assuming that the Governor of Michigan should have been.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, no. But what I say is this: That when two or three thousand men come into Michigan, deprive a citizen of his liberty—they did, did they not?—take possession of private property without process of law-they did. did they not?-should not the Governor preserve the peace, put down insurrection and defiance of the law?

Mr. RAYBURN. Is there no resort to courts?

Mr. HOFFMAN. What?

Mr. RAYBURN. Are there not courts to which resort may be had?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Certainly there are, and Judge Gadola issued the order for the sit-down strikers to get out. What happened when they went out there to execute the order? There was the Governor with his National Guard. His position was that there was to be no bloodshed-that the troops were to make no effort to put the strikers out.

Mr. RAYBURN. And there was not any bloodshed in Michigan; and law and order, it seems to me, is going along there pretty well at this time, is it not?

Mr. HOFFMAN. We got rid of Murphy. [Applause.] We got rid of Murphy. [Applause.] There was plenty of bloodshed and it was the blood of the law-enforcing officers that was shed by Communists and by sit-down strikers directed by Communists.

Mr. RAYBURN. And for several months before Murphy was gotten rid of things were going along in a pretty fine way in Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, we had strikes, but Murphy was up for reelection and a soft pedal was put on violence and sitdown strikes. Now I shall say something that will please the gentleman from Texas. Over in Berrien County, in my district, we have a Democratic judge, Judge Evans. When we had the sit-down strike in Niles he issued his order. The fellows came in from outside but the sheriff, Charles Millerand I will not mention his political faith either-he went over there, and the order that was issued by the Democratic judge was enforced, nor was there bloodshed. But when Brother Murphy was on the scene at Flint, the court order was not enforced

Mr. RAYBURN. Has the gentleman any proof whatsoever that Governor Murphy at any time prevented the execution of an order of the court?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I will say this, that the proof is absolute and uncontradicted that he did not faithfully execute the laws of the State, that he was there and had the men; and that it is commonly reported in the newspapers-and so far as I know it has never been denied, and I am asking you now as the leader on that side to produce here evidence that he ever told them even to get out.

Mr. RAYBURN. I should not be asked to submit proof to refute the gentleman's charges. He should submit proof to support his charges. The gentleman is making a statement trying to prove the disqualification of Governor Murphy.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Sure, I am.

Mr. RAYBURN. And he is making Mr. HOFFMAN. No; I am not. And he is making roundabout statements.

Mr. RAYBURN. He is making mere allegations.

Mr. HOFFMAN. No; I am making inquiries; I am asking

We know what happened; we know that the citizens were deprived of their property and their liberty, in violation of both the State and the Federal Constitutions, in violation of the laws of the State; that the Governor was the man charged with the enforcement of the law; that he knew the violations were taking place; and I am asking whether he performed his duty when he failed to protect the citizens of

What happened at Monroe? The citizens of Monroe came out on the highway and said, "Thus far you come and no farther," and Van Bittner was out north of the town with 8,000 of his Communists and sit-down strikers. They did not take Monroe. Nor was there any bloodshed on that Sunday morning.

But let me get back to the trouble at Flint.

The city manager was advised that the Communists intended to cripple Flint by damaging the waterworks, the sewage-disposal plant, the pumping station, and the National Guard was asked to patrol those points, but refused, and the city hired individuals to perform that duty.

Members of the National Guard cautioned the city manager not to do anything that would cause trouble. asked the city police to stay out of certain parts of the city.

The State police would not patrol the streets without orders and the National Guard would not do it. The city manager charges that the National Guard suggested that the police return two machine-gun units which had been loaned to them.

WRIT OF EJECTMENT ISSUED

Things went from bad to worse. On February 2 Judge Gadola, after a hearing, issued his writ authorizing the ejectment of the sit-down strikers. Frank Murphy, if he read the newspapers and was in touch with the situation, must have known that this writ had been issued.

It has been many times charged and so far never publicly denied that the Governor advised the sheriff of the county to withhold the execution of the writ.

STREETS AND HIGHWAY CLOSED

The mobs, realizing they had a friend in the Governor, that neither the State police nor the National Guard would move against them, that the police force and the sheriff's force were unable to successfully oppose them, virtually took possession of the lower end of Flint, around Fisher plant No. 1. They closed the main highway leading from Detroit and rerouted many cars which sought to pass.

NATIONAL GUARD AND STATE POLICE REFUSED TO OPEN STREETS TO TRAFFIC

The National Guard was asked to patrol that section of the main highway and to open it up, but they would not do it; neither would the State police.

The law-abiding citizens of Flint and those men who wanted to work in the factories, employees of General Motors, became so incensed that they resolved that they would no longer submit to control of their places of employment, of their city, by mobs led by outside wrecking crews. They had been and were denied by Frank Murphy the protection that was due them from the State police and from the National Guard.

POLICE CALLED FOR RESERVES

The natural result of this failure on the part of the Governor to enforce the law was that the city manager, the director of public safety of the city of Flint, issued orders to bring in reserve officers. These calls for help were sent to various organizations, and the men began to flock in to be examined and, if found qualified, to be sworn in as a reserve police force. They assembled at the city hall and at the Masonic Temple in somewhat the same temper and with somewhat the same objective as the members of the Boston Tea Party.

Note now, if you will, what happened. Frank Murphy has given as his reason for his failure to afford protection to the citizens of Flint his desire to avoid bloodshed; that he feared that if the officers of the law performed their duty and opposed the mob or its leaders the situation would get beyond control and there would be bloodshed.

Certainly the National Guard, numbering several thousand, and the State police, trained men, fully equipped and armed, were as capable of securing obedience to the law and preventing bloodshed, as were the numerically few police force and the reserves of the city of Flint.

MOB LEADERS CALLED FOR CONFERENCE AND DISARMED

Nevertheless as soon as the reserve corps began to organize and the leaders of the mob learned what was on foot—as soon as they knew that they were to be confronted by real armed opposition—they asked for a conference. The conference was held and the result was that the mobs dispersed, laid down their arms, yielded obedience to the traffic laws, and thereafter evacuated the factories.

The thing that restored order in Flint was the formation of a group of men sworn in to aid the police force of the city of Flint, and not the negotiations carried on by Governor Murphy.

RESERVES ACCOMPLISHED WHAT MURPHY FAILED TO DO

Frank Murphy, by one sentence notifying the lawless, those who were holding possession of the factories and of Flint streets, that the law would be enforced, could have accomplished the same thing.

Listen to these words-I quote:

It should not be forgotten that personal liberty will be of little value if the authority and integrity of the courts are not preserved and property rights protected.

Never was truer statement uttered, and those are the words of Frank Murphy. They show his realization of the fundamental need of an adherence to the law. Regrettable that he did not abide by his own convictions.

It matters not whether he yielded to the importunities of the leaders of the sit-down strikers, the Communists who were directing and controlling the sit-down strikes, or whether he followed the wishes of the officials of General Motors.

He failed to uphold the integrity of the court. He failed to protect property rights, to protect the liberty of the workers.

LABOR HOLIDAY AT LANSING

Let us turn now to what happened at Lansing, Michigan's capital.

MOB TOOK POSSESSION OF LANSING AS PROTEST AGAINST ARREST OF PICKETS

Picketing strikers at Lansing had been arrested and placed in jail because of the violation of an injunction. On the 7th of June 1937, Lester E. Washburn, whose wife was one of the pickets and who was president of Lansing Local 182 of the U. A. W. U., called a labor holiday to protest the arrest.

On that day some 15,000 men gathered in the downtown area of the city of Lansing. By the use of cars and trucks they blockaded the streets and closed them to traffic. They closed the stores and places of business; in short, they took and held possession of the capital of Michigan for that day; and the only reason, the only excuse, for their acts was that, in accordance with the lawful order of a court, pickets in contempt of court had been arrested and confined in jail.

MURPHY PRESENT AND WITNESSED DEMONSTRATION

During this demonstration Frank Murphy, the Governor, was present in Lansing and witnessed it, and he addressed the strikers from the capitol steps. He told them in substance that no harm would come to them. He made no effort, so far as is known, to clear the streets or to enforce the law.

The demonstration was so successful that along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the pickets were released. They were let out of jail and escorted to the steps of the State capitol.

MOB WENT TO EAST LANSING—COLLEGE BOYS AND GIRLS THREW LEADERS

INTO RIVER

In the meantime a part of the mob had gone to the college town of East Lansing, where we have a State Agricultural College. Their purpose was to do in East Lansing what they had done in Lansing—take possession of the town and close the business places.

In East Lansing and almost within stone's throw of the college buildings is the headquarters of the Michigan State police, and on duty there at the time was Lieutenant Harold Mulbar and a detachment of the State police.

WASHBURN'S ORDERS TO MOB TO "BRING BACK PART OF COLLEGE"

The college boys and girls, objecting to the closing of the restaurants where they ate, threw six members of the mob into the Red Cedar River. Angered, some of the leaders returned to Lansing and, as the pickets were released from the jail, they reported to Washburn that several of his men had been thrown into the Red Cedar River by college boys. Washburn said:

Well, send a group out there right away and don't come back until you bring back part of the college.

The sworn testimony of Donald W. Gardner, a reporter for the Detroit Times, shows that, in the office of the chief of police, Washburn made the statement to go out to the college "and don't come back until you bring back part of it."

COLLEGE BOYS AND GIRLS DID WHAT MURPHY FAILED TO DO

Acting on this suggestion, out they went, some two or three thousand strong, and part of the same crowd which had defied the Governor of the State, which had before held in contempt the State police and the National Guard; and, when they reached the city limits of East Lansing, they found there some two or three thousand college students, who were ready for battle. The result was that Washburn's demonstrating mob concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and they returned to Lansing without closing a single store.

Those farmer boys and girls could and did do what Frank Murphy, Governor of the State, with the National Guard subject to his command, with the police of the city of Lansing ready to act, with the State police, many of whom were on the scene, most of whom were within call, would not do.

STATE POLICE WITHIN CALL—WOULD NOT INTERFERE BECAUSE THEY HAD NO ORDERS

Lieutenant Mulbar of the State police tells us that he was present at East Lansing on the 7th day of June 1937; that he was advised that the strikers were going out to East Lansing to close up the stores there and to duplicate what they had done in Lansing; that he knew that the students took exception, had thrown some of the strike leaders into the river, and that he knew that afterward a mob of some 2,000 was marching down on the State University; that he would gladly have gone to the point of danger, had he been called, and that the State police were ready and willing to carry out orders for the protection of life and property; that, lacking such orders, they were powerless.

He further said that he knew that misdemeanors and felonies under the State law and a high crime under the Federal law had been committed there on this particular day.

To me it is more than passing strange that the State of Michigan should be required to maintain and support a State police force, numbering many men, supplied with automobiles and with all the equipment necessary to maintain law and order, quartered in many well-built, substantial police stations scattered throughout the State, which should be powerless to act when property is being destroyed, when streets and highways are being blockaded, when men are being assaulted and beaten, until they have received orders from the Governor of the State.

Is it true, as a matter of fact, that if one citizen is being deprived of his property, is being held up and beaten by another in the presence of a member of the Michigan State police that that officer has no authority to enforce the law? If that be true, then the taxpayers of Michigan better save their money; the police force better be disbanded and the individual citizen given the right to carry arms and to protect himself in time of danger.

Such is not the law, neither in Michigan nor elsewhere, and the inevitable conclusion is that the Michigan State police, courageous, honest, efficient officers all—and the National Guard as well—had received orders direct from headquarters, the office of the Governor of Michigan, not to interfere with the activities of the strikers at Flint or the demonstrators at Lansing.

TWO INSTANCES CITED PROVE THAT LAWLESSNESS CONTINUED BECAUSE MURPHY AIDED THE STRIKERS; THAT BLOODSHED CAN BE PREVENTED BY INSISTENCE THAT LAW BE ENFORCED

The two foregoing instances which I have cited, one at Flint, the other at Lansing, show beyond argument that the law was disobeyed, the citizens deprived of their property and their liberty, because Frank Murphy threw his personality, his aid, to the side of the lawless and against the innocent, unarmed citizen.

The two instances cited demonstrate, first at Flint, when the citizens arose in their wrath, when no longer could they restrain their righteous indignation, and announced that they proposed to join the police force and enforce the law, that bloodshed could be prevented by an enforcement of the law.

The same thing was proven again at East Lansing when a mob of two to three thousand demonstrators, many of whom had taken part in the lawless activities at Flint and other places, were confronted by a like number of college boys and girls.

TWO INSTANCES PROVE MURPHY TO BLAME FOR BLOODSHED AT FLINT, FOR LAWLESSNESS AT LANSING

These two incidents prove, if they prove nothing else, that for the bloodshed at Flint, for the lawlessness at Lansing, Governor Murphy was wholly to blame; that his lack of courage, his refusal to perform his duty, his sympathy for the lawless, many of whom he knew to be Communists, neither settled the sit-down strikes nor prevented bloodshed.

Nor can Frank Murphy excuse himself by the plea that he was acting in behalf of innocent, law-abiding but unfortunate citizens.

Murphy acted in behalf of and his conduct aided the sitdown strikers.

A news commentator friendly to Murphy said that the reason for Murphy's failure to eject the sit-down strikers and to protect the citizens of the State is found in that verse of Scripture which reads:

But with righteousness shall He judge the poor and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth.

Evidently the sit-down strikers, in Frank Murphy's opinion, were "the meek," and to settle the sit-down strike he was reproving them with equity, rather than compelling them to obey the law.

If he regarded the sit-down strikers as the meek, did he also have in mind that verse of the Psalms which reads:

The meek will He guide in judgment.

And did he have in mind that other verse which reads: Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth.

The strikers came by Flint through no inheritance. They took and held it by force.

But were they "the meek"?

Your attention is called to the fact that those who came to Michigan in the sit-down strike came breathing threats of violence. They preached defiance of the peace officers, disregard for the lawful order of the court. Were they, in the words of the Scripture, "the meek"?

They barricaded themselves on private property. Did they disturb domestic tranquillity? Did they intend to do great bodily harm to those who resisted their demands?

They kept men from the factories; they kept workers imprisoned in the factories. They armed themselves with and threatened to use the weapons which are here shown before you-weapons which came from the barricaded factories which the strikers had taken over.

WEAPONS USED BY SIT-DOWN STRIKERS

Look, if you will, at some of these weapons which were used by those strikers.

Here is a metal ball 2 inches in diameter.

Here is a slingshot made of metal, with a piece of inner tube to be used as a propelling force.

Here is a club fashioned from bolt heads bound with tape and covered with paper, 20 inches long.

Here is another, a metal bar wound with tape, 14 inches

Another, with a handle, wound with tape, 15 inches long and having protruding from one end the connections which ordinarily run from battery to distributor on an automobile. and having at the end a brass connection.

Here is a file, pointed, with a handle, 16 inches long and fashioned to penetrate the body.

Here is another steel bar, sharpened on the edge, a piece of rubber fitted on for a handle, 20 inches long.

Here is a hammer, the head brass, the handle wrapped

These weapons came from the hands of sit-down strikers. And here is a rope fitted with a hangman's noose and in which the Detroit police advise one Mike Jakub, one time of Detroit, aged 45, white, was found hanging in the Plymouth plant on March 25, 1937, when a sit-down strike was in

It was a case of either an attempted suicide or attempted murder. The man himself, when taken to the hospital, always insisted that he did not know what happened to him but thought that someone tried to hang him. Certainly a strange place for an attempt at suicide.

Were the men armed with these weapons and with similar weapons bent on a peaceful mission? Are they not rather those who Frank Murphy later said sought bloodshed?

Men armed with these and similar weapons are the men whom Frank Murphy protected from the police force of the city of Flint, to whose aid he called the National Guard when the sheriff of Genesee County, the officers of the Circuit Court of Genesee County, would have evicted them from the plants of General Motors.

Mr. KRAMER. Will the gentleman yield? In what pawnshop in Michigan did the gentleman purchase these things? Mr. HOFFMAN. Does the gentleman mean where they came from? Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. They did not come from any pawnshop.

Mr. KRAMER. A pawnshop is where they came from. Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman is more familiar with pawnshops than I am. [Laughter and applause.] These weapons came through the law-enforcing officers of the State of Michigan; reputable, courageous officers, who would have performed their duty had they been given the opportunity.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia. Mr. COX. I would not want anybody in this world to think that I was in any wise in sympathy with the state of insurrection that existed in the gentleman's State. I think it was a disgrace to the Nation, and I have not yet found anything in the behavior of any of the officials of that State for which they can feel proud. I want to know if anything was done by the Governor of the State at that time to join issue with these people who came into the State to take charge of other people's property? In other words, was there any official action on the part of the Governor to maintain a state of peace and law within Michigan?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I know of an occasion down at the Durant Hotel in Flint when the Governor came down there. He did confer with Roy and Victor Reuther and with Bob Travis-Communists all, but not residents of Flint-as well as the officers of the city and State police. The next day he called out the National Guard, and in that way they did preserve order with these men in possession of those places and with the strikers in possession of the factories.

Captain Mulbar, of the State police, testified under oath before the Dies committee that he was in charge of a detail which went out to the struck plants in Flint, but that his orders were to investigate and observe. He said he saw large piles of metal-hinges and other things-near the windows, to be used as missiles to be thrown either by hand or with slingshots they had built for that particular purpose; that there were jars which he was told contained acid; that he was permitted by a strikers committee to enter the plant, but that the committee refused him permission to talk with the other men in the plant; that afterward he talked with some of the men who were in the plant and learned that some of them had to fight to escape from the plant, and that others, in order to get out, promised to join the union.

He testified further that he and the State police were willing to enforce the law but they had no orders to do so. Other officers refused to act because, as they said, they had no orders from the Governor.

MEN COMMITTING FELONIES PROTECTED BY MURPHY

Men were engaged in the commission of felonies. The Governor saw to it, through the use of the State troops, that the sheriff's force did not execute the order of the court. Thus, did he not in this manner aid and abed them in the commission of the felonies? Was he or was he not, under the decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan in the case of People v. Washburn (285 Mich. 119), a strike leader, hereinbefore referred to, equally guilty with them?

DID MURPHY THROW HIS SUPPORT TO LAW-ENFORCING AUTHORITIES OR TO THE LAWLESS?

Frank Murphy, when Governor of Michigan, backed by the armed forces of the State, was confronted with the choice of upholding the laws of the State, performing his duty as Governor, or condoning and supporting, by his conduct and his failure to give orders, or by his orders, to the National Guard, those who were violating the law-depriving citizens of their constitutional rights.

I make no charge. In view of the facts, form your own judgment.

DID MURPHY KNOW THE COMMUNISTS WERE COMING TO MICHIGAN?

If you read the history of the strike at Flint, you will see that Roy and Victor Reuther, Bob Travis, and other wellknow Communists were, through the sound truck, directing activities. You will note that the two Reuthers conferred with Murphy at the Durant Hotel on the night of the 11th of January, the date of the riot at the Fisher plant. Did Murphy know that the Communists were coming to Michigan?

On the front page of the May 24, 1937, issue of Social Justice, published at Royal Oak, Mich., in blackface letters an inch high, runs the legend, "Communism is here," and beneath it the words "Governor Murphy, of Michigan."

On the same page we gather from the publication that Frank Murphy said-

At the Shrine of the Little Flower that, according to President Roosevelt, "If communism breaks in America, it will be in the Detroit area, where it will first manifest itself."

That later, at the Book Cadillac Hotel in Detroit, Governor Murphy said:

Communism is not coming: it is here.

Still later the press carried the information that Governor Murphy made the statement:

Communists deliberately created disorders in the Lansing labor holiday, the Consumers Power Co. strike, and in some phases of the sit-downs. They not only sought disorders but they sought bloodshed. They wanted bloodshed and they sought to draw us into a fight.

So, from Frank Murphy himself, we learn that he knew that communism was coming to Michigan. We know that it came: we know that the Communists wanted bloodshed: and we know from what happened that they brought it about. REASONS FOR GENERAL MOTORS AND CHRYSLER'S APPROVAL OF MURPHY'S COURSE, IF THEY APPROVED IT

The record shows that Frank Murphy failed to perform his duty as Governor of the State; that he betrayed his people; that he left many of them to the mercy of the armed invaders.

In Murphy's behalf it is now said that the officials of General Motors and Chrysler are commending him for the manner in which he handled the sit-dow strikes.

General Motors officials and Chrysler officials may commend him, if they wish. They, at the time, may have been motivated by their fear of what might happen to their plants, to their machinery, if they did not yield to the demands of the sit-down strikers. They were in much the same situation as the kidnap victim whose relatives and friends withhold action because they fear bodily harm.

General Motors and Chrysler officials may at the time have condoned or approved of the Governor's conduct because they had no hope that he would perform his duty as Governor.

General Motors and Chrysler officials, looking back, may now want him confirmed as Attorney General so that they will not longer be forced to bear with him in Michigan.

General Motors and Chrysler officials, too, may consider it wise and profitable to bargain with a Lewis for the labor they want, rather than to deal with real representatives of the local organizations.

Let General Motors and Chrysler, if they wish, sell the man who must work for a livelihood into bondage to the C. I. O. and its Communist allies. The people of Michigan will find

General Motors and Chrysler officials may think it more profitable to sit down across the council board and buy from a labor dictator the toil of human beings than to deal with the men or the representatives of the men in their plants in the different localities.

God forbid that ever shall come the day when those who use labor in mass production will be in position to purchase the toil of human beings from a labor dictator, which is what Lewis desires to be.

Let John L. Lewis and General Motors and Chrysler officials join hands in hailing Frank Murphy as the arbitrator of their troubles. He receives no such commendation from the workers or the citizens of Michigan.

By his action and their action and the action of John L. Lewis thousands of free-born Americans have been compelled to pay tribute to the C. I. O. in order that they may exercise their rights under the Constitution.

Saturday's press here in Washington advised us that he is now to investigate and determine whether or not he performed his duty as Governor; whether Communists are engaged in subversive, un-American activities. We know not what his conclusion may be.

THE PEOPLE'S VERDICT ON MURPHY'S CONDUCT

In 1936, riding on the coat-tail of President Roosevelt, who carried the State by a majority of 317,061 votes, Murphy was elected Governor with a majority of 48,919.

After the sit-down strikes, the settlement of which is Murphy's boast and the President's pride, the people of Michigan-not General Motors and Chrysler, not the C. I. O .gave their verdict on Murphy's conduct, and they defeated him in November of 1938 by almost a hundred thousand

The people of Michigan know by personal experience the record of Frank Murphy. They know what he is, as distinguished from what he says.

To reelect him Governor of the State of Michigan many forces joined hands and presented a united front.

The people of the State, especially those on relief, were given to understand that help for the aged and the unfortunate came through Murphy. By his order the pensions of the aged were reduced $1 and then, on the 1st day of September 1938 every recipient of the State and Federal pension was advised in writing as follows:

We are pleased to announce that, in compliance with instructions received from Gov. Frank Murphy, we are restoring the $1 cut that was put into effect July 1, 1938.

The enclosed check includes this additional dollar.

JAMES G. BRYANT, Director, State Welfare Department.

Again am I reminded of the scriptures of the Psalm which reads:

The Lord giveth; the Lord taketh away: Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Was Michigan's political machine endeavoring to indicate to the aged, the unfortunate, the needy, by the foregoing official statement, that the pittance which they received was the gift of Murphy?

Frank Murphy, kind and solicitous for the welfare of the unfortunate and the aged? When a candidate for public office first reducing their means of livelihood by a paltry dollar and then on the eve of a primary election notifying each one that he was restoring it? or was he thinking of election day?

All the power of the well-oiled State and Federal political machines, with almost unlimited funds at their disposal, was used in an effort to reelect Frank Murphy. The Communists endorsed him, and, joining hands with the President of the United States, who made a personal appeal for his reelection, threw their power behind him.

Let pass in review the political forces which came to Michigan to reelect Frank Murphy Governor. We see three grand divisions of shock troops; the first made up of that vast army bearing Federal and State funds allocated to school districts, towns, counties, and States to purchase the votes of the citizens; made up of all those who were distributing Federal and State funds to farmers by way of subsidies; loans of all kinds, relief funds for the aged, for the unfortunate; and so distributing them as to influence the election—a great division commanded by the Federal and State distributors of these funds.

Another grand second division, consisting of the sit-down strikers, the Communists, under the leadership of Earl Browder and his subordinates.

The third led by the Commander in Chief of the Federal Government—the President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who threw the weight of his personal popularity into the battle; whose subordinate commanders were playing politics with relief funds—all three, political corruptionists, Communists, and the President, marching shoulder to shoulder to reelect Frank Murphy.

In spite of all this, the citizens of Michigan, who had tried him, who had heard and seen the evidence, rendered their verdict and they repudiated him because he had not, in their opinion, performed his duty, complied with his oath, supported the Constitution of State and Nation.

The issue before Frank Murphy, as Governor of Michigan, in the sit-down strike was clear, and it was a fundamental issue. It was this: Shall American citizens be permitted to work free from restraint, free from violence, with the protection of the law and the assurance that their rights under State and Federal Constitutions shall be protected?

Because he deemed it expedient the Governor of the State refused to protect Michigan citizens exercising their constitutional rights.

WHAT MURPHY'S APPOINTMENT INDICATES

The selection of Frank Murphy as legal adviser of the President means, if it means anything, that the President approves of a government by men, by expediency, not a government by law under the Constitution.

If the people of the country want that kind of government, Murphy's appointment should be confirmed. If they want a government by law, the appointment should be rejected.

Gloss over the facts as you will, be as charitable as you may, do not these facts remain?

First. In violation of the provisions of State and Federal Constitution citizens were without due process of law by force deprived of their property and of their liberty over a period of 44 days.

Second. During this time the Governor of the State, Frank Murphy, who had taken oath that he would support the Constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State guaranteeing these liberties, and who had subscribed to the third section of article VI of the State constitution, which provided that he should "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," with ample force at his command, not only did not use that force in support and defense of constitutional rights to see that the laws were faithfully executed, but did not, by spoken or written word, publicly request, declare, or demand that these deprivations of constitutional rights, disobedience of the law, be ended.

Appended in the Record will be the foregoing and a few questions, the answers to which may tend to show Murphy's qualifications for the Attorney Generalship.

As a citizen of Michigan and the Representative of the Fourth Congressional District of that State, I submit a few questions and ask Frank Murphy, on his honor as an American citizen and as a lawyer and former judge and former Governor of the State of Michigan and as a man who has been appointed but not confirmed as Attorney General of the United States, to answer.

1. Does the Michigan Constitution provide that "The military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power"?

- 2. Did you, directly or indirectly, either intimate to or give the officers of the National Guard of the State of Michigan to understand that they were to prevent the police authorities of the city of Flint or the sheriff or his deputies of the county of Genesee, from evicting the sit-down strikers who were occupying factories at Flint?
- 3. Did you, directly or indirectly, intimate to the sheriff of Genesee County that he should either withhold or not carry out the order of Judge Gadola requiring the eviction of the sit-down strikers?
- 4. If you did so intimate or order, will you cite the provisions of law giving you that authority?
- 5. Did the director of public safety of the city of Flint, on the 8th day of January 1937 ask you for help to enforce the law in the city of Flint?
- 6. If he did so ask you, did you give or did you refuse to give him aid, or what was your reply?
- 7. Were you at Flint, Mich., on the night of the 11th or the morning of the 12th of January 1937, when a conflict took place between the police officers of the city of Flint and the sit-down strikers?
- 8. Were you told by the director of public safety of the city of Flint on the 11th of January 1937 that a riot was taking place?
- 9. Upon your arrival at the city of Flint, before consulting with the director of public safety or any of the police force of the city of Flint, did you meet and consult with Victor and Roy Reuther?
- 10. Did you at that time know that they were reputed to be Communists?
- 11. Were you at that time advised that a battle was taking place between peace officers and the sit-down strikers?
- 12. Were there not at that time in the city of Flint at least 50 members of the State police?
- 13. Had you, prior to the 11th day of January 1937, learned that the sit-down strikers were occupying factories in Flint?
- 14. Had you, prior to the 11th day of January 1937, given the State police any orders to preserve the peace?
- 15. Had you given them any orders to prevent assaults on men who wanted to work in the factories?
- 16. Had you given them any orders to see to it that men who wanted to enter the seized factories and who wanted to work should not be permitted to do so?
- 17. Did you know that Lieutenant Mulbar in charge of a squad of State police had been to Flint, had learned that the strikers had seized private property?
- 18. Did Commissioner Olander or any officer of the State police report to you before the 11th of January 1937 that sitdown strikers were in possession of private property at Flint?
- 19. Did Commissioner Olander or any member of the State police report to you that men who wanted to work were being kept from their jobs by the sit-down strikers?
- 20. Did you learn from any source during the sit-down strike that private property was being destroyed?
- 21. If you did so learn, did you ascertain whether the value of that property so destroyed was more than $25 or whether it was attached to the freehold and considered a part thereof?
- 22. If you answer that you knew that private property had been seized, that men were being kept from their places of employment, that private property was being destroyed, did you give any orders to anyone to obtain the evacuation of the private property or to punish those who had destroyed private property in excess of $25 in value?
- 23. If you gave such orders, when and to whom did you give them, and were they written or verbal?
- 24. Did you learn during the course of the sit-down strikes that the strikers or their sympathizers had blockaded certain streets or highways in Flint?
- 25. If you answer that you did, did you do anything to cause the opening of such streets or highways; and if so, what did you do?
- 26. Did you know at the time of the sit-down strikes that it was a felony to damage real estate if the damage exceeded in amount $25?

- 27. If you answer that you did, did you know that real estate had been damaged in excess of the amount of $25?
- 28. If you answer that you did, what, if anything, did you do to punish those who had committed the felony or to prevent the recurrence of a similar act?
- 29. Did you learn during January of 1937 that men who worked in some of the factories at Flint were being held in those factories against their will?
- 30. If you did, did you give any orders requiring them to be liberated?
- 31. Did you in January of 1937 learn that men who wanted to work in the factories at Flint were prevented from doing so by the sit-down strikers?
- 32. If you did, did you consider that those who were thus deprived of their opportunity to work were deprived of their liberty without due process of law?
- 33. If you knew that private property was being held from the owners by the sit-down strikers, did you consider that a deprivation of private property without due process of law?
- 34. If you learned during January 1937 that workingmen were being deprived of their liberty—that is, of the right to go to work at their usual places of employment—and that possession of private property was being held without process of law, did you consider it your duty to see to it that the constitutional guaranties against the seizure of private property or the deprivation of liberty were made secure to the citizens?
  - 35. If you answer that you did, did you do it?
- 36. Did not the sit-down strikers remain in possession of some of the factories for 44 days?
- 37. If men, 100 and more in number, take possession of a factory and hold possession by force and refuse to permit the regular employees to enter the factory to work at their jobs, and continue this course for a period of 30 days, did you believe it to be your duty as Governor of the State to cause them to be ejected from the factories?
  - 38. Did you do it?
- 39. Did you not while Governor of Michigan neglect or refuse to require obedience to the law by the sit-down strikers?
- 40. Was it not your duty as Governor, under the oath of office which you took, to compel the sit-down strikers to evacuate the plants?
- 41. If sit-down strikers take and hold possession of a factory, how long do you think they should be permitted to hold possession of private property or to deprive men who want to work of the opportunity to work before being compelled to get out of the factory?
- 42. Were you present at Lansing at the time of the so-called labor holiday on the 7th day of June 1937?
- 43. Did you see that some of the streets of Lansing were blockaded by a mob at that time?
- 44. Did you know at that time that private places of business in the city of Lansing had been closed without process of law?
- 45. If you knew that either or both of these things had happened, did you do anything to open the blockaded streets or to assist the businessmen in opening their places of business?
  - 46. If you say that you did, what did you do?
- 47. Was there not on that occasion available and subject to your command the State police force?
- 48. Did you at that time give any orders to the State police or to any other officers charged with the execution of the law and with the preservation of peace to force the evacuation of the streets of Lansing or to prevent the closing of business places?
- 49. Were you on that same day in the city of East Lansing?
- 50. Did you not know on that day that some of those engaged in the demonstration were marching to East Lansing?
- 51. If you say that you did, did you do anything to prevent the accomplishment of their purpose?
- 52. Did you not know from what had happened in Lansing that they probably intended to stage the same kind of a proceeding in East Lansing?
- 53. Did you not know that the students at East Lansing had thrown some of the demonstrators in the Red Cedar River?

- 54. Did you not anticipate that, if a group of these demonstrators who had blockaded the streets of Lansing and closed some of its places of business attempted the same procedure in East Lansing, there would probably be trouble between the college students and the demonstrators?
- 55. If you answer that you did, what did you do to prevent such trouble?
- 56. Is not the headquarters of the State police located at East Lansing and was there not on the day of the demonstration in Lansing a force of at least 25 State police located at that headquarters?
- 57. Did you not as a judge know that it was the duty of the sheriff of Genesee County to enforce the order of the court to cause the ejection of the sit-down strikers from the factories in Flint?
- 58. If you did know that fact, did you give any order or make any suggestion, either to the sheriff of Genesee County or to the chief of police of Flint, to the State police, or to the officers of the National Guard that the order should be carried out?
- 59. Did you ever at any time publicly either request or order the sit-down strikers to evacuate any of the factories at Flint?
- 60. If you did, when and where and in what form did you make or give a request or order, and to whom?
- 61. If you made such request or gave such order, what, if anything, did you do to secure compliance with it?
- 62. Did you ever, directly or indirectly, say or intimate to any officer of the State police or of the National Guard, after they were called to Flint, that he or those under him should refrain from ejecting the sit-down strikers?
- 63. Did you ever give any order to either the State police or the National Guard, requiring them to request the leaders of the sit-down strikers to evacuate the plants, or any of them?
- 64. If you say that you did, to whom and when and where was such request or order given and what were its terms?
- 65. Were you in Michigan in May, June, July, or August of 1936?
- 66. Were you at that time High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands?
- 67. Did you for those months draw a salary as such Commissioner?
- 68. Were you not, during the months of June, July, and August of 1936 or during the major portion of those months, campaigning for the office of Governor of Michigan?
- 69. After your nomination and election as Governor of Michigan in November of 1936, did you go back to the Philippine Islands?
- 70. Did you not, from the 4th day of November 1936 until the 31st day of December of that year, while you were either in the United States or in Cuba, draw compensation as High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands?
- 71. Is it true that you left the Philippine Islands on the 13th day of May 1936 and did not thereafter return to the islands?
- 72. Is it not true that you drew compensation as Commissioner from the 13th day of May 1936 to the 31st day of December of that same year, except for the period between September 4 and November 4?
- 73. Did you, during that same period, draw money from the Federal Government for expense money as Commissioner?
- 74. Did you at that time have at your disposal as Commissioner a fund of $10,000, this in addition to the salary which you drew?
- 75. From May 13, 1936, to December 31 of the same year, what did you do to earn your compensation as Commissioner to the Philippine Islands while you were in Michigan, in the United States, or vacationing in Cuba?
- 76. Did you not, during the summer of 1936, while you were campaigning for Governor, make the statement in substance that you had given up a great international post, the best paid diplomatic post under the stars, to seek an office where the salary was less than a sixth as much?

77. Did you not make the statement during that campaign at Ironwood in August 1936, in substance and to the effect that you had given up your office as Commissioner to the Philippine Islands?

78. If you made such statement, was it true?

79. Did you not on July 9, 1936, announce to the press that you had resigned your post in the Philippine Islands to become a candidate for Governor of Michigan?

80. If you made such an announcement, was it true?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous special order of the House, the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Burdick] is recognized.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I suppose this speech will be about as welcome on the Republican side as a Sears, Roebuck catalog in a country store. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, although the Democrats are still in control of both Houses of Congress and the Democratic administration is responsible to the entire country for the action of Congress during this session, yet through the November elections the Republicans have assumed a minority responsibility actually greater than any it has had to discharge during the past 4 years, and a potential responsibility which, under proper guidance, may result in full responsibility 2 years hence.

I do not interpret the November elections as a swing back to reaction; but rather a protest against the mistakes of the New Deal. In our present circumstances, with a public debt of $38,000,000,000, all drawing interest at an average rate of 2.582 percent, and with 13,000,000 out of employment and further relief appropriations necessary to prevent starvation and suffering; with private business, as now operated, admitting that if all restrictions were withdrawn by Congress and private business were left free to operate uncontrolled, as it was in 1929, that not more than 3,000,000 of the 13,000,000 could be employed—we must conclude that the country is not turning to any reactionary view, where all new trials and programs must be abandoned and let the country sink or swim according to the caprice of the business interests of the Nation.

Ever since 1929, and in the farm belt ever since 1920, the problem of the depression has, in the main, been getting worse. Temporary gains have been registered, but only through the expenditure of Government funds and the soldiers' bonus. In my judgment, this country cannot and will not take the old-time reactionary course. Our future course must be a progressive one, and new remedies must not be discarded and tabooed. Many things in the New Deal have brought better conditions for the poor and the distressed, and at least it brought hope to the Nation at a time when the confidence in the Government was at its lowest ebb in the history of the Nation. If the New Deal has done nothing else, it has established hope in the minds of millions that it is yet possible for the President and Congress to pilot the ship of state through troubled waters into the calm and peace of equal opportunity.

In what has been done by the present administration monumental mistakes have been made, but it must be admitted by all that the President has been actuated by the highest motives and that his intent and desire to aid and assist the lower one-half of our population wallowing in distress has never faltered. I deem it only fair to say that he has given poor people more consideration than any President since Jackson and Lincoln.

Under this state of facts, the Republican Party can gain nothing but will lose much to criticize the President and the administration for at least making an honest attempt to solve the Nation's difficulties. Whatever has been good about the administration, let us admit it; and in the place of too much criticism, let us offer a program that will do more for the people in distress than anything that has, as yet, been offered by the President or the administration. Should it be necessary to adopt any features of the New Deal, let us do that and at the same time eliminate the objections that experience has proven and which in many cases were plain and obvious. Should it be necessary to take a course of action that is entirely new and in advance of the New Deal, let us do that as an objective, and in doing it avoid the mistakes which attended the New Deal.

The November vote clearly demands at the hands of the Republicans in this Congress a showing of hands on what we intend to do. We do not have to keep our program under cover and from the eye of the enemy, and the sooner the voters of the Nation understand what we intend to do the sooner we shall satisfy those who voted us in and the other millions who may wish to join us in 1940.

This, then, is the responsibility of the minority party now, and to fail to meet the test will be an admission that we have nothing to offer. By 1940 there will be no motive to direct any majority vote in our direction, and, worse than that, the country will still be financially bankrupt, as it is today, and very close to the point of hopeless confusion.

I have never advocated that we can right all wrongs by legislation in Congress; that an act of Congress standing alone will bring prosperity out of bankruptcy, but I have always maintained and do now that our present plight was caused by acts of Congress granting special privileges to the few while the many paid the bill. We can at least through acts of Congress revoke special privileges and open up opportunities for all equally. By acts of Congress we can put into actual practice what so many times has been advocated but never accomplished by both the Democrats and the Republicans, namely, "equal opportunities for all and special privileges to none."

At this time I am not speaking as an authorized representative of the Republican Party in Congress, but am expressing my own sentiments as a member of the party. It is my hope that the authorized spokesman of the party, the gentleman from Massachusetts, for whom I have great respect and admiration, will during this session insist upon a declaration from the Republican membership on a program. It is not at all necessary that all Republicans think as I do, but it is at least necessary to think. In my judgment, the Republican Party has been as dumb as the Democratic Party on this money question for 75 years, and as one member of the party I hope to see the Republicans make a stand on this question now, so that there can be no question about the matter before the people of this country.

The interest system is fast breaking the people in the United States and the Government itself. This system must be stopped, and Congress can lead the way at this session by passing, first, a House resolution which reasserts the control over the Nation's money and credit by the Congress, as provided by the Constitution. The Constitution reads, article I, section 8:

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin.

This provision of the Constitution has never been amended or repealed and it therefore still stands as the supreme law of the land. The fact remains, however, that Congress has unconstitutionally delegated that power first to the national banks—National Bank Act of 1863—and to the Federal Reserve Board—Federal Reserve Act of 1914—and these institutions have unconstitutionally exercised the power of the Government over our monetary system ever since. Through this unconstitutional power the interest system is maintained and perpetuated. Pass this resolution in the House and Senate and when signed by the President this private use of Government credit for private gain will cease.

Secondly, insert in every appropriation act that no bonds shall be issued to finance the appropriation, but insist that Treasury notes be issued instead of bonds, and by so doing we can stop the interest loot on Government bonds, which amounts to $1,500,000,000 annually. While these notes are circulating through the channels of trade no one will be obliged to pay interest on the note. Today money in our pocket, whether we save it or spend it, we must pay interest on it. Bury it in the ground to secure it for old age, and the interest goes right on. The reason is that it was issued in the first place on the basis of an interest-bearing debt, while it should have been issued as an obligation of the Government backed by the resources of the Nation. Money never should be issued on the basis of a debt, but on the basis of an asset, and if the assets of this Government—namely, natural resources and the labor of the people is not security enough for a Federal issue of Treasury notes, what, I ask, is good? Why is the Government's name on a bond good and the Government's name on a money bill not good? I have repeated this question on the floor of this House before and have challenged an answer, but none have come forward to dispute this elementary proposition. I will now again repeat that question and invite an answer.

After having secured control again over the money and credit of this Nation, the Congress should next see to it by law that the money in circulation actually circulates. Money in the banks is of no use to the people of the country, except that portion of it necessary for reserves. Examine a bank statement today and what do we see? Every bank of any size loaded with money and the loans and discounts on the average less than half of the deposits. In New York City in 1929 every dollar in circulation circulated 132 times during the year, now it is down to a circulation of 26 times, and probably less since the last report.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. May I ask the gentleman what are the resources of the Nation; that is, what is their measure? Is it not simply the power and authority and the courage of its representatives to tax or confiscate from the people, and have we not reached our limit to dare to do that?

Mr. BURDICK. No; I must disagree with the gentleman. I do not believe the resources of this great Nation depend in the least degree upon the representatives the people send here.

Mr. GIFFORD. How are we going to take those great resources away from the people to cancel that money the gentleman would like to print?

Mr. BURDICK. We do not want to take anything away by taxation. I want to relieve you of that tax by issuing this money without having to pay interest on it.

Mr. GIFFORD. There must be a process to reach those resources in order to pay or cancel. What are the resources, or how are they to be measured?

Mr. BURDICK. The resources of this Nation consist of its soil, water, and the labor of its people. Would the gentleman answer this question?

Mr. GIFFORD. I rose to ask one.

Mr. BURDICK. I answered the best I could.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman has not answered.

Mr. BURDICK. Let me ask a question: Why is the Government's name on a bond good and the Government's name on a piece of money no good?

Mr. GIFFORD. The reason is that no one knows the limitation of the public willingness to mop up a debt. The time will come, but we do not know and no one knows the limitation of the willingness of a person to lend a Government credit and at the same moment allow that Government to tax him for the interest and the collection of the debt. It is a peculiar proposition.

Mr. BURDICK. Then, does not the gentleman believe that the larger the debt the lower should be the rate of interest? Let us cut out interest entirely until we get even.

Mr. GIFFORD. No; there are some of us who are thankful that a bond will be issued having a due date and a promise to pay rather than an indefinite promise of cancelation.

Mr. BURDICK. In the end all you can do is trade that for another promise, is not that true?

Mr. GIFFORD. That is all we can do.

Mr. BURDICK. That is the difference.
Mr. VOORHIS of California Mr. Speaker will

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from California. Mr. VOORHIS of California. Can the gentleman tell me why it is that although the Constitution provides that money shall be coined and regulated by the Congress, when we set up Government credit agencies like the R. F. C., Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and the rest of them, that constitutional provision is turned right backward and the Government agency has to exchange bonds for bank deposits which are created by private banks before it can make secured loans—not spend money, but make secured loans? Why cannot the Government create that credit as well as a private institution?

Mr. BURDICK. My answer is that I believe the coupon clippers of the country have more influence in Congress than the people.

We are just about $1,600,000,000 short in circulation down at the grass roots, and nothing we have done so far has remedied the situation. While the soldiers at the bottom were spending their bonus there was a rise in business activity; when we spend a billion at the bottom in relief, business picks up. But just as soon as there is a let-up we start down, headed for another depression. If this Congress does not have the courage to remedy this situation for all time, I do not fear to predict a depression in this country that will make all others look like prosperous times. Our job now, since we are able to read the signs from what has taken place around us, is to insist upon the circulation of money at the bottom of society. We have tried to feed the money back to the people through the banks, railroads, insurance companies, and large business enterprises, but that has not worked. We must turn the money loose at the bottom and not at the top. We have not tried that because the President and the Democratic administration has opposed it, and they have been in control.

How shall we circulate each month $1,600,000,000,000 at the bottom of our social group? This is what I will now answer. We will appoint 8,000,000 agents of the Government, whose only job each month will be to spend $1,600,000,000 right down where they are and where most everyone else is who is in distress. This includes all businessmen who service this part of our population. This sounds like a political machine, but it is not. We do not care what church these agents attend or whether they attend church at all. We do not care whether they are Jews or gentiles, whether they are white or black. There are only three qualifications: First, are they citizens of this country? Second, are they mentally normal and not criminals? Third, are they 60 years of age or older; are they willing to take the job?

In this country there are about 8,000,000 citizens who can and will qualify, hence we will make these 8,000,000 people agents of the Government, whose only duty is to spend $200 as a maximum each month. That will put into actual and forced circulation just exactly the amount we need to put in order the private business of this Nation which has been collapsed since 1929.

This plan is known as the Townsend recovery program, and it is the only plan that has been advanced in the Congress of the United States so far that has in it all of the potential requisites of national recovery. Many have been and still are confused about this program. Many think of it as a pension system for the aged, and that $200 per month for them is not necessary. They say they can live on less. That is true, many aged people are living on $5; but, first, it is not a decent standard of living; and, second, the expenditure of that money does not help the whole country enough. When these citizens spend $200 per month everyone is helpednot the aged alone, not business alone, but those of far more importance to the country than either—the youth of the United States. Our young people are still pouring out of higher institutions of learning at the rate of 5,000,000 per year, and when they are educated they rarely find employment. They are ranging the country looking for a job because business generally in this country is down, and some sections of it out altogether. When this money is spent and business begins to revive, opportunities will open up for the young people, and they can fit into the social structure with opportunities which they richly deserve.

Just about the time we get all to agree that this is the way out of our difficulties someone—not necessarily the gentleman from Pennsylvania—asks right out in meeting this startling question: "Where are you going to get the money?" [Laughter.] To answer it is no more difficult than to ask it, and here is the answer. Our fair average annual business turn-over in dollars and cents is $900,000,000,000. We propose to tax that 2 percent, and the result will be $18,000,-000,000. We will draw on this fund every month for the $1,600,000,000, and if business does not increase at all because of this "grass root" spending, we still have money enough to last us 11 months and 1 week. If business increases, as it must, from this buying power, we shall have more than enough from this 2-percent tax to go through the first year. It is a natural conclusion that business will increase from production to consumption, and if it does this 2-percent tax can be lowered and in 2 years' operation it appears more than likely that this 2 percent can be reduced to 1 percent.

On this subject of the tax I am more than anxious to have the Ways and Means Committee, in whom I have much confidence, take up the matter in full and give a report to this House on the feasibility or nonfeasibility of this tax. When that committee undertakes a hearing on the bill we can all have a chance to be heard there and in this House if the bill is favorably reported. We are capable of having a national income of $150,000,-000,000 and could consume it all if there was money enough circulating among the producers and consumers. We never shall have to worry about overproduction—at least not until the last legitimate and necessary want of all our 130,000,000 people is satisfied. Today those who produce cannot buy back the necessities of life which they have produced. The Department of Agriculture demands a cut in the cotton acreage, but will that help when today the colored man of the South who produces cotton cannot buy a cotton shirt to cover his back? The same Department says we produce too much wheat and demands a cut in acreage, when the millions on grant relief are kept alive on a starvation basis.

Our ordinary national income should be at least $100.000 --000,000. To make it so there must be at least $33,000,000,000 actually circulating in this country. Over a period of 50 years, with slight variations, the national income has been three times the amount of circulation. Hence, we can state the proposition that national income is usually three times greater than the amount of money in circulation, including demand deposits in banks.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. CRAWFORD. When the gentleman says "money in circulation," multiplied by the three to which he refers, does the gentleman mean to take into consideration demand deposits plus currency in circulation in arriving at the amount of money to which he refers?

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman is correct.

Today our circulation is as follows:

Total circulation of all currency in United $6, 622, 249, 018.00 States Federal Reserve notes outside Treasury, Novem-

DCI 1000.
Federal Reserve notes	4, 635, 775, 680.00
Federal Reserve bank notes	28, 436, 735. 00
National bank notes Demand deposits, Oct. 31, 1937:	205, 365, 769. 50
Individual	23, 698, 641, 000.00
U. S. Government	672, 885, 000.00
State and municipal	3, 233, 847, 000, 00

The conclusion to be drawn from this state of facts is that, first of all, the potential circulation should be increased several billion dollars, but even that would not help if the circulation froze in banks. Each and every month, if we desire a normal national income, $2,750,000,000 should circulate among the people, and this circulation should reach, or, better yet, start at the bottom of the social heap.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. CRAWFORD. Referring to the President's speech, then, if we take our demand deposits of, roughly, $23,000,-000,000, which is about an all-time high, plus the $7,000,000,-000 of currency in circulation, or a total of $30,000,000,000, and multiply that sum by the three to which the gentleman refers, which was our performance for years and years, that alone would put us on a $90,000,000,000 national-income basis instead of the $80,000,000,000 to which the President referred the other day.

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman is correct; but, in saying the gentleman is correct, I assume this money has been circulating all the time, and I will show you now it has not been circulating all the time.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is the point I want the gentleman to bring out.

Mr. BURDICK. With our present amount of circulation in existence and at the rate money is circulating, not over $1,150,000,000 ever reaches the bottom of our entire social

Mr. SOUTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SOUTH. Have not the several billions of dollars that have been paid to the common laborers through the Works Progress Administration been expended in an attempt to start the money from the bottom?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes; and every time that money has gone out in any particular locality that has been particularly afflicted, such as the drought area or the flood area, it has been registered by increased business activity almost immediately.

Mr. SOUTH. Is it not a fact that the various subsidies and bounties that have been paid to the farmers have been put in from the bottom?

Mr. BURDICK. That is right; it has helped, but not sufficient and continuous enough to revive all business.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield on that point?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In order to keep the record clear, I understand your contention is that as those releases are made by the Government, they should be made in the form of Treasury notes and not based on bank credit or currency issued on the basis of debts.

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman from Michigan is entirely correct. That is my position exactly. It is bad enough to have to furnish relief, but it is still worse to pay interest on the money we have to use with which to satisfy relief, and it depends upon this Congress whether we are going to pay that interest or not. You can shut it off within the next 30 days if you have the will to do so.

As I said before we are $1,600,000,000 short in the circulation of the currency at the bottom of the heap every month and I propose a plan which will put into circulation $1,600,-000,000 every month.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Montana. Mr. O'CONNOR. Personally, I have a lot of faith in my distinguished colleague from North Dakota, and is it not a fact that the formula the gentleman has just given about getting money into circulation is what is known as the Town-

Mr. BURDICK. I was just coming to that. The gentle-man is correct. That is exactly what it is. It is not anything else but the Townsend recovery program.

There are a great many people who believed that the Townsend program was a scheme to furnish pensions for old people and a lot of them say you can live on less than $200 a month. I agree with that. They are living on $5 now. However, the purpose of the Townsend recovery program is not to furnish pensions. It is for the purpose of permitting this Nation to recover by the expenditure of money at the bottom of the social heap every month and keeping it up, and I will venture this prediction to this Congress. If you will adopt this program and appropriate $1,600,000,000 now to make the first payment the first month, you would not need to appropriate any more money in this Congress of the United States for relief. Just give the plan one start and the thing will take care of itself.

Before I was interrupted I was about to say where we are going to get the money. There is about $900,000,000,000,000 of turn-over in this country every year. It was not quite that much this year; there has been a turn-over of $1,200,000,000,000,000 some years. If we tax that 2 percent, we will accumulate a fund of $18,000,000,000 from that tax, and from that fund of $18,000,000,000 you can take out $1,600,000,000 every month and you can run for 11 months and some 20 days on that fund alone, provided the business of the country does not increase; but anyone who sits here knows that as soon as the people down where we live, out in the country, start to spend, the people who are doing business will start doing business.

A lot of people have said, "Will it not make everything cost too much?" My opinion is it will not increase the cost of living at all, because, on the average, in the United States today the merchants are doing just 31 percent of the amount of business they used to do and less than 31 percent of the business they are capable of doing, and the only reason they do not do the business is because the people do not have money. The money is at the top, if there is any.

You can look through all of the bank statements you find every day in this country and you will discover the banks are full of money, but it is not circulating among the people. It is frozen. So, while we have nearly $30,000,000,000 in circulation, it is not really circulating. This program is to make it circulate at the bottom. Let me say, too, that I have been kidded a lot because I have advocated this Townsend recovery program. Some of you southern gentlemen who are very good friends of mine have said, "You seem to be sound on every other subject except that one, and we are surprised that you went off on an angle of 45 degrees." I am not saying who it is, but the gentleman is not sitting very far from me, but I say to you that we cannot stop progress unless we destroy the civilization that made that progress possible. You cannot stop improvements, and as we are sitting here this afternoon man after man is losing his job in this country because of more perfect machinery, and that process is going on every year. I predicted on the floor of this House 2 years ago that the number of unemployed in this country is not going to decrease, but it will increase.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Beam). The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin]? There seems to be no objection there. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky that the time of the gentleman from North Dakota be extended for 10 minutes?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I want to leave this one thought with the Members. I have no desire to take up much of the time of this Congress, but as I see the situation in America today-and I want ever Member of this Congress to believe that I am sincere in what I say I see-there is a contest on in the country as to whether private business is going to be maintained and function in the interest of private business or whether that private business must give way to Government control. A great many of you believe in private industry, and I am one of them. I would like to see private business handle all of the business of this country. I do not want to see any State regimentation or any national regimentation, but when the representatives of big business have appeared before the committees of this Congress and have answered a direct question: "If you had it your way how many of these 14,000,000 people could you employ?" They have always said that of the 14,000,000 they cannot employ over 3,000,000. Then I ask this question: What are you going to do with the other millions that you cannot employ? They do not know. If you believe in maintaining individual liberty in this country, the right of every man to think for himself, to do for himself, it seems to me that we had better get busy and make it possible for business to maintain itself and employ the millions that are now out of a job.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This has bothered me a good deal directly on that point. When someone goes before a committee representing business, almost invariably he speaks for the manufacturing industries of the country. I think the gentleman is well enough informed on manufacturing to know that for each man you put in a factory you have to employ another man to bring goods to and another to carry goods away from. In other words, 3,000,000 men put to work in our factories will automatically bring into the pay rolls of industry in this country an additional 6,000,000 men in service, as well as in raw materials supplying the activities of our people, and I wish someone would bring that out more before these committees. It is something that has been overlooked, because the manufacturer always speaks in terms of men that he will employ on the pay roll himself, and that is where the three million figure comes from.

Mr. BURDICK. I think the gentleman's views are sound on that question, as are his views on other subjects. However, unless there is buying power put there to help private business increase it will not be able to employ these millions of unemployed. The thing we want down there is buying power. You can take your choice: You can come in behind men who will build up private business in this country that is big enough to take care of all of the people to bring back prosperity by putting buying power down there or you can sit there and laugh about this program until the time will come when there will be so many millions out of jobs that the Government will be compelled to take over the business, public and private, in this country.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. If we had sufficient buying power to give to every person in this country what he actually needs, would there be a surplus of foodstuffs, cotton or wool or anything else?

Mr. BURDICK. There would not be a surplus of anything in the country. We would be short, because we are capable of consuming an annual wealth of $150,000,000,000, and this year it is about $63,000,000,000. I notice the President wants to get it up to $80,000,000,000, but we might as well put it up where it belongs; and if you will put that buying power down there you would not have to do anything else. Since I have been in this Congress we have appropriated about $30,000,000,000, but we have turned most of it into the top, and we are as bad off as ever we were.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. With all the sincerity that the gentleman from North Dakota has expressed, I want buying power; but the address of the gentleman from North Dakota seems to be that a billion and a half or more shall be given away to a certain class of people, to be made nonproducing people, in order to bring this about. I am sure he will forgive me if I say I am one of those who think that would probably be financial suicide.

Mr. BURDICK. I think there are a great many people in this country who believe it is financial suicide, but as long as they keep holding that belief and do not give on it, the time will come when it will be governmental suicide.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The gentleman has pointed out the importance of putting the purchasing power into circulation at the bottom of our economic scale, and I am thoroughly in agreement with him; but does not the gentleman agree that in addition to that we must have much more adequate provision than we now have in order to prevent stagnation of that buying power in idle bank deposits, after it has once been put into circulation, and that at present we do not have adequate machinery for bringing that about, which is the main reason why, when these bank deposits become stagnant, the only thing we can fall back upon is the increase of Government debt, in order for the Government, in effect, to buy back into active circulation, some of these deposits? Are we not trying to push a string, in other words, to get that credit out, when instead of that we must have a monetary authority with positive power to bring about that expansion and to avoid the necessity of that sort of increase of debt which is had in an attempt to get expansion?

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman from California is correct

Now, I only have about 2 minutes more.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. Well, yes. I am the most yielding fellow you ever saw. [Laughter.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman from North Dakota has said that the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis] is correct in his statement. I think the statement made by the gentleman from California has been answered by most of the leading economists of the Nation in the hearings on the bill to establish a Federal monetary authority, and if the gentleman from California and the gentleman from North Dakota will get the hearings which were published in 1933 and read them, I doubt whether the gentleman from North Dakota will say that the gentleman from California is correct in his assertions.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I would like to say that I have read those hearings.

Mr. BURDICK. Now, I did not want to open this up for any private fight between other parties. I want to be in on it. [Laughter.]

We cannot stop progress unless we destroy the civilization that has made it possible. We cannot prevent inventions and use of labor-saving devices. Each year will see, as each year in the last decade has seen, the displacement of thousands of workers who, for generations, have depended upon that source for a livelihood. What will these ever-increasing thousands do? To what can they turn to find employment? Will not most of them be too old to find employment in private industry? Will private industry today employ men over the age of 50 when there are millions of young men standing in line for any job? Without more buying power down in every local community, will private enterprises increase or expand what they now have? Candidly, I cannot see any place in our economic system where middle-aged persons or those past middle age can obtain employment in any private industry.

I will answer all of these questions by saying: First, let us give private industry and individual enterprise another chance to solve the question. Let us give incentive to build more private business enterprises. We can do that by passing the Townsend Recovery Act and employing 8,000,000 aged persons in the one and only job of distributing monthly in the lowest unit of our social structure money enough to build a buying power sufficient to enable private enterprises to operate and increase. Secondly, if that fails, then the Government of the United States must enter the business field and offer employment to those who want to work and cannot find employment. If those who maintain that private business is superior to Government business do not cooperate in circulating buying power at the very bottom of our social structure, then the natural course of events will destroy all private business, and a government in this country will dictate all business, public and private.

I do not believe, however, that this view is shared by many of the leaders in this country who maintain that private business is better than Government business. Up to date they have not seen the handwriting on the wall. They refuse to see, and there is no one so blind as one who will not see. They are so engrossed in their own personal interests that the public welfare of 130,000,000 people is forgotten. There is much to do to put the private machine of business in order. It can be done, and if we are to secure freedom of individual action for our children in the generations just ahead of us, this must be done. Interest, which today consumes 31 percent of every dollar spent, must be outlawed. Corporations which, under special laws, have set up a bureaucracy which defies the Government that gave them life must be checked. Through stock control, the earnings of millions who have invested their funds are dependent absolutely upon the will or caprice of controlling officials. Unreasonable and unconscionable salaries eat up the substance of these investments, and the poor grow poorer and the rich richer. These corporations must be controlled or abolished if private enterprise is to be maintained. [Applause.] In the history of the human race the greed and avarice of a few individuals has always destroyed every government that has failed. [Applause.]

In maintaining the principle that within the law an individual can do as he pleases and be protected under the Constitution we must give way to a new interpretation that the rights of an individual end where the public interest begins. For example, I have the right, under the Constitution, to own all the land I can pay for and maintain. But suppose I obtained possession of so much land that millions were becoming destitute because they could not use the land in the vicinity where I possessed unnecessary tracts merely because. under the Constitution, I had a right to obtain all the land I desired. We will come to that interpretation, if, indeed, we have not already arrived there, that no one has the right to own more land than is necessary for his own use and to the exclusion of thousands who cannot live without it. In such a case this land for which I have no use except to gratify my personal ambition to "own the whole country" must be taken away from me as an individual and distributed among those who must have it to live. The method of taking it will vary. If the Government continues to have the support of the people and merits support, the process will be orderly, legal, and equitable for all concerned. But if that Government fails to act in the interest of those who suffer, then the land will be taken, as it always has been taken, by people who revolt and go mad under long-continued abuses. Then the land will be taken by force. History is the best barometer to which we can turn. What has been done once can be again. By adopting the slogan that the rights of an individual end where the public interest begins we can save and maintain an orderly, constitutional, and just government. [Applause.]

The situation in this country is more desperate than many suppose. We have maintained a democracy here for over 150 years that has been and is the hope of millions who do not enjoy individual liberty. We have had so much liberty in this country that we have ceased to realize it. We have become too indifferent toward it to protect it. The fact remains that we have the best government which the wisdom of man has yet contrived, and I for one do not propose to sit here as a Member of this great Congress and permit this Government to be destroyed if there is anything I can do to prevent it. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has again expired.

The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin] is recognized for 15 minutes.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask the gentleman from Colorado to yield me 4 minutes' time before he speaks. Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I could not yield it out of my time.

Mr. DALY. No; not out of your time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN] yield for the gentleman from Pennsylvania to submit his request to proceed for 4 minutes ahead of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. It is all right with me if it is with the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that he be allowed to proceed for 4 minutes at this time?

There was no objection.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, I regret that my limited time will not permit me to go more extensively into a reply to the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman].

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] used Mr. Murphy, and so stated on the floor of the House, as a means of getting at the Chief Executive of the Nation. It is pitiful that men, in their spleen and their overpartisan zeal, attack the Chief Executive of the Nation and do not hesitate to cast aspersions upon the personal character and attainments of men who have achieved prominent places throughout the country.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] said that his two objections to Mr. Murphy—and he admitted it was a subterfuge to attack Mr. Roosevelt—were: First, he was a small-town lawyer. If I remember correctly, Abraham Lincoln was a small-town lawyer and had not nearly the experience Mr. Murphy and many men who are Members of the House have had in the practice of the law, yet, does anybody need speak of the achievements of Lincoln?

Furthermore, within the last 15 years a Republican Executive appointed as Attorney General of the Nation an obscure, small-town lawyer, and he was an eminent, brilliant man. The records of the Attorney General's office will shine with the achievement of that man in the office, small-town lawyer that he was.

The other objection seems to be that Mr. Murphy drew pay as Governor of the Philippine Islands for a period of some months when he was campaigning to become Governor of his home State. Has the gentleman from Michigan IMr. Hoffman forgotten the fact that in the State of Pennsylvania the Republican candidate for Governor this year was a member of the appellate court; that from the 15th day of last April up to the present day has drawn his salary, comparable to the salary drawn by Mr. Murphy, but has never served one day in that court, never performed one act of duty during this period? At the present time, even when he is elected Governor, he is drawing his salary as a member of the appellate court of the State of Pennsylvania. So it seems to me that we might look at the mote in our own eye.

The great danger that I see—and there can be no partisan politics in this statement—is the encouragement to communism, fascism, and all the other "isms" in this country that seek to destroy our form of government, "isms" that are encouraged, fostered, abetted, and aided by attacks on the floor of the House on the Chief Executive of the Nation. To my mind nothing encourages communism and these other "isms" more. I should be glad to go much further into this matter, but my 4 minutes' time is about up.

The gentleman stated that they—I think he used the plural in referring to himself—were glad to get rid of Murphy in Michigan. Well, the President wants him. The people of the country want him and the Senate of the United States wants him. By reason of the ability, the integrity, and the courage of Frank Murphy, I am confident that the record he will establish in the office of Attorney General of the United States will be such as to deserve and receive the approbation and acclaim of the entire Nation, including Michigan, with the possible exception of the small-town lawyer from Allegan.

The gentleman from Michigan produced a noose here. This was very significant to me.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DALY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DALY. It reminded me of the disciple of the Prince of Peace years ago who, after betraying his Chief, the Founder of Christianity, the greatest democracy in the world, took a noose and went out into the garden. I wondered when the gentleman from Michigan took the noose and left the floor of this House if it might not be better if he applied it in the same way. [Laughter and applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin] is recognized for 15 minutes.

SUGAR

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I am always glad to yield, because I never feel that anything I am going to say will change the course of destiny. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I listened attentively yesterday, as I always do, to the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr.

CRAWFORD] on the sugar question.

He has had much personal experience in the domestic sugar industry, is a deep student, and his discussion is always replete with facts. It must be admitted that he made a strong showing against further tariff concessions to Cuba, and for an enlargement of the domestic sugar program. I am with him on that and have lodged my protest with the State Department against the proposed reduction. We have done enough for Cuba.

And yet, as he talked, the obverse side of the picture—and it has an obverse side—began forming in my mind. I regret that I must hastily and from memory sketch some bits of this picture.

One thing I like about the speeches of the gentleman from Michigan, and in which he differs from so many of his colleagues that occupy so much of the time on that side of the House, is that they are fairly free from bitter partisanship. There must, however, be some partisanship involved in nearly every subject we consider. I favor as little of it as possible. But the inescapable inference, and frequently stronger, of all the speeches on sugar coming from the minority side of the House, is that the administration has done nothing for sugar; has, in effect, sold it down the river, but that they if given the opportunity will do a lot for it. As Al Smith says, "Let's take a look at the record." This sugar controversy is more than 40 years old, and I will refer to it more at length in a few minutes.

On March 4, 1933, the Republican Party had been in power for 12 continuous years—in the White House, in the Senate, in the House of Representatives. If the Republican Party wanted to do anything for sugar, or could do anything for sugar, it certainly had plenty of time and all the power necessary to do it.

But on March 4, 1933, the sugar companies were broke, their stocks were down 80 to 90 percent, and going begging and the stockholders were holding the sack, going without dividends; the beet growers were broke and were considering the abandonment of beet growing, and the beet workers were on relief. Domestic sugar was in the ditch.

What the Republican Party did for sugar reminds me of an incident that I heard on the floor of the United States Senate when I was first in Congress, when that body was distinguished by the presence of John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi. That was back in the days when the Civil War was still an issue, and occasionally a northern Senator would air his views about the "wayward" South and what the North had done for the South. On this day a northern Senator was holding forth on the old theme, when John Sharp Williams rose to his feet and made an interjection about as follows. He said. "All this continual talk here in the Senate about what the North has done for the South reminds me of an incident at a colored revival down in my home town in Mississippi. They finally got everybody up to the mourners' bench except a poor old fellow who hung back in the corner. He was half blind and all crippled up and nearly a total loss. Night after night he was urged to go forward and tell the people what the Lord had done for him. At last the old man gave in and hobbled down the aisle and turned around and said, 'Well, brothers and sisters, I can tell you what the Lord has done for me; the Lord has done ruint me!"

Now, let me take a long bird's-eye view of the domestic sugar industry—and I am interested in that industry. It is the farmers' cash crop in the Arkansas Valley in Colorado, in which I have lived for 48 years. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford] has worked in the industry in that valley. More than 40 years ago McKinley put a bonus of 1 cent a pound on sugar to stimulate the industry. Since then first one plan then another has been tried, including tariffs, domestic and off-shore quotas, the processing tax, and the present consumption tax. But I would say from memory that at no time has domestic production ever exceeded 30 percent of domestic consumption. The gentleman from Michigan puts the domestic percentage now at 26. As I recall it, only once in its history has domestic beet-sugar production reached or exceeded the 1,584,000-ton quota now in the law and which is supposed to be restricting production. When McKinley put the bonus on domestic sugar there was no Philippine problem, no Philippine sugar coming into this country. Now, under the stimulus of a 2-cent general tariff, but free to the Philippines, they have developed up to a million tons. It is the same story with Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and, in a large measure, Cuba. All these heavy off-shore sugar producers are Republican babies. Under Republican policies all these island competitors-the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and Cubahave been brought into the family and built up to what they are today. Cleveland refused the tender of the Hawaiian Islands, but McKinley accepted them. He not only accepted the Philippine Islands but gave Spain $20,000,000 for a quitclaim deed to them. And then the New York sugar interests began exploiting them for sugar, just as they are exploiting Cuba and Hawaii and Puerto Rico. I agree with the gentleman from Michigan that the Cuban sugar benefits are not going to the growers but to the economic royalists in New York, so I do not see why his party is kicking about that. [Laughter.]

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield with trepidation to the authority from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it not correct that the authorization for Philippine sugar coming into this country was expanded during the Wilson administration at about the time we entered the World War by a removal of duty on Philippine sugar? Is it not also true that the removal of the duty on sugar coming into this country from the Philippines coupled with our desire for sugar during the Wilson administration encouraged the adoption in the Philippine Islands of the centrifugal process in place of the old kettle process, and that that, in fact, brought about the stimulation of the Philippine sugar production?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I will admit that against this side of the House to the extent that the gentleman's statement is correct. I know it keeps growing.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Briefly.

Mr. CULKIN. Passing the Republicans' sins of omission and commission and the Democrats' sins of omission and commission, does not the gentleman believe that the production of beet sugar offers an outlet for American agriculture?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. To a certain extent, yes; but I have already pointed out that notwithstanding all the varying policies applied to sugar over a period of 40 years, domestic production has not yet exceeded 30 percent of domestic consumption.

Mr. CULKIN. Do not France and Germany subsist entirely, so far as sugar is concerned, on beet sugar alone?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I think that is true.

Mr. CULKIN. Why could not we do that and give the farmers that much of an outlet?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. That is a long argument. What I am pointing out is that over a period of 40 years, under all the policies tried, the industry has failed to develop to the point the gentleman suggests.

The point is, that no matter what the party in power or what the sugar policy, the industry has failed to develop up to its opportunities, and has never been any better off under Republican than under Democratic rule. But it is in much better shape today than it was 6 years ago. The processors are making money and their stocks have gone back to about par, and if they are not back at par, they are as nearly back as they ought to have been in the first place. The farmers get around $6.50 for their beets from the factories and the tax; the beet workers get $22 to $23 per acre, as against $12 and $13 per acre 6 years ago; hired child labor has been taken out of the beet fields.

I have cited these facts as to the percentage of domestic production to domestic consumption, and the maximum of domestic production, as compared with the domestic quota, not for the purpose of minimizing the great importance of the domestic sugar industry but as an answer to the continual criticism that the sugar policy of the administration has been choking and restricting the industry and preventing its natural and proper expansion. The fact of the matter is that sugar for the first time has been given a fixed and definite status under this administration, a secure, recognized place in the national economy, and the quota it now enjoys is preferential and exclusive of all offshore quotas.

The industry ought to be preserved as an essential item in the national economy. We have seen what happened in 1920, as stated by the gentleman from Michigan yesterday, when due to the exhaustion of the domestic sugar supply, sugar went up to 35 cents a pound, seven times what it is now. If the American industry were wiped out, it would go up again and the American consumer would pay many times the small 50-cents-a-hundred tax he is paying now. I think we ought to go completely back to the Jones-Costigan Act and to the Triple A with its processing taxes, the simplest and most workable plan to stabilize agriculture that has yet been devised. It was nothing short of a tragedy to American agriculture when the Supreme Court by a vote of 6 to 3 threw the Triple A out the window. The dissenting opinion of Justice Stone in that case is a masterpiece of judicial reasoning. It is unanswerable. All they needed on the Stone opinion was two more votes. I believe that if it were resubmitted we would Perhaps it was not without cause that Governor Landon was reserved to give the final reassurance to Latin America that the policy of this administration would not be changed by the next one. The good-neighbor policy has not been in effect very long, and Latin America has not yet forgotten dollar diplomacy and the marines. In my opinion, Governor Landon's closing speech at Lima was the greatest effort of his life and raised him, or ought to raise him, to a place in the estimation of the American people greater than he has heretofore enjoyed—far greater than anything he did as a candidate for the Presidency.

I want to turn a moment to another phase of this question which has given me considerable thought. I believe the continuous and undiscriminating denunciation of this sugar legislation and of the trade treaties negotiated under this administration is doing more than all other causes to engender ill-feeling against the United States in Canada and throughout Latin America. Even the gentleman from Michigan repeatedly referred to the Cuban leader as "that little Cuban dictator." This attitude toward the administration's efforts to build up an all-American trade policy is spreading the fire faster than the good-neighbor policy can put it out.

The danger to America is not German, Italian, or Japanese battleships or airplanes. It is their program of infiltration of Latin America, much of it feeble democracies, some of them perhaps democracies in name only, fertile soil for totalitarian or authoritarian ideas of government.

A Colorado stock growers' convention met at Denver and bitterly denounced the Argentine trade treaty. One item was the importation of 50,000,000 pounds of canned beef in 6 months. That sounded formidable until you used a bit of mental arithmetic on it, which reduced it to 4 ounces per capita of our population—4 ounces in 6 months. Another item was the importation of 375,000 head of cattle from Canada, weighing over 700 pounds, in 1 year. That sounded equally bad until you broke it down into a domestic consumption of 20,000,000 head, or less than 2 percent. Yet the stock growers are inflamed with the idea that 4 ounces of canned beef and 2 percent of cattle on the hoof are destroying the livestock industry in the United States. The dairy industry is being destroyed. Destruction is being dinned into the farmer's ears from 7 a.m. till midnight.

Nothing is said about the fact that nearly every automobile you see on the highways of Canada is built by General Motors, or Ford, or Chrysler. Nothing is said about a trade balance of a billion dollars in our favor the last year.

To my mind, these efforts to inflame the people of the United States and Canada against each other is regrettable. I have driven through Canada a lot. It is a mystery to my mind how the 10,000,000 people scattered through that great area, and living and producing under such comparable conditions to ours that you cannot tell which side of the line you are on, can break down the agricultural system of 130,000,000 people. It would be well for us, in my judgment, if we could cut out a lot of this unfounded and partisan ballyhoo and just mix a little sense into our calculations. I doubt if nine-tenths of the stuff unloosed here on the floor of the House makes any contribution whatever to the solution of the great questions involved. If we want America for Americans, we had better stop driving them to Europe and Asia. [Applause.]

STATEMENT WITH RESPECT TO VOTE

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 30 seconds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, on the last day of the last Congress I was present and voted on roll call 123, which was to override the veto of the President on H. R. 10530, to reduce the interest on farm loans. I desire the Record of today to show that fact.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Magnuson asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the Record.

Mr. PEARSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a communication received from the American Federation of Farm Bureaus.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein copy of letter addressed by me to Col. Francis Harrington, Administrator of the Works Progress Administration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. RUTHERFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein an editorial from the Daily Review.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. Ludlow asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Record.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I was a little late today coming on the floor of the House, but as I entered the Chamber I heard the name of our former illustrious Governor from Michigan mentioned and naturally became interested. At that time I heard reechoing through the Halls of this Congress the blasphemous, scurrilous, and uncalled-for campaign of the Republican Party in Michigan.

I want to lay before this House one question; and if the gentleman from Michigan will refrain for a minute from interfering, I would like to ask the Members of this House whether or not it was fair, honest, and just for the gentleman from Michigan, a Member of this House, to enter into the campaign in my congressional district and infer that I did not believe in a Divine Being, that I did not believe in religion, that I did not believe in the necessity of churches, that I did not believe in God and did not follow His guidance.

Mr. Speaker, I testify before this House that I have always believed in God. I have always believed in a Supreme Being. I have always believed in the necessity of churches. My good wife and family are living examples of my Christian faith. I have been raised by religious parents.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] attacked the record of the former Governor of Michigan, the Honorable Frank Murphy, with half truths and untruths. The real story behind the labor troubles in the State of Michigan and especially in Detroit and Flint has never been told. The public has never really been informed of the fine, honest, and able leadership of the former Governor during those labor troubles. Many statements have been carried in the newspapers. Many untrue statements have been made, such as the statements of the gentleman from Michigan this afternoon.

The Honorable Frank Murphy has been appointed to high and honorable office as a member of the President's Cabinet, to the office of Attorney General of the United States. His name has been submitted to the United States Senate for confirmation.

The gentleman from Michigan refrained from making any statements or any attacks on the former Governor's record until the subcommittee yesterday gave the Honorable Frank Murphy a clean bill of health without any hearings,

As a citizen of Michigan I am proud of the fact that the Honorable Frank Murphy, an illustrious citizen of my State, has been accorded that high honor. The people of the State of Michigan are grateful for his appointment. The people of the State of Michigan are grateful that the subcommittee of the Senate saw fit to offer him their unanimous endorsement without any hearings before that committee or questioning his record. I compliment the subcommittee on their action, but I think it was a mistake not to have hearings because of the fact that it gives unscrupulous politicians the opportunity to attack the record of the former Governor on the floor of the House and the Senate without offering him an opportunity to place the real truth in the record. The truth concerning the actions of the former Governor is the best answer to these scurrilous attacks. If the Senate committee would request him to appear before that committee and place into the record officially his record, his actions, and his reasons for handling the labor situation as he did they will be doing not only the Honorable Frank Murphy, not only the people of the State of Michigan, but the people of the United States, a real service. It would stop once and for all this unjustified and scurrilous attack on a clean, honest, and efficient record and administration. I have not discussed this matter with the Honorable Frank Murphy, and I know that it would please him to appear before any committee of the Senate and end these untruths and scurrilous attacks once and for all.

As I said, if this is not done it gives an opening for attacks on the floor of the House and the Senate on the man and his record without the opportunity to present his side of the case.

The Senate committee may have thought, and I believe they did, that they were doing justice to former Governor Murphy; but let us see what actually is happening and I believe will happen. If the appointment of the Honorable Frank Murphy as Attorney General is approved by the committee without any question and submitted to the floor of the Senate, attacks will be made such as were made on the floor of this House this afternoon. This will leave him in a position so as to be unable to answer these untruths and scurrilous attacks because he is not a Member of either body.

I say that the man who made those statements is the man who made the scurrilous attack on the former Governor of the State of Michigan here this afternoon, the very tactics that were used in the campaign that was carried on in the State of Michigan, leading the people to believe that just because a man or woman might be carrying the label of a Democrat he was tainted with communism.

Mr. Speaker, my record in this House and my record during the campaign, when I refused the official endorsement of the Non-Partisan Labor League until such time as they would rid themselves of Communists and Fascists, stands as an open book. In a speech in my district this fall I made the following statement. I quote:

Sometime ago I accepted an invitation to speak before the Timber Workers' Conference at Ishpeming, August 27. I have always been interested in the labor movement and have voted consistently for liberal labor legislation. My record in Congress along those lines I believe the laborer and his family are entitled to a more abundant life. As long as I am a Member of Congress I shall work and vote for the betterment of all the people.

I have spoken before the Non-Partisan Labor League and know that the rank and file of the league are neither Fascists nor Communists. Nor do they have any connection with either party, but are real, true, loyal American citizens, interested in good, clean, union organization. It is for this reason that I wish to make clear my reason for not appearing before the Timber Workers' Conference yesterday.

On Wednesday, August 24, an official of the Timber Workers'
Union who is also an officer of the Non-Partisan Labor League appeared at my office in the city of Ironwood and informed me of the fact that the Non-Partisan Labor League had endorsed my candidacy for reelection. At that time he discussed plans for an Upper Peninsula conference. Participating in the discussion of the plans was a young man who was a stranger to me, but whom I recognized was a young man who was a stranger to me, but whom I recognized later as having seen before. After this young man took an active part in the formulation of the plan for the conference I questioned him as to his identity, and he then freely admitted that he was an officer—in fact, a national officer—of the Communist Party. He further informed me that he was taking part in the plans and activities concerning the Non-Partisan Labor League, but that, because of his affiliations with the Communist Party, he had to keep in the background.

Leould then plainly see that the Communists were again boring.

I could then plainly see that the Communists were again boring I could then plainly see that the Communists were again boring from within for the purpose, in my opinion, of destroying this worthy and commendable labor movement, which, in my opinion, would bring about, because of the communistic activity, violence and disorder. I have condemned the vigilante activities in no uncertain terms and feel that those participating in vigilante activities should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. I believe in law and order and feel that the laboring man will not cause any disturbance other then protecting his own rights unless interfered disturbance other than protecting his own rights unless interfered with by the Communists who want nothing but open revolution.

will have nothing to do with any organization that will tolerate

I will have nothing to do with any organization that will tolerate either communism or fascism.

I have, therefore, informed the officials of the Non-Partisan Labor League that until they purge themselves of the admitted known officials of the Communist Party, I do not care for the official endorsement. I welcome the support and endorsement of the individual members of the C. I. O., Workers' Alliance, American Federation of Labor, and all others who are real Americans, and urge them in the page of democracy in the page of good government. them in the name of democracy, in the name of good government, to constitute themselves as a committee of one to see that the labor to constitute themselves as a committee of one to see that the labor movement is kept clean of any taint of communism or fascism.

We are all aware of the fact that many in the world today are dissatisfied with the democratic form of government. We are told that democracy is inefficient, that it is vacillating, that it is slow moving and incompetent, that it cannot cope with the problems of the modern world. We know, too, that several nations have elected to discard the democratic way of life. One group, in popular parlance, has gone to the left; the other to the right. We know one group is communistic; the other group as fascist. We know, too, what has happened in the communistic and fascist nations. Personal freedom has disappeared; freedom of the press is gone; free sonal freedom has disappeared; freedom of the press is gone; freedom of speech is gone; freedom of religion has been interfered with—the power of the state has been used to throttle individual with—the power of the state has been used to throttle individual initiative, racial hatreds have been excited, and national jealousies inflamed. Europe has been brought to the verge of another great catastrophe similar to that which engulfed the world in 1914, largely because of the willful action of the dictatorial states.

The question is, Do we in America have to choose between a dictatorship of communism or a dictatorship of fascism? The answer is emphatically no. There is a middle of the way between the two extremes and that is the way of englishened demography. More work extremes, and that is the way of enlightened democracy. when I say enlightened democracy. America as a free nation can-not endure if we masquerade as we did in the 1920's, as a democracy, when in reality our state is a plutocracy, where the basis of power is wealth. We must have the substance as well as the form of democracy. There cannot be a dictatorship of wealth any more than there can be a dictatorship of the Communist or Fascist Parties. But an enlightened democracy can succeed; an enlightened democracy that is tuned to the needs, the desires, the hopes, and aspirations of the common man, the farmer, the small-business man, and the laborer. That is the government of the middle of the way; that is the government of the New Deal, of the Democratic Party, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Among the features of the economic life of an enlightened democracy is a strong cooperative movement between labor and the farmer; a strong enterprise cooperating with business in the interest of the common man is the embodiment of the American ideal of freedom. No instrument of American life is more truly democratic than our truly substantial, real American labor organizations. What we are trying to do in America is to build a nation that is economically strong, spiritually free, and at peace with the world. To these ends I dedicate myself as your Member in Congress.

During election companying you will find me preaching the pair.

as your Memor in Congress.

During election campaigns you will find me preaching the principles of the Democratic Party, and urging all who are interested in true democracy to vote a straight Democratic ticket; but after the election, I have represented, and if reelected, will continue to represent, the 205,000 people in my district—that is the American way of doing business. As long as we have Democrats and Republicans we will have neither communism nor fascism.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOOK. No. The gentleman would not yield to me and I am not yielding to him.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I challenge the truth of those state-

Mr. HOOK. The gentleman is not challenging anybody. Mr. HOFFMAN. I am challenging the gentleman's state-

Mr. HOOK. I will put a copy of the speech that the gentleman gave at that time in the RECORD. I had it taken down by a stenographer at the time it was delivered.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman will not find anything of that kind in it.

Mr. HOOK. Let me say this, I will quote from the speech. The speech was delivered on November 3, 1938, over radio station WJMS at Ironwood, Mich. I quote from the speech as follows:

It does not seem possible that any man who had the least particle of patriotism or love of home or country can follow such a course. Nevertheless, that is a New Deal rule and we in the southern course. Nevertheless, that is a New Deal rule and we in the southern part of the State are praying that you of this portion of Michigan will send to Washington not men who boast that they are "yes" men, not men who announce that they are glad to be rubber stamps, not men who secure the support of Communists—and the Communists you will remember have no ticket in Michigan at the election on November 8—not men who scoff at religion. Do not send to Congress the men who deny the existence of a Divine

Further on in the speech it reads as follows:

We hope and pray that you will send men like Bennett, who would give industry a chance to create and give employment. We hope you will send men like Bennett, who believe in the future of this northland, who believe in continuing relief and work to those who need it, but who believe that that assistance should be a civilety as industry can give them a job. We hope you those who need it, but who believe that that assistance should be ended as quickly as industry can give them a job. We hope you will send men like Bennett, who believe that industry can and will, if given a chance, take over all those who are capable of doing a day's work and pay them a living wage which will enable them to live as Americans have lived, men who will give real protection to the man who has a job. We hope you will send men like Bennett, who believe in the necessity of churches, who believe in religion and in a God whose guidance we shall and will follow.

Frank Murphy, I know, will be pleased to answer any questions put to him on his record as Governor of the State of Michigan. He handled the sit-down strikes to the satisfaction of the people, labor, and industry. It seems to me that Hoover handled a similar situation which ended in bloodshed and death of World War veterans. In handling the strikes in Michigan, thank God, not one life was lost nor one drop of blood spilled.

All we Democrats are asking is that you be fair and honest and not carry on a campaign on the floor of this House that is as rotten and low as was the campaign carried on throughout this Nation, and especially throughout the Midwestern and Western States in the last campaign. I say that the campaign carried on last fall was a disgrace to the leadership of the Republican Party. They tried to hand to the people the idea that because we were Democrats it necessarily followed that we were Communists. At least we carried on a campaign that was clean and we are not ashamed of it. In 1940 there will be a backlash of the campaign of 1938 to such an extent that in the State of Michigan we will elect 17 Democratic Congressmen, a Democratic Governor, and Democrats in every State office in the State of Michigan. The people of the State of Michigan will appreciate the Democratic administration after they have a taste of the present Republican administration in Michigan and will not believe in your communistic statements.

Talk about blackjacking. Some tactics are worse than blackjacking. I believe it is about time, when we enter into political campaigns and when we discuss the record of men in public office, to do so on the issues, presenting them cleanly to the people, so that they can intelligently pass on the issues and stop these scurrilous, personal attacks and this scurrilous "red" baiting that has been going on.

It came down to the point where they even put up in the various districts signs on which were emblazoned in large letters, "Vote Christian, vote Republican." I ask you and I ask any of the Republicans in this House whether you can name any Democrat in this House who is not a Christian? That is the type of campaign that was carried on. In my opinion, it was born in the mind of Dr. Glenn Frank and the Committee of One Hundred, and it spread through the seven pivotal States and out to the west coast. But when the truth is told, the people will know the answer.

They called us "yes-men." My answer is that we are not "yes-men"; we are real, honest-to-goodness Members of Congress, doing what we think is right. As I see it, most of the candidates who raised the cry of "yes-men" were "no-men." They had no issue, they had no argument, and they had no platform. They vote "no" on every piece of liberal labor legislation. They vote "no" on every piece of progressive legislation. They vote "no" on every single solitary bill that will raise the standard of living of the great masses. They are just "no-men" in "no man's land." [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Chandler (at the request of Mr. Cooper) on account of illness in family.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, January 12, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

205. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated July 8, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustration, on reexamination of Green Bay Harbor and Fox River, Wis., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted February 11, 1936 (H. Doc. No. 95); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

206. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated August 16, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustration, on reexamination of Oswego Harbor, N. Y., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted December 10, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 96); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

207. # THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. Z@Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father of infinite mercies, before whom we bow in reverence and hold our peace: Keep us lowly in mind in the presence of life's mysteries, that with gentle wisdom we may be thankful for the gleams of light toward the true ordering of our steps. Deliver us, we pray Thee, from all self-seeking, and grant that with singleness of heart we may serve Thee to the benefit of our fellow men and the safety, honor, and welfare of our country.

And now, O gracious Father, hearken to the sigh of those who seem to have failed to do their best; quicken the throbs of aspiration in all youthful breasts; sanctify the night of sorrow to all who are bereft, and o'er the beds of pain and sickness may the angel of Thy presence spread his wings, for the peace and comfort of all sufferers, until Thou deliver them. We ask it in our Saviour's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Barkley, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, January 10, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Hess, one of his secretaries.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I take the liberty of suggesting somewhat seriously to the distinguished Vice President, the presiding officer of this body, that in the military world it is customary, in accounting for absences—if there be any—to refer to the fact that "all are present, none missing, all accounted for."

I deplore the fact that upon this first occasion when I have the honor to reenter upon the duty of addressing myself to your honorable self on the subject of quorum, I must concede that I cannot make the assertion that "all are present, none absent." I deplore, sir, that the exigencies of politics in its inexorable fatality [laughter] have removed from our midst some of those for whom I have heretofore responded as "present." I am compelled to ask resort to the late election returns to account for regrettable absences. [Laughter.] At the present moment I beg to call attention to the apparent absence of a quorum. I ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Reed
Andrews	Donahey	La Follette	Reynolds
Ashurst	Downey	Lee	Russell
Austin	Ellender	Lewis	Schwartz
Bailey	Frazier	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	George	Logan	Sheppard

EMPLOYMENT OF ALIENS BY FEDERAL BOARD OF SURVEYS AND MAPS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the secretary of the Federal Board of Surveys and Maps, stating, in response to Senate Resolution 285, agreed to June 8, 1938, that no aliens are employed by that Board, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor. GEORGETOWN BARGE, DOCK, ELEVATOR & RAILWAY CO.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a report of the Georgetown Barge, Dock, Elevator & Railway Co., transmitted, pursuant to law, for the year ended December 31, 1938, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

NATIONAL DEFENSE (H. DOC. NO. 105)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my annual message to this Congress I have spoken at some length of the changing world conditions outside of the American Hemisphere which make it imperative that we take immediate steps for the protection of our liberties.

It would be unwise for any of us to yield to any form of hysteria. Nevertheless, regardless of political affiliations, we can properly join in an appraisal of the world situation and agree on the immediate defense needs of the Nation.

It is equally sensational and untrue to take the position that we must at once spend billions of additional money for building up our land, sea, and air forces on the one hand, or to insist that no further additions are necessary on the other.

What needs to be emphasized is the great change which has come over conflicts between nations since the World War ended, and especially during the past 5 or 6 years.

Those of us who took part in the conduct of the World War will remember that in the preparation of the American armies for actual participation in battle the United States, entering the war on April 6, 1917, took no part whatsoever in any major engagement until the end of May 1918. In other words, while other armies were conducting the actual fighting, the United States had more than a year of absolute peace at home without any threat of attack on this continent, to train men, to produce raw materials, to process them into munitions and supplies, and to forge the whole into fighting forces. It is even a matter of record that as late as the autumn of 1918 American armies at the front used almost exclusively French or British artillery and aircraft.

Calling attention to these facts does not remotely intimate that the Congress or the President have any thought of taking part in another war on European soil, but it does show that in 1917 we were not ready to conduct large scale land or air operations. Relatively we are not much more ready to do so today than we were then—and we cannot guarantee a long period, free from attack, in which we could prepare.

I have called attention to the fact that "we must have armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against strategic positions and key facilities essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory." And I have said, "We must have the organization and location of those key facilities so that they may be immediately utilized and rapidly expanded to meet all needs without danger of serious interruption by enemy attack."

I repeat that "there is new range and speed to offense."

Therefore, it has become necessary for every American to restudy present defense against the possibilities of present offense against us.

Careful examination of the most imperative present needs leads me to recommend the appropriation at this session of the Congress, with as great speed as possible, of approximately $525,000,000, of which sum approximately $210,000,000 would be actually spent from the Treasury before the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940.

The survey indicates that of this sum approximately $450,-000,000 should be allocated for new needs of the Army, $65,000,000 for new needs of the Navy, and $10,000,000 for training of civilian air pilots.

The several items will be submitted to the appropriate committees of the Congress by the departments concerned, and I need, therefore, touch only on the major divisions of the total.

In the case of the Army, information from other nations leads us to believe that there must be a complete revision of our estimates for aircraft. The Baker Board report of a few years ago is completely out of date. No responsible officer advocates building our air forces up to the total either of planes on hand or of productive capacity equal to the forces of certain other nations. We are thinking in the terms of necessary defenses, and the conclusion is inevitable that our existing forces are so utterly inadequate that they must be immediately strengthened.

It is proposed that $300,000,000 be appropriated for the purchase of several types of airplanes for the Army. This should provide a minimum increase of 3,000 planes, but it is hoped that orders placed on such a large scale will materially reduce the unit cost and actually provide many more planes.

Military aviation is increasing today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. Increased range, increased speed, increased capacity of airplanes abroad have changed our requirements for defensive aviation. The additional planes recommended will considerably strengthen the air defenses of the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Canal Zone. If an appropriation bill can be quickly enacted, I suggest that $50,000,000 of the $300,000,000 for airplanes be made immediately available in order to correct the present lag in aircraft production due to idle plants.

Of the balance of approximately $150,000,000 requested for the Army, I suggest an appropriation of $110,000,000 to provide "critical items" of equipment which would be needed immediately in time of emergency, and which cannot be obtained from any source within the time and quantity desired—material such as antiaircraft artillery, semiautomatic rifles, antitank guns, tanks, light and heavy artillery, ammunition, and gas masks. Such purchases would go far to equip existing units of the Regular Army and the National Guard.

I suggest approximately $32,000,000 for "educational orders" for the Army; in other words, to enable industry to prepare for quantity production in an emergency of those military items which are noncommercial in character and are so difficult of manufacture as to constitute what is known as "bottle necks" in the problem of procurement.

The balance should be used, I believe, for improving and strengthening the seacoast defenses of Panama, Hawaii, and the continental United States, including the construction of a highway outside the limits of the Panama Canal Zone, important to the defense of the zone.

The estimated appropriation of $65,000,000 for the Navy should be divided into (a) $44,000,000 for the creation or strengthening of Navy bases in both oceans, in general agreement with the report of the special board, which has already been submitted to the Congress; (b) about $21,000,000 for additional Navy airplanes and air material tests.

Finally, national defense calls for the annual training of additional air pilots. This training should be primarily directed to the essential qualifications for civilian flying. In cooperation with educational institutions it is believed that the expenditure of $10,000,000 a year will give primary training to approximately 20,000 citizens.

In the above recommendations for appropriations totaling $525,000,000 I have omitted reference to a definite need, which, however, relates to the implementing of existing defenses for the Panama Canal. The security of the Canal is of the utmost importance. The peace garrison now there is inadequate to defend this vital link. This deficiency cannot be corrected with existing forces without seriously jeopardizing the general defense by stripping the continental United States of harbor defense and antiaircraft personnel. The permanent garrison in the Canal Zone should be increased to provide the minimum personnel required to man the antiaircraft and seacoast armament provided for the defense of the Canal. Such personnel cannot be increased until additional housing facilities are provided-and, in the meantime, additional personnel must be trained. I recommend, therefore, an appropriation of $27,000,000 to provide an adequate peace garrison for the Canal Zone and to house it adequately. Five million dollars of this sum should be made available immediately in order that work on necessary construction can be initiated. All of the above constitutes a well-rounded program, considered by me as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and by my advisers to be a minimum program for the necessities of defense. Every American is aware of the peaceful intentions of the Government and of the people. Every American knows that we have no thought of aggression, no desire for further territory.

Nevertheless, as the Executive head of the Government, I am compelled to look facts in the face. We have a splendid asset in the quality of our manhood. But without modern weapons, and without adequate training, the men, however splendid the type, would be hopelessly handicapped if we were attacked.

The young men of this Nation should not be compelled to take the field with antiquated weapons. It would be economically unsound to provide in time of peace for all the modern equipment needed in a war emergency. But it would be nationally unsound not to provide the critical items of equipment which might be needed for immediate use, and not to provide for facilities for mass production in the event of war.

Devoid of all hysteria, this program is but the minimum of requirements.

I trust, therefore, that the Congress will quickly act on this emergency program for the strengthening of the defense of the United States.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 12, 1939.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS-ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent to make certain reports on nominations from the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think we should follow orderly procedure. Later we are to have an executive session. At this time I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is heard.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Dane County (Wis.) Chapter of the National Lawyers' Guild, favoring continuance of the Works Progress Administration and the making of additional appropriations therefor until private industry furnishes employment to the unemployed, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from Local No. 67, United Federal Workers of America, of Seattle, Wash., praying for the appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for the needs of the Works Progress Administration until July 1, 1939, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from the American Federation of Teachers of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the continuance of the subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor investigating violations of the right of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition signed by five business agents of Local Union No. 367, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen, and Helpers of America, of Houston, Tex., praying for the confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith as a member of the National Labor Relations Board and remonstrating against any amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate telegrams and letters in the nature of petitions from the Oil Workers' International Union of Fort Worth, and Local No. 367, Oil Workers' International Union, of Houston, both in the State of Texas; International Oil Workers' Union in Oklahoma, Kansas, and Missouri; Local Union No. 232, International Oil Workers' Union, of Oklahoma City, and Oil Workers' Union, Local No. 217, of Tulsa, all in the State of Oklahoma, praying for the confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith as a member of the National Labor Relations Board, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of St. Petersburg, Fla., praying for the enactment of general-welfare legislation providing old-age assistance, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Bridgeport (Conn.) Council of Catholic Women, protesting against lifting the embargo on the shipment of arms to Spain, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of Elizabeth, N. J., New Canaan, Conn., Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C., praying for adherence by the United States to the principle of neutrality as contained in existing law, and the modification of the law so as to include civil as well as international conflicts, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram and a letter from C. L. Dobner, of St. Paul, Minn., and several citizens of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the confirmation of the nomination of Felix Frankfurter as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the commandery in chief of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States at Philadelphia, Pa., favoring the enactment of legislation requiring registration by finger printing of all persons in the United States, under direction of the Department of Justice, which was referred to the Committee on the Juliciary.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted at Asheville, N. C., by the International Association of Game, Fish, and Conservation Commissioners, urging the creation of a standing committee of the Senate on the conservation of wildlife resources, which was referred to the Special Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of general-welfare legislation providing old-age assistance, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BARBOUR presented petitions signed by over 2,000 citizens of North Arlington, N. J., and vicinity, praying for adherence by the United States to the principle of neutrality as contained in the existing neutrality law, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CAPPER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Hanover, Kans., praying that the United States adhere to a general policy of neutrality, and that the provisions of the Neutrality Act be extended to include civil as well as international conflicts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of the Beta Sigma class of the First Presbyterian Church of Topeka, Kansas, praying that the shipment of war munitions to Japan be stopped, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. REED. I present a petition from 2,284 farmers of Cowley County, Kans., condemning the Agricultural Act of 1938, and asking its repeal. I request that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The petition will be received and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. REED. I present a petition from 83 citizens of Ford County, Kans., opposing any change in the present neutrality law, and protesting against lifting the Spanish embargo.

I also present a petition signed by 40 members of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of Wathena, Kans., urging that the principles of the Kellogg-Briand Pact be carried out, and that the United States do not engage in increasing its armaments beyond the necessities of national defense.

I also present a petition from 30 citizens of Kingman County, Kans., opposing any change in the present neutrality law, and protesting against lifting the embargo to Spain.

I also present a petition from 156 citizens of Ness County, Kans., praying that the United States adhere to the present neutrality law, and opposing lifting the embargo to Spain.

I ask that the latter four petitions be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The petitions will be so referred. Mr. GREEN presented the following resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Rhode Island, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Rhode Island endorsing the proposed national-defense program of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt

Whereas the Chief Executive of our Nation, in his recent message to Congress, recommends with intense earnestness that armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against key positions be provided and that other key facilities for national defense be organized and located to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory; and

Whereas Newport, R. I., of special interest in Navy strongholds because of the United States naval torpedo station, maintained since 1869 by the Navy Department as a waval station for the development of and the manufacture of torpedoes and torpedo parts, is a key position in any program for national defense: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved. That the General Assembly of Rhode Island does hereby express its full endorsement of a national-defense program, as presented by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, urging and request-ing the Senators and Congressmen from Rhode Island in Congress to do their utmost to further and support legislation providing for the carrying out of such a program in the best interests of the State of Rhode Island and the entire Nation; and be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary of state to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Navy, and to the Senators and Representatives from Rhode Island in Congress.

ADMISSION OF JEWISH REFUGEES FROM GERMANY

Mr. AUSTIN presented a resolution adopted by members of the senior Christian Endeavor Society of the United Church of Johnson, Vt., which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the Jewish people of Germany are undergoing severe and cruel persecution; and Whereas this inhuman treatment is in violation of the principles of religious freedom for which the Christian Endeavor movement has always stood: Be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the senior Christian Endeavor Society of the United Church of Johnson, Vt., do hereby approve of the efforts of the President of the United States in behalf of these persecuted Jews, both in Germany and elsewhere, and would urge his continued cooperation with the other great democracles in order to lessen their hardships; and be it further Resolved, That as a token of our sincerity we urge the United States Government, after due deliberation, to give consideration to admitting to our shores a limited number of refugees; be it

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the society's records and also a copy be forwarded to United States Senator Warren R. Austin, in Washington, D. C., for publication in the Congressional Record.

ADVERTISING OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES BY PRESS AND RADIO

Mr. AUSTIN also presented a resolution adopted by members of the local union of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Burlington, Vt., which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BURLINGTON, VT., January 5, 1939.

To the Congress of the United States.

(Care of Senator Warren Austin.) My Dear Senator Austin:

Whereas there is a direct relation between the high pressure advertising of alcoholic beverages and the consumption of the same; and

Whereas the reduction to the minimum of the consumption of liquor is consistent with public interest: Therefore be it Resolved, That we, the members of the local union of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Burlington, Vt., in regular meeting assembled, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States to pass legislation which will prevent, as far as is possible by Federal law, the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio.

Very truly yours,

Mrs. C. L. RAND, President. Mrs. C. H. Collins, Secretary.

Representing 45 women.

AUTHORIZATIONS FOR HEARINGS AND PAYMENT OF GRATUITIES

Mr. BYRNES. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, I report back favorably, without amendment, a number of resolutions, and ask unanimous consent for their consideration at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina reports sundry resolutions from the Audit Committee, and asks unanimous consent for their present consideration.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I consent conditionally only that they first be read, and then it may be that I shall desire to oppose the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question on each of the resolutions as it is read by the clerk.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Oregon and to the Members of the Senate that the resolutions merely authorize the various committees of the Senate to sit during recesses or while the Senate is in session, and to employ stenographers to report their proceedings. The only exception to that type of resolution is a resolution, in four instances, where employees of the Senate have died during the recess of the Congress.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Senator from South Carolina, I withdraw my objection.

There being no objection, the resolutions were severally read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Senate Resolution 12, submitted by Mr. WHEELER on the 4th instant:

REGULATION OF COMMERCE IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in agricultural products, to prevent unfair competition, to provide for the orderly marketing of such products, to promote the general welfare by assuring an abundant and permanent supply of such products by securing to producers minimum prices of not less than the cost of production, and for other purposes. This bill is sponsored by 18 Members of the Senate. I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and referred as requested by the Senator from North Dakota.

The bill (S. 570) to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in agricultural products; to prevent unfair competition; to provide for the orderly marketing of such products; to promote the general welfare by assuring an abundant and permanent supply of such products by securing to the producers a minimum price of not less than cost of production, and for other purposes (introduced by Mr. Frazier, Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma, Mr. Bulow, Mr. Capper, Mr. Shipstead, Mr. La Follette, Mr. Nye, Mr. Russell, Mr. McCarran, Mr. Bone, Mr. Donahey, Mr. Burke, Mr. Johnson of Colorado, Mr. Lundeen, Mr. Schwartz, Mr. Gurney, and Mr. Holman), was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

ADVERTISING OF LIQUORS IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to prohibit the advertising of liquors in interstate commerce, including newspaper and radio advertising, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

I introduce this bill because I do not believe the people of this Nation, excepting those with a financial interest in the liquor traffic, want the Federal Government to follow a policy which tends to increase the consumption of intoxicating beverages. I believe further that the Federal Government owes it to the people, and particularly in those States which are dry, to discourage the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

The Federal Government alone is responsible for the use of the channels of interstate commerce. Unless Congress acts, the States alone are powerless to deal adequately with this problem.

The twenty-first amendment recognizes the rights of the States to prohibit traffic in intoxicating liquors if they desire to do so. Therefore, as I see the matter, the States are entitled to Federal protection against propaganda for liquor sales as well as against importations of liquor.

If the problem of alcoholism is to be solved, it must be through a progressive reduction in the demand for alcoholic beverages. This is going to be difficult of accomplishment, perhaps impossible, if the Federal Government continues to allow the facilities under its control to be continuously used to encourage increased consumption.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and referred as requested by the Senator from Kansas.

The bill (S. 575) to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of advertisements of alcoholic beverages, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

EXTENSION OF CIVIL-SERVICE RETIREMENT LAW TO POSTMASTERS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, on June 25, 1938, the President approved a bill to extend the provisions of the civil-service law to the appointment of postmasters of the first, second, and third classes. While that bill was under discussion upon the floor of the Senate it was pointed out that it did not extend to the postmasters who would be thus appointed the benefits of the retirement law, and the suggestion was made at that time that appropriate steps be taken in the succeeding session of Congress to extend the Retirement Act. I now introduce a bill providing for the extension of the provisions of the Civil Service Retirement Act to postmasters who may be appointed under and by virtue of the provisions of the act of June 25, 1938.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 577) extending civil service to certain postmasters was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

AMENDMENT OF HOUSING ACT OF 1937

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, and ask that an explanatory statement of the bill may be printed in the RECORD. I do not desire to take the time of the Senate at this point.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred; and, without objection, the statement will be printed in the RECORD, as requested by the Senator from New York.

The bill (S. 591) to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The statement presented by Mr. WAGNER is as follows:

The housing bill which I am introducing today merely provides funds to permit normal continuity for the program of slum clearance and low-rent housing permanently established by Congress under the United States Housing Act of 1937.

All of the funds made available to the United States Housing Authority in 1937 and 1938 are now covered by contracts or earmarkings for local housing authorities, so that no further projects can be undertaken until Congress makes additional funds available to the United States Housing Authority.

able to the United States Housing Authority.

The present bill proposes to authorize the United States Housing Authority to enter into additional contracts for annual contributions in the amount of only $45,000,000 per year. It also proposes to increase the strictly repayable loan funds of the Authority by $800,000,000, by authorizing the Authority to issue its own bonds, in the manner already provided by law for the purpose of raising these funds. The issuance of such bonds will not affect the national debt or the Budget.

the national debt or the Budget.

These sums by no means cover in full the low-rent housing needs of the country. But based upon the record of experience during the past year, they do represent the modest program which the United States Housing Authority can administer and the localities can carry forward during the next year. They do represent the funds necessary to prevent a hiatus in the program, to bring its benefits to the hundreds of localities still clamoring for participation, and to provide for the 15 States which have not yet enacted enabling housing legislation but are likely to do so this year.

The authorization for Federal insurance of loans for the pri-

The authorization for Federal insurance of loans for the vate construction of homes for middle-income groups has just been increased by $1,000,000,000. It therefore seems clear that an addition of $800,000,000 to the United States Housing Authority loan program, involving even slighter financial risks than the insurance of private loans, is surely justified in the interests of the very low income families whose needs are the most imperative of all

Aside from sound, self-liquidating loans, the present bill authorizes the United States Housing Authority to enter into additional contracts for annual contributions in the maximum amount of $45,000,000 per year, to bridge the gap between the cost of decent housing and the rents which families in the lowest income groups can afford to pay. This maximum limit of $45,000,000 per year in additional annual contributions, added to the $28,000,000 maximum limit provided under the present law, represents the maximum annual cost to the Federal Government of the extended program provided in my present bill. This is a very small cost in terms of the economic and social benefits of slum clearance and low-rent housing, and in terms of the infinitely larger expenditures undertaken for other public purposes that are certainly no more important than decent housing. It indicates that slum clearance and low-rent housing constitute about the most eco-nomical method of stimulating reemployment, increasing industrial activity, and uniting business recovery with fundamental social improvement.

The $45,000,000 in additional annual contributions will be suffi-The $45,000,000 in additional annual contributions will be sufficient to bring about very low rentals in (1) the projects to be built with the proposed additional $800,000,000 of authorized Federal loans plus the minimum 10 percent local capital participation, (2) the projects to be built with a balance of $150,-000,000 in Federal loans authorized in 1937 and 1938 but which have been precluded from use because of the present limitation than the projects and the present limitation and (2) the projects built with a project propriet built but the project project but the project project but the project project but the project but have been precluded from use because of the present limitation upon annual contributions, and (3) the projects previously built by the P. W. A. Housing Division which are required by law to be sold to the local housing authorities as soon as practicable.

In connection with the $800,000,000 loan authorization, it is all-important to bear in mind two facts. First, this money will be made available only for sound, interest-bearing loans that will be returned in full to the Federal Government, both principal and interest. In fact, these loans represent a profitable transaction for the Government, because under the United States Housing Act all loans are made at a higher interest rate than the rate at which the Government borrows money. The extraordinary soundness and security of capital investment in bonds of local housing authorities have already been indicated by the eagerness of private sources of capital to enter this field even beyond the 10 percent local capital participation required by the United States Housing Act. States Housing Act.

Second, the money for these loans will not involve any appro-Second, the money for these loans will not involve any appropriation and therefore will have no effect upon the Budget, nor will the bonds to be issued by the Authority to raise these loan funds be obligations of such a character as to be included in or added to the national debt. public housing agencies.

Third, unlike an authorization of $800,000,000 for some other public agencies, a loan authorization of $800,000,000 for the United public agencies, a loan authorization of $800,000,000 for the United States Housing Authority does not mean that this amount of money will be spent during the coming year. It simply means that the United States Housing Authority will be enabled to enter into loan contracts initiating this amount of construction. The actual development of the projects and the complete use of these funds will require at least 2 years.

Just as the loan authorizations for housing made by Congress last year are being reflected this winter in an increasing volume of construction and reemployment, so the loan authorizations to be made this year will be reflected next year in an even greater volume of building activity. Housing must be planned in advance just because it is such a solid and genuine form of public improvement. Only by providing the authorization to start additional projects now will new localities be able to get into the program now and thus to derive next winter the benefits which the first localities to enter the program are deriving this winter.

In connection with these loan funds, my present bill contains a simple amendment to the United States Housing Act designed further to encourage the flow of private capital into the low-rent simple amendment to the United States Housing Act designed further to encourage the flow of private capital into the low-rent housing field. This is in the form of an amendment to the Banking Act which will enable national banks and members of the Federal Reserve System to underwrite or purchase bonds of local housing authorities. It would place these bonds in the same category as certain obligations insured by the Federal Housing Administration. This amendment has the support not only of local housing authorities, but also of persons throughout the country who are anxious to develop sound investments for idle private capital

To the extent that private capital is induced to enter the field of public housing by financing substantially more than 10 percent of the cost of local projects, the Federal Government will gradually be relieved of the necessity of loaning large sums of capital for this type of public improvement.

The present bill does not contemplate any changes in the substance or framework of the present United States Housing Act. The present act has not only proved an effective vehicle for achieving the lowest rents and the lowest costs in the history of public housing, it has not only proved an effective weapon for destroying the slums, as well as building new homes; more than that, it has proved the as well as building new homes; more than that, it has proved the most practical, permanent method yet devised for combining Federal and local capital investment, Federal and local sharing of actual expenditures, plus the full development of local initiative and the full assumption of local administrative responsibility for the construction and operation of local public improvements. The slum-clearance and low-rent housing program does not need to be changed; it does need to be continued.

changed; it does need to be continued.

The provision of funds for the normal continuation of the United States Housing Authority program is in line not only with a Nation-wide need but also with a Nation-wide appreciation of this need and a Nation-wide approval of the basic objectives of the slum-clearance and low-rent housing program. In the past year the number of local housing authorities has increased from 46 to more than 220. Housing authorities now avist in more than 30 States spreading Housing authorities now exist in more than 30 States, spreading from coast to coast and including small towns as well as large cities in all sections of the country.

The present program will provide decent American homes for about 150,000 families or more than half a million persons now living in the slums. It will mean a total increase of employment, on the site of construction and indirectly in factories, of more than 330,000 men for a full year. This program of uniting reemployment with the improvement of basic housing conditions must be continued in order that the country may move nearer to the objective of a revived construction industry, a completely restored industrial system, and a decently housed nation of American families.

CHANGE IN NATURALIZATION OATH REQUIRED OF IRISHMEN

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, on Tuesday last I announced that I would introduce proposed legislation to put an end to the present practice of requiring Irishmen to renounce allegiance to Great Britain before becoming American citizens. This I am now doing, and ask that the measures be referred to the appropriate committee. I also present my correspondence with the State Department on this subject, together with several newspaper articles discussing the question, which I shall ask to have printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

I should like to say very briefly that, although the United States Government insists that Irishmen must renounce allegiance to Great Britain before becoming American citizens, Great Britain does not claim their allegiance, and has freely recognized Irish independence. This matter could, of course, be cared for administratively, but, for reasons which I have never yet been able to discover, that has not been done, and legislative action thus becomes necessary. I may add that I visited Ireland last summer and discussed this matter with Irish officials, who concurred with my view of the facts.

One of the measures which I introduce is a general bill applying to aliens coming from all countries.

(Senate bill 546, introduced by Mr. Longe and referred to the Committee on Immigration, appears elsewhere under its appropriate heading.)

Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, is introducing a similar bill in the House. I understand that this bill has the support of the Labor Department. I introduce it because, being an administrative measure, it may have a superior chance of passage.

The other measure, which is a joint resolution, applies exclusively to the Irish situation. This is by far the better of the two measures, but, in view of the attitude of those in authority, it appears impossible to obtain action to remedy the Irish situation by itself. I am, however, above all, interested in getting results. This is no small matter, involving, as it does, national dignity and a recognition of obvious and generally accepted facts. I hope it will be promptly remedied.

Mr. President, I ask that the joint resolution referred to be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 42) relating to the petitions for naturalization and the oaths of allegiance of citizens of Eire who desire to become citizens of the United States was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Immigration, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. LODGE. I now ask that my correspondence with the State Department on this subject, together with several newspaper articles discussing the matter, be printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. Cordell Hull,

Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Secretary: My attention has been called to the fact that the naturalization oath which the United States requires of Irishmen who are about to become American citizens obliges them to foreswear allegiance to King George and that no mention of Eire appears in the oath. In other words, citizens of Eire, by virtue of this procedure, are still treated by the United States as though they were subjects of King George.

It is further represented to me that the new Irish Constitution, to which Great Britain has offered no objection, recognizes no allegiance on the part of citizens of Eire to any country or any sovereign other than the new Irish nation.

It is, of course, understood that while Ireland was officially the Irish Free State, that some justification might exist for holding that citizens of that State were subject to King George, but this status has changed and it may well be doubted whether the British Government would object if our naturalization oath were changed to conform to the facts as they now are

I wish you would let me have a report on this matter, which is of great interest to me and to many constituents of mine. On the basis of the facts as presented to me and as I present them to you, it certainly seems that the naturalization oath should be amended insofar as Irishmen are concerned to conform to the realities of the modern world.

Very sincerely yours,

The Honorable Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., United States Senate.

My Dear Senator Lodge: I have received your letter of August 29, 1938, inquiring whether the Department has yet reached a decision with regard to the question of amending the form of renunciation of allegiance now being used in connection with the naturalization of citizens of Ireland as citizens of the United

This question has been extensively studied in the Department and it has been found to raise numerous problems, both of law and it has been found to raise numerous problems, both of law and of practice. While the Department remains anxious to expedite a decision, it has not yet been found possible to do so until further information shall have been received tending to clarify several points which have rather far reaching implications. I shall, of course, be glad to communicate with you again when the matter shall have advanced further.

Sincerely yours,

Hon. CORDELL HULL,

BEVERLY, MASS., October 31, 1938.

Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Secretary: Please refer to our previous correspondence with regard to the question of amending the form of renunciation of allegiance now being used in connection with the naturalization of citizens of Ireland as citizens of the United States. In your letter to me of September 8, you stated that the matter was being carefully studied by the State Department and that you would advise me as soon as it has been advanced further. I have received no later information from the Department. While abroad this past summer, I had occasion to go to Ireland, and I discussed the matter with some Irish officials there. They point out that today an Irishman is not obliged to take an oath of allegiance to King George, and that there is absolutely no reason, therefore, why he should renounce King George. I hope that in the interests of clarity and fair play you will advise me that the question has been satisfactorily resolved.

Very truly yours,

Very truly yours,

H. C. LODGE, Jr.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, November 4, 1938.

The Honorable Henry Caeot Lodge, Jr.,

Beverly, Mass.

My Dear Senator Lodge: With reference to your letter of October 31, 1938, and previous correspondence regarding the form of renunciation of allegiance by citizens of Ireland upon their petitioning for naturalization as citizens of the United States, I have to inform you that as a result of the consideration which has been given form you that as a result of the consideration which has been given the matter in this Department and as a consequence of informal discussions with officials of the Department of Labor, I am suggesting to the Secretary of Labor that action be initiated with a view to obtaining an amendment of the law.

As you know, the existing naturalization law requires on the part of each alien a general renunciation of allegiance to any state or sovereign and also a renunciation "particularly by name to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty" of which he may be a subject or citizen.

a subject or citizen.

a subject or citizen.

If the pertinent sections of the law were so amended as to omit the requirement of renouncing allegiance to some specific state or sovereign, the third subdivision of section 4 of the Naturalization Act of June 29, 1906, for example, would read as follows: "He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; that he will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and hear true faith and allegiance to the same."

laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same."

A review of the Department's records indicates that in numerous situations difficulties have heretofore been encountered in connection with the matter of determining to which particular state or sovereign an alien should renounce allegiance. The requirement of specific renunciation has involved the interpretation of municipal laws and regulations of foreign states and treaties to which this Government is not a party, which is generally a matter for ultimate determination by the foreign state concerned, and also the necessity of considering political relationships existing between foreign states.

This Department has for many years entertained the opinion that in view of the provisions of law requiring a general renunciation of allegiance the requirement that an alien also renounce ciation of allegiance the requirement that an alien also renounce allegiance to some specific state or sovereign served no useful purpose. On the contrary, it has been a source of difficulty to this Department and the Department of Labor and in numerous cases to aliens petitioning for naturalization. You will readily appreciate that comparatively recent events in different parts of the world have tended to increase such difficulties. For these reasons I am, as stated above, suggesting to the Secretary of Labor, who has general supervision over matters relating to naturalization, that steps be taken to amend the pertinent provisions of law requiring a specific renunciation of allegiance.

If this suggestion is approved and appropriate provisions for

If this suggestion is approved and appropriate provisions for carrying it into effect are enacted into law, then this will accomplish the purpose you had in mind and at the same time obviate the necessity of clarifying ambiguous points arising from interpretations of the Irish Constitution.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL

BEVERLY, MASS., November 8, 1938.

Hon. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. Secretary: I have your letter telling me that you are suggesting to the Secretary of Labor that she seek to obtain an amendment to the law which requires aliens to renounce foreign allegiance.

Of course, we do not know whether she will seek such an amendment and whether Congress will grant it if she does seek it. This procedure involves many considerations not relating to Eire and may well last a long time.

Pending these actions, what is the objection to recognizing the obvious fact that Irish citizens are not subjects of King George?

I note that the State Department on its stationery has recognized that Vienna is a part of Germany, yet there is a reluctance to admit that Irishmen are independent.

I do not think that my question is an unreasonable one, and I will appreciate your reply. Very sincerely yours,

H. C. LODGE, Jr.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, D. C., November 21, 1938.

Washington, D. C., November 21, 1938.

The Honorable Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.,

Beverly, Mass.

My Dear Senator Lodge: I have received your letter of November 8, 1938, with further reference to the matter of the form of renunciation of allegiance by citizens of Ireland upon their naturalization as citizens of the United States.

There is no provision in the naturalization laws which requires or authorizes this Department to determine to which particular state or sovereign aliens petitioning for naturalization owe allegiance or to which state or sovereign they should renounce allegiance. On the contrary, jurisdiction in the matter of determining the eligibility of aliens to citizenship and in determining questions of law or fact arising in connecton with the question whether petitioners have complied with the requirements of the naturalization laws is vested by law in the courts. I assume that if a citizen of Ireland petitioning for naturalization should establish to the satisfaction of a naturalization court that he does not owe allegiance to King George, the court would not require the petitioner to renounce allegiance to him.

Consequently, the question to which state or sovereign citizens of Ireland should renounce allegiance would appear to be primarily a judicial one for determination by the courts in appropriate judicial proceedings.

Sincerely yours,

Cordell Hull.

CORDELL HULL.

[From the Boston Post of July 2, 1938] IRISH "SUBJECTS"?

IRISH "SUBJECTS"?

It is gratifying to note that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., has called to the attention of the State Department the fact that our Government continues to treat citizens of Eire as subjects of King George. This, despite the fact that the new Irish Constitution, to which Great Britain has offered no objection, recognizes no allegiance on the part of citizens of Eire to any country or any sovereign save the newly constituted Irish nation.

Our naturalization oath compels all those who have been citizens of Eire to forswear allegiance to King George of Great Britain, and no mention of Eire appears in the oath.

While Ireland was officially the Irish Free State a case might be made out for classing those who have lived under Free State rule as subjects of King George. But the status of these persons has changed now. They are no longer British subjects but free citizens of the Irish nation. The fact that the Uister government still exists has no bearing in the matter. Those who live in Uister territory may properly be classed as British subjects of a king they do not recognize.

It is very doubtful if the British Government would make any do not recognize.

is very doubtful if the British Government would make any protest if our naturalization oath were changed to conform to the present situation.

Present situation.

No doubt those who were formerly citizens of the Austrian Republic will now be asked to forswear allegiance to Hitler's German Reich when they apply for citizenship here.

It may seem a small matter to some persons, but it must be a great source of annoyance to the officials of Eire to know that the United States Government is not inclined to take seriously the declaration of the independence of Eire and the demise of the Irish Free State. Yet our Minister in Dublin, once credited to the Irish Free State, must now necessarily be credited to the new government of Eire.

There is only the slightest tie now hinding Fire to Great Britain.

There is only the slightest tie now binding Eire to Great Britain in the shape of a declaration that Eire has not relinquished membership in the British Commonwealth of Nations. But this is no barrier to the existence of an independent Ireland.

It would be a graceful as well as an entirely just and logical action to amend our naturalization oath to conform to existing circumstances. Such an action would be welcomed in Ireland.

Senator Looge has taken up a good cause. It is to be hoped that his efforts will bear fruit.

[From the Boston Post of October 10, 1938] A STRANGE RELUCTANCE

Senator Lodge has, so far, been unable to get any action from the State Department which will put the administration on record as recognizing the changed status of Ireland under the new Irish Constitution. Washington still clings to the position that the relations between Ireland and Great Britain remain as they were under the Irish Free State Irish Free State.

Therefore, in the eyes of our State Department, residents of Ireland have no separate nationality and are British subjects, not citizens of Ireland. For this reason, in seeking naturalization here former residents of Ireland are compelled to forswear allegiance to King George VI. Senator Looge has protested against this state of King George VI. Senator Loose has protested against this state of affairs. He has asked the State Department to rule that residents of Ireland are Irish citizens (unless they claim allegiance to some other country), and are not to be designated as British subjects here. The Department has had the Senator's appeal in hand for months. The excuses given for the reluctance to make the ruling are that "the matter is very complicated" and that the fact that both countries have, in many cases, the same diplomatic and consular representatives indicates no change in international status.

The Irish Government denies this vigorously. While in Dublin this past summer Senator Loose conferred with the Irish officials on the matter, who were amazed that America should hesitate to recognize a status that Great Britain does not challenge.

It was humiliating to the Irish authorities to find that, despite the open declaration by the Irish Government that Irish men and the open declaration by the Irish Government that Irish men and women owed no allegiance to Great Britain whatever, the American Government refused to take Irish citizenship seriously.

It is no small matter. The status of small countries is settled by recognition of it by the great powers of the world. We have a minister in Dublin, who handles purely Irish affairs, and Ireland has its own minister in Washington. We recognize Irish passports. Yet the State Department stubbornly refuses to take the vital step which places our Government on record as accepting the new regime in Ireland. All that is necessary is for the State Department to cease referring to residents of Ireland as British subjects.

It is well known that our State Department is extremely wary of

It is well known that our State Department is extremely wary of anything that would disturb, even in the slightest degree, the friendly relations with Great Britain, but there is no danger of any such happening in this case, for Great Britain would accept the action as a matter of course.

It is to be hoped that Senator Longe continues to press this matter.

[From the Boston Post of November 14, 1938] STILL BRITISH SUBJECTS

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge has been rebuffed by the State Department in reply to the Senator's request that the American Government recognize the new Irish Constitution and cease to regard the citizens of Ireland as British subjects.

This could be brought about by a ruling that in the future, in administering the oath of naturalization to former residents of Ireland, the prospective citizen be required to renounce allegiance to Ireland rather than allegiance to His Majesty King George VI.

Secretary Hull says this cannot be done unless the law is changed.

The law governing naturalization says that the applicant shall

Secretary Hull says this cannot be done unless the law is changed. The law governing naturalization says that the applicant shall formally renounce allegiance to "any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty." That, the Secretary declares, bars the change which Senator Lodge desires to make.

There is no reason at all why it should, except that the State Department does not recognize the new Irish Constitution, which declared that henceforth the people of Ireland owed no allegiance to any sovereign, but were citizens of the new State of Eire.

Why cannot the State Department be as generous as Great Britain, which has entered no objection whatever to the new Irish Constitution?

Constitution?

All that is necessary, Senator Longe declares, is for the Naturalization Bureau to interpret the clause in the law reasonably and sensibly and say that present-day Irish citizens are not subjects of any prince or potentate, but citizens of a state. No change in the law is needed for this action.

The Senator's position seems sound

The Senator's position seems sound.

He reminds Secretary Hull that the State Department was quick to recognize that Austria is a part of Germany and its residents German citizens.

Why this quick action on the part of Austria and the refusal to take notice of the change in Ireland?

This is no small matter. It means a great deal to the Irish Gov-This is no small matter. It means a great deal to the Irish Government. The matter of prestige in international affairs is highly important. It hurts Ireland to have recognition of her new constitution withheld by Washington. The De Valera government informed Senator Longe that his efforts to have Irish independence recognized in America were deeply appreciated.

The law must be changed if Secretary Hull maintains his position. But the simpler way Senator Longe suggests is entirely feasible.

[From the Boston Post of December 18, 1938] LODGE COMMENDED BY IRISH SOCIETY

At the last meeting of the Irish-American Progressive Association the following letter of appreciation on the part of the association was forwarded to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., at Washington. The letter speaks for itself:

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.,

United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator: As American citizens, many of whom were born in Ireland, we greatly appreciate your unsolicited efforts to have the United States Government officially recognize Eire as an independent state and cease to regard Irish citizens as British subjects.

You are the first man in public life to advocate the official recognition of the Emerald Isle by this country. Your thoughtful-ness is most commendable.

The interest you displayed by visiting Eire and gaining first-hand information regarding conditions generally, as well as your very inspiring report of the survey you made, demonstrated conclusively your faith in the future progress and prosperity of Eire and its your faith in the future progress and prosperity of Eire and its people.

The members of our organization who placed the association on record as endorsing your candidacy and advocating your election as United States Senator 2 years ago feel justly proud of your service in Washington and particularly your attitude toward Eire.

We trust that in the not too distant future your pathway will lead you directly into the White House, where a man of your qualifications, capabilities, and liberality will do full justice to the high office of President of the United States.

[From the Boston Post of January 11, 1939] CITIZENS OF EIRE

The United States Senate has a bill before it, introduced by Senator Henry Cabor Lodge, Jr., eliminating the reference to King George VI in the oath of American citizenship taken by former residents of Eire and the Irish Free State.

The State Department has stubbornly adhered to the view that former citizens of that country are "subjects of King George VI," despite the fact that the country is now, to all intents and purposes, a free and independent land.

The Department of Labor is moving to eliminate reference to all monarchs in the citizenship oath. But it is only fair and friendly to Eire, and the people that come from there, to treat them separately in the matter. Senator Longe's bill is timely, because of the coming visit of Prime Minister De Valera, and should

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion by Mr. REYNOLDS, the Committee on Finance was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 404) for the relief of Ire E. Rhinehardt, and it was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

Mr. WALSH submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 55), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Naval Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, hereby is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

Mr. LEWIS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 56), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

Mr. MINTON submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 57), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Pensions, or any subcommittee Resolved, That the Committee on Pensions, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Seventy-Sixth Congress, and at such times and places as it may deem advisable, and to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE UNEMPLOYMENT AND RELIEF-AUTHORITY TO FILE REPORT

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief, under Senate Resolution 36 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, be authorized to file a report while the Senate is not in session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

THE UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further routine business, the morning business is concluded.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, when Congress adjourned last summer I began my annual tour for the purpose of providing myself with relaxation, enjoying my usual vacation, and also at the same time obtaining knowledge as to this changing world. Leaving the capital of our country, I proceeded by train northward to Montreal, where I boarded a ship and sailed farther northward to the land of Labrador. After having spent some time in Labrador, I returned southward to Newfoundland, where one of these days will be located one of the greatest airplane ports in the world, which will provide service for the planes making trans-Atlantic flights between New York and London.

From Newfoundland I came down the lovely Gaspé coast of Canada to the interesting city of Montreal, where much American capital is invested, and then I journeyed to what was once upon a time the melting pot of the world—the city of New York. From New York City I flew to Seattle, Wash., which is the Queen City of the Northwest. I am delighted at this time to see here my distinguished and beloved colleague the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bonel, who with his colleague [Mr. Schwellenbach], represents most ably one of the greatest Commonwealths of this Union of 48 States.

At Seattle I was provided the opportunity of visiting the naval fort on the shore of Lake Washington, which is located not far from the Queen City of the Northwest. Later it was my privilege to converse and visit with Admiral Fenner, who is the head of the shipbuilding yards at Bremerton, in the State of Washington. Without attempting to curry favor with my distinguished and beloved colleague [Mr. Bone], who does me the honor now to listen so attentively, I wish to say that in my humble opinion there is no city anywhere, north, east, south, or west, within the confines of these United States which has a greater future than has the city of Seattle. It is a fact that ships can easily become rid of barnacles merely by entering Puget Sound. That is something which is well known to seafaring and shipbuilding men. It is further a fact, Members of the Senate, that one of the largest and, I believe, the longest dock in the world is to be found at the city of Seattle.

Further, in its immediate proximity is that great body of water, Lake Washington, upon the shores of which we find located one of the largest naval bases in all America. And, as I mentioned a moment ago, not much farther away we find the shipbuilding city of Bremerton, which is known as one of the greatest shipbuilding centers in the world.

I know that the President pro tempore, who is now occupying the chair, will be interested in the remarks that are about to come from my lips, in view of the fact that he has lived in the section of the country concerning which I am about to speak. The time will come when there will be constructed in our country a great combination military and commercial highway leading northward from the Queen City of the Northwest, Seattle, Wash., running to the southern border of British Columbia, which is a part and portion, a political subdivision, of Canada. That road will cross British Columbia, and lead to the southern border of Alaska, and then to Juneau, the capital of Alaska, the capital of what may be said to be one of the largest, virtually uninhabited portions of the earth.

As the President pro tempore, who is thoroughly familiar with that section of the world, knows, Alaska embodies 587,000 square miles of land. Alaska, which equals in size the combined areas of Germany, France, and Spain, with my great State of North Carolina thrown in, today has a population of only 58,000, but it is a country, Mr. President, as you know and as I know, which is capable of caring for well over 50,000,000 people.

After remaining in Seattle for a time I boarded a Coast Guard cutter, which proceeded northward in the Pacific. We stopped but briefly at Seward, Alaska, south of the great colony which we had the foresight to establish between Seward and Fairbanks, ideally located in the center of Alaska's 587,000 square miles of territory.

From Seward we proceeded to Kodiak Island, where we are now engaged in establishing a naval base, and it is well that we are doing so.

From there we steamed to Dutch Harbor and Unalaska, where naval bases eventually will be established. From Unalaska we went northward in the Bering Sea to the Pribilof Islands, where I had the opportunity of observing hundreds of thousands of seals which belong to the Government of the United States. Then we went northward to the city of Nome.

Mr. President, it was indeed a great pleasure for me to have the opportunity of visiting Nome. I had heard much about it. But the real reason for genuine pleasure was that I there met scores upon scores of men who had been there for more than a quarter of a century, who knew our President pro tempore intimately, and who were interested in him, and his career, and his progress, concerning which they had read from time to time, and were delighted to know that he had, as I explained, found a warm spot in the hearts of the American people.

While there I incidentally looked up the old cabin in which resided once upon a time our mutual personal friend Rex Beach, the celebrated American author, who has written so frequently and so interestingly about the Klondike and Alaska of days gone by.

From Nome I proceeded upon America's then greatest ice breaker, the Northland. A most excellent gentleman, Commander F. A. Zuesler, was in command of that ship. We proceeded by way of Barrow and Wainwright up to Point Barrow. Aboard the ice breaker we carried a marker which was to be deposited at the point where the beloved American humorist Will Rogers, as well as Wiley Post, who not long theretofore had circumnavigated the globe in one of America's modern airplanes, lost their lives. Mr. President, I am very happy to see present this morning also my distinguished colleague, the Senator from the great State of Oklahoma IMr. Thomasl, the State from which the beloved Will Rogers came. We carried the stone marker to Point Barrow. Will Rogers and Wiley Post lost their lives at a point about 14 miles from Point Barrow.

From that point we went northward toward the pole, and then in the direction of Wrangell Island, which Senators will remember was discovered by the American explorer, Long, in 1867, and was later, in 1881, visited by Hooper, also an American. From Wrangell Island we went southward down the coast.

I wish to say, Mr. President, that this summer I had one of the most enjoyable trips I have experienced in all my life, in company with Commander Zuesler, the officers of his ship, and its personnel. It was my very great pleasure as well as my enviable opportunity to have been provided the chance to meet men in the organization of that ship who came from my State of North Carolina and others who came from my sister State of South Carolina.

While on that trip the officers talked with me very frequently—talked with me in regard to the Vice President of the United States, the Honorable John Nance Garner, and I wish to say, Mr. President and Members of this distinguished body, that I do not believe there is to be found, or will be found, any man residing within the confines of the United States who is more highly respected, who is more thoroughly admired, than our own Vice President.

The men aboard that ship talked to me frequently in regard to him. By every word that passed from their respective lips they evidenced their love and their admiration for that great man. In order that they might be able in a small way to evidence their affection and admiration for and confidence in the Vice President of the United States, one day they handed to me the gavel which I exhibit to the Members of the Senate. It is constructed from the tusk of a walrus. The men have inscribed in silver, embedded in the tusk, their sentiments of esteem and admiration. After I conclude my remarks today in connection with this presentation, which I am most happy to be able to make, I shall proceed to the private quarters of the Vice President of the United States in the Capitol and personally make presentation of the gavel, in accordance with my statement a moment ago to the Vice President before the present occupant of the chair assumed the position that he occupies at the present time.

Mr. President, I believe I can state unhesitatingly, without offending any of the Members of this distinguished body, that few of us are able to recognize the real worth of the United States Coast Guard. Very few of us recognize that the United States Coast Guard has participated in every war to which we have been a party. The Coast Guard participated in the War of 1812. It participated in the War between the States, in the Mexican War, and in the Spanish-American War. One of the Coast Guard boats was with Dewey in the harbor at Manila, P. I., in 1898. The United Coast Guard participated in the World War. In view of the fine personnel making up the 10,000 officers and men of the United States Coast Guard, I desire, and respectfully request, the patient indulgence of the Members of this body while I take this opportunity to review the history of the Coast Guard.

Mr. President, owing to the diversity of the duties of the United States Coast Guard, it is interesting to hear comment by persons in various walks of life on what the Coast Guard is and on the duties it performs. The inhabitants along the remoter stretches of our vast coast line, whose only contact with any Federal activity is the nearby Coast Guard lifesaving station, picture the service as an organization highly and skillfully trained for rescuing and succoring the shipwrecked. The Eskimo in the far northern part of Alaska, always eagerly awaiting the arrival of Coast Guard cutters on their annual Arctic cruises, visualizes the service as an emissary of civilization whose mission is to bring to him tidings of the outside world, relief from his ills and troubles, and ministrations in various forms for his welfare and happiness. The fishermen on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and shipping traveling along the North Atlantic lanes in the spring and summer, seeing the Coast Guard cutters searching for and watching the movements of icebergs as they approach the steamer lanes, speak of the service as the guardian against the iceberg peril in the North Atlantic. The mariner, yachtsman, or boatman in distress at sea knows that his signals or calls for assistance will at once dispatch to his aid the nearest Coast Guard unit, and he looks upon the service as an arm of the Government for his protection against the perils of the sea. The smuggler of contraband-narcotics or alcohol-trying to escape the vigilance of the Coast Guard coastal patrol, pictures that service as a seagoing constabulary. So, through the other important fields of service activity, there arises a peculiar conception of the Coast Guard, usually formed by the nature of the duties on which the observer happens to see the service engaged. It is no wonder, then, that the average man ashore is confused in his idea of the many things the Coast Guardmen are called upon to do.

I think, therefore, it is of interest to go into the background of this historic service and to refer to what it is doing today. Having observed that my distinguished colleague, the recently reelected senior Senator from the great Commonwealth of Washington [Mr. Bone], is now occupying the seat of the Vice President as the Presiding Officer of the hour, I know that he will be particularly interested in hearing what I have to say in regard to the history of the Coast Guard, because one of the largest, one of the best equipped, and one of the best serviced Coast Guard stations in the United States is located in the city of Seattle, to which I was pleased to refer a moment ago as the gem city of the North-west

Mr. President, the growth and development of the Coast Guard goes back to August 4, 1790, when President Washington provided for six little revenue cutters, as they were then known, for the protection of our infant merchant marine and to police the seas. The officers of the first cutters were commissioned largely from officers who had served in the old Continental Navy. The Coast Guard cutters alone defended our coasts until the Navy was organized a few years later, and as a part of its regular duties, which have continued on to the present day, the Coast Guard enforced law upon the sea and our navigable waters, protected our customs revenue, afforded assistance to our merchant marine, and served to advance the interests of American commerce in every practicable manner in which its facilities could be used.

The Coast Guard in its early history, as today, had a military organization and military discipline. These were and still are necessary for the loyal and efficient prosecution of its regular law enforcement duties, constant readiness for service with the Navy in national defense, and for meeting emergencies incident to shipwrecks and national disasters.

There are many things about the early history of the service I should like to tell if time permitted. For example, students of history should note that the first commission granted by President Washington to any officer afloat was issued to Capt. Hopley Yeaton, of New Hampshire, in the Coast Guard. The years 1798 and 1799, in which the young Republic was involved in certain difficulties with France, witnessed very important naval operations by vessels of the Coast Guard, which cruised against French privateers in the Caribbean Sea and among the West Indian Islands. The cutter Pickering made two cruises to the West Indies during this period, and it may surprise many students of history to learn that she captured 10 prizes, one of which carried three times her own force. A Coast Guard cutter made the first capture effected during the War of 1812, and vessels of the service participated in some of the most dramatic engagements of that war. The piracy which prevailed during the first quarter of the nineteenth century in the Gulf of Mexico and along the coasts of the territory then recently acquired from France and Spain owed its suppression chiefly to the Coast Guard. The famous dispatch sent by the Secretary of the Treasury, Gen. John A. Dix, which contained the order, "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot," was transmitted on the evening of January 29, 1861, for the purpose of retaining under the control of the Federal Government the Coast Guard cutter Robert McClelland, then in the port of New Orleans. During the Spanish-American War the Coast Guard cutter Mc-Culloch was with Admiral Dewey at the Battle of Manila Bay, and Coast Guard vessels participated in the Cuban blockade and in the Battle of Cardenas.

When the United States entered the World War, the Coast Guard passed at once into the Navy. It played its part with signal honor, and it made its heavy sacrifices. One of the Coast Guard ships, the Tampa, was sunk by an enemy submarine in European waters and went down with every soul on board-115 officers and men-this constituting the greatest individual loss sustained by our naval forces afloat during the World War, with one exception, that being the loss of the collier Cyclops. I think there have been few instances in the entire naval history of the world of ships being sunk with the loss of every person on board. The wartime record of the Coast Guard is inspiring and impressive, and in its dual character as a force for hostile operations and as an institution for the service of humanity at all times, the Coast Guard has always taken part in all matters which involved the honor, safety, or interest of the country, and the enforcement of the law at sea and upon our navigable

In the old days the vessels of the Service were known as revenue cutters, and the Service upon its creation was known as the Revenue Marine and later as the Revenue Cutter Service. These cutters constituted both the strong arm and protective agency of the Federal Government upon the sea, for when vessels needed help—and in the old days of merchant vessels, square riggers, and schooners, such calls were frequent—it was but natural that they would turn to the revenue cutters for assistance. So there originated from this early field of service activity the present-day function of the Coast Guard as the Féderal maritime police agency, carrying on the interrelated and interdependent duties of law enforcement, assistance in the preservation of life and property, and preparedness for defense of our country in time of war.

Many of the Members of this distinguished body have seen Coast Guard stations along the coast, many of which are located along the coast of my own State, North Carolina, and my colleagues no doubt have wondered how the revenue cutters to which I have referred came into the Coast Guard organization. I know that the Senator who is presiding at the present time can well appreciate all that I have said, because, to repeat, in the great State of Washington is to be found one of the finest Coast Guard stations anywhere in America; and in my State of North Carolina, if not the most historic State in all the Union, certainly one of the most historic States, we are fortunate in having likewise a fine lifesaving station.

In the early part of the nineteenth century, when ships depended largely upon sail power, when there was no thought of radio, direction finders and gyrocompasses, and when there were only a limited number of aids to navigation, strandings on the coast were of frequent occurrence. Assistance could not alone be rendered by the revenue cutters from the sea, but it was necessary also that rescue operations be conducted from the shore in such emergencies. This gave rise to the need for a national system of lifesaving stations along our coast, the first of which was placed in service near New York Harbor in 1848 as an auxiliary to the Revenue Cutter Service. Other such shore stations were established from time to time at different coastal points, and their rapid extension finally led to the establishment in 1878 of the United States Lifesaving Service as an independent organization. The law-enforcement duties of the revenue cutters kept them constantly at sea and readily available for rescue missions, and when a casualty occurred along the beach they joined hands with the lifesaving stations in rendering

In the interest of coordination and economical administration, Congress by the act of January 28, 1915, merged the Lifesaving Service and the Revenue Cutter Service into one single organization, the United States Coast Guard, which, by the same act, was made a part of the military forces of the Nation, operating under the Treasury Department in time of war, or whenever the President should so direct. So that today at almost every harbor or inlet along the coasts of the Atlantic, Gulf, Pacific, and Great Lakes, in Alaska, and in our insular possessions there is a Coast Guard unit—a station, vessel, or aircraft—ready to enforce the law or to give advice and assistance to mariners.

Through the years since 1790 the Coast Guard has established traditions, high standards, and a deep sense of duty that have sustained the will and capacity of the Service to carry out loyally and efficiently its regular duties and those emergency tasks and missions which are continually falling to its lot.

It is in this background of tradition and service that the Coast Guard is today carrying on its assigned duties. They practically all deal with activities upon the sea and the welfare of our merchant marine. Congress in 1936, recognizing the need for vesting authority in the Coast Guard to enforce Federal laws of all nature in our territorial waters, delegated such power to the officers of the Coast Guard, which authority in some cases had in earlier days been only implied. Better to understand the function of the Coast Guard, its operation field might be compared to that of the police forces of our municipalities and States, which, while engaged primarily in law-enforcement work, act as public guardians and as a humanitarian service in time of trouble and disaster. But that phase of work which deals with aid to the ship-wrecked and to assistance in other disasters attracts the widest attention because of the appeal to the public imagination of valor, heroism, and, quite often, self-sacrifice.

When the country is at peace the Coast Guard must continue to wage a war of its own for the protection of ships and sailor men against the ever-present menace of the dangers of the sea-an enemy that never sleeps or signs treaties. As Senators know, pursuant to a Presidential order, certain Coast Guard vessels are designated each year to perform special cruising upon the coast in the season of severe weather, usually from December 1 to March 31, to afford such aid to distressed navigators as their circumstances may require. This work is known in the Service as winter cruising and is performed at a time when navigation is attended by unusual hazards, and shipping approaching our shores stands in need of special protection. However, the cutters cruise for such purpose at all seasons of the year. Their work has a wide range, including the pulling off of stranded ships, long searches at sea for disabled craft, often taking in tow large vessels that are disabled and bringing them into port, and the rescue of passengers and crews from sinking craft. This kind of work naturally calls for seamanship of an unusually high order. The cutters have their headquarters at various ports, responding promptly to the calls of vessels in distress. In answering such calls the cutters are frequently required to cruise hundreds of miles and at times under sea and weather conditions that tax to the utmost the seaworthiness of the vessels as well as calling for the display by officers and men of the greatest skill in seamanship. They are of necessity compelled to disregard the elements, for it is the rule that the worse the weather the greater the need of the ship they set out to find and assist on the trackless ocean

The men at the Coast Guard stations on shore look with pride upon the long record of heroic rescues that have been made by this branch of the Service in rescuing human lives from ships that were pounding to pieces from the fury of the storm. At these stations are all the latest appliances and equipment that have potential value in effecting rescues. When a vessel goes ashore in the breakers close to the beach, rescue is usually effected by shooting a line over the stranded craft and bringing the passengers and crew ashore by means of the breeches buoy. Often, however, boats must be used, and all stations are equipped with boats appropriate to the locality. Individual initiative and courage are two immediate requisites in the profession of lifesaving, and the display of these qualities by members of the Coast Guard is taken as a matter of course. Indeed, no man lacking resourcefulness and nerve can long remain in the Service, whose business carries with it so much of the element of personal hazard. The men at the lifesaving stations, who are always ready to risk their lives in battle with the elements, and who patrol the lonely stretches of the coast at night or in thick weather to warn off vessels that seem to be approaching danger, have a singular and appealing simplicity of character. They are possessed with the desire to be of service to all in the community in even the most trivial matters. An idea of the extent of the accomplishments of the Coast Guard in this humanitarian field of endeavor may be gained by reference to the report of the latest fiscal year, when a total of 8,643 persons was rescued from peril, or their lives saved, being the highest figure in the history of the service.

I am therefore proud at this juncture, Mr. President, to ask the privilege of the Senate for the insertion in the RECORD of the report, of which I have just made mention, as part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Bone in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The report is as follows:

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, the Coast Guard maintains the international ice patrol along the trans-Atlantic steamer lane where the iceberg menace once took the lives of hundreds of men and women who went to their deaths on the Titanic. The cutters keep a weary but constant vigil during the iceberg season out in the fog banks of the North Atlantic, flashing out their radio warnings and enabling not only the United States merchant marine but the liners of other nations to pass safely through this danger zone. It is gratifying to state that since the Coast Guard took charge of this patrol about 25 years ago not a single life has been lost as a result of collision of a ship with an iceberg in the North Atlantic. That is a record of which they truly may be proud.

While cutters and stations are daily contributing to the deeds and accomplishments of the Coast Guard, in recent years Coast Guard aviation is assuming an increasing importance in the conduct of law enforcement and assistance missions. The Coast Guard has eight air stations now in commission along the coast, and two air patrol detachments, one being on the United States-Mexican border. In addition to locating smuggling vessels, cooperating with land enforcement agencies in locating illicit stills, protecting the customs and internal revenue, patrolling the air at large marine events, and assisting in the performance of the regular duties of the Coast Guard, their humanitarian work in taking injured or seriously ill seamen and persons off vessels at sea and rushing them to hospitals ashore has figured prominently in the public limelight.

In referring to the law-enforcement work of the Coast Guard, the average person in associating the Coast Guard with that phase of Federal activity usually thinks of the work of the service in preventing smuggling, which assumed such large proportions during the days of national prohibition. It is true that the prevention of smuggling is still a most important phase of the law-enforcement activities of the Coast Guard, but the service, in addition to combating the smuggling of liquor and narcotics, looks to the observance by the public of a broad field of Federal laws applicable to marine activities.

The regulations governing the anchorage and movements of vessels in our larger ports are enforced by Coast Guard captains of the port; vessels of the service patrol the halibut fishing grounds in the North Pacific, enforcing the International Convention for the Protection of the Halibut Fisheries; Coast Guard officers are on duty in the Indian Ocean and on the coasts of California and Alaska to see that the provisions of the International Whaling Treaty are fully complied with; the valuable seal herds which frequent the North Pacific Ocean and Bering Sea are watched over by the Coast Guard to see that no unlawful sealing takes place; thousands of vessels are boarded in connection with the enforcement of the navigation and maritime laws in the interest of safety at sea; regulations governing regattas and marine parades are enforced; and Coast Guard vessels report violations of the Oil Pollution Act and prevent the smuggling of aliens.

I wish that our Coast Guard were increased 100 percent, in order that not a single alien could be smuggled into this country for the next 50 years. To the end that no aliens shall be permitted to put foot upon American soil for the next 10 years, I have introduced a bill in this session of Congress providing that no alien shall be permitted to enter the confines of the United States until every single one of the 10,000,000 unemployed Americans has a job.

In fact, practically the whole range of maritime law enforcement comes within the province of the Coast Guard. The service strives to carry out the service of law-enforcement efficiently and loyally, fully aware of the high trust placed upon its officers and men.

"Rum Row," as that long chain of foreign vessels anchored off New York Harbor was known in the days of prohibition, no longer exists, but it is only through the ever alert and constant patrol maintained by the Coast Guard along our coast that the volume of smuggling in bulk is kept down to the minimum. There are still foreign vessels engaged in attempts to land contraband on our shores, but the more extensive legal barriers which have been raised and the cooperation now received from foreign governments have had their effect. The service is at present devoting particular attention to the suppression of the narcotic traffic by sea, and nearly 5,000 vessels were trailed or kept under surveillance by the Coast Guard in connection with this work during the fiscal year 1938.

When I was in Alaskan waters last summer, I obtained first-hand impressions of the work which the Coast Guard has done and is doing in that Territory. Since the acquisition of Alaska in 1867, the Coast Guard has been identified with its development and progress. I am happy that those at the head of the executive division of our great Government in 1867 had the foresight to purchase that vast territory for the very small sum of approximately $2,000,000. Think of our having purchased a territory which in size is equal to the combined area of Germany, France, and Spain, with North Carolina thrown in, for a pittance of $2,000,000. The price usually mentioned and most frequently referred to by writers on the subject is $7,000,000. It will be recalled in that connection, however, that during the Civil War the Russian Fleet made a demonstration in the harbor of New York. In that connection we became indebted to the Russian Government for $5,000,000. We lumped the two sums and that is why the figure in connection with the purchase of Alaska is usually referred to as being $7,000,000.

In the early days it was the Coast Guard which made surveys of the rivers, harbors, and coastal waters and assisted in the introduction of reindeer as a means of food supply and livelihood for the natives. The only contact many of the natives had with civilization was the visits of the Coast Guard cutters which cruised as far north as Point Barrow, our northernmost settlement in the Arctic Circle.

I made reference to that a moment ago. Point Barrow is the northernmost point on the North American Continent. In the vast territory of Alaska the many Eskimos now residing there are dependent for a living very largely upon the herding of reindeer and upon fishing. While there I observed hundreds of thousands of reindeer, and I am hopeful that our Government may be successful in acquiring as the property of the United States Government these hundreds of thousands of reindeer in Alaska in order that the Eskimo may be provided for as he should be provided for, and as in every other respect we are endeavoring as best we can to provide for our yellow brothers to the north, in our great Territory of Alaska.

I observe, listening most attentively, doing me the honor to lend me his ears, my distinguished colleague from the great

State of Illinois [Mr. Lewis]. I wish to say to him, and to other Senators who are present, that Alaska has a tremendous fascination for me. At this hour Alaska has more interest for me than ever before in its history. We must remember that we are now interested in the question of national defense. Today our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, sent a message to Congress pertaining to national defense. In speaking of national defense in reference to Alaska we must remember that Alaskan territory, which is a part and portion of the territory and possessions of the United States of America, is only one-half mile from the shores of communistic Russia. We own the Little Diomede. The Russians own the Big Diomede. The Diomedes are separated from one another by a distance of only half a mile. As will be recalled, the international date line lies between the Little Diomede and the Big Diomede and stops south of Wrangell Island.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be more than happy to have the Senator do so.

Mr. LEWIS. I am aware of the Senator's interest in this question. His well-known capacity and his knowledge of international affairs have been complimented by his being placed on the Foreign Relations Committee.

I should like to ask the Senator whether he ever took the time to investigate and come to some conclusion as to the course this country ought to take with respect to the Aleutian Islands, which lie in close proximity to and against the edge of Siberia, which fact brings us within 30 minutes of Siberia by flying machine or  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hours by ordinary navigation. The territory to which I refer needs some form of guardianship. Has the able Senator in his travels ever paused to consider that relation, and, if so, what does he feel should be done about it?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am very happy indeed that my distinguished colleague and personal friend—for whom I have a very deep affection and a very great admiration, as have all the American people—has made the inquiry which he has directed to me, because I know that my answer will be received with interest by the American people, if that personal reference may be pardoned. I say it will be received with interest because very few of the 135,000,000 people of America are aware of the fact that Soviet soil is only half a mile from American soil.

Mr. President, let me say for the benefit of the people of Texas, one of the greatest States in the Union, that I am delighted to observe, listening most intently to what the Senator from Illinois and I have to say, our friend and America's friend, the senior Senator from the State of Texas [Mr. Sheppard], who is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, of which committee I have the honor to be a member.

Very few of the American people realize that Soviet soil, communistic soil, the soil of the Bolsheviks, is only half a mile distant from American territory. If one proceeds by vessel from Point Barrow, the northernmost point on the American continent, toward the Lena Delta, passing near Wrangell Island, and then proceeds down the Siberian coast all the way to Vladivostok, which is north of Korea and China, he will find that every single piece of the territory from the Lena Delta to Vladivostok, not far withdrawn from Manchukuo, has been fortified by the Russians.

In that connection, it is interesting to note that since the year 1933, when the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] was in Russia, and when I was in Russia, there has been a mass movement toward Siberia of a portion of the 178,000,000 people constituting the population of Russia. That movement continues today. It was sponsored by Stalin, and continues to be sponsored by Stalin. That circumstance found much interest in the hearts of those living there, because Stalin had made a particular ruling in behalf of those who sought gold in the Siberian section, that they might be permitted to keep a larger portion than would ordinarily be permitted. I say we should be interested in that question because Russia is moving toward Siberia, and because Siberia is the richest portion of all Russia.

As we all know, within the past several years the Russians have paralleled the Trans-Siberian Railroad from Moscow to Vladivostok, and on the way they have turned spurs southward to Turkestan, and southward to Outer and Inner Mongolia. For that very reason we should keep our eyes upon the development of fortifications and protection in Alaska.

I am of the opinion that if trouble ever comes, if an invasion ever comes to the soil of continental United States, it will probably come from that direction, and not from across

To pursue the thought so ably presented to my attention a moment ago by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], I should like to state, for the benefit of those who have not personally familiarized themselves with that territory, that we should eventually bring about an adequate defense and fortification of the Aleutian Islands. I will say for the information of my distinguished colleague from Illinois that we have established a semimilitary and seminaval base at Sitka, Alaska, on the Pacific. The distinguished Senator from Illinois will recall with me that Sitka was the first Russian capital of old Alaska. If I recollect correctly, I believe that last year we made a small appropriation for the development of a naval base at Kodiak, which is one of the larger islands of the Aleutian group. We have also made some surveys pertaining to the development of Dutch Harbor and Unalaska. However, extending from 700 to 900 miles farther into the Pacific Ocean we find the Aleutian Islands, the most western of which is the island of Attu. It is true, as my distinguished colleague has just stated, that one can fly in a modern plane at an altitude of 20,000 feet, at a speed of more than 300 miles an hour, and within a period of minutes, Mr. President, he can fly from American soil to Japanese territory. Therefore, I say that in the consideration of the question of adequate national defense we should give much attention to the proper fortification and development of Alaska.

Not very long ago I had a conference with our very able Assistant Secretary of War, Col. Louis Johnson. I recommended to him that our inland air base be established at Fairbanks, which is located in the middle of 587,000 square miles of land. Incidentally, in that connection I happened to be with Colonel Johnson at Fairbanks, and surveyed the field there. I have been in high hope that the combination military and commercial highway of which I made mention a moment ago as being extended from Seattle to Juneau, the capital of Alaska, might be extended on to Fairbanks. I have high hope that we shall make an expenditure of money sufficient to extend that highway on to Fairbanks. It would cost only about $25,000,000 to $50,000,000, which is but a drop in the bucket. To establish a military highway from Seattle to Juneau would probably cost $40,000,000. To extend the highway from Juneau to Fairbanks would cost another $40,000,000, or a total of only $80,000,000.

According to the engineers, each of the 45,000-ton battleships which we now have in mind for construction will cost between $100,000,000 and $110,000,000. So I say that if we are going to do anything toward the defense facilities of the northwest, we should invest at least the cost of half a battleship in building a fine highway from Seattle to Fairbanks.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I be pardoned for another interruption?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Certainly. I shall welcome it.

Mr. LEWIS. I heard the able Senator from North Carolina pay a most fitting tribute to the eminent representative of the State of Washington in the Senate, the Senator now presiding over the Senate [Mr. Bone], and also to the wonderful development in his State in behalf of the Navy near Seattle, which facility serves as a refuge, a construction point, and depot for the Navy. I hope I may be pardoned an unusual pride in that project, in view of the fact that I was honored by the State of Washington as its then Representative at Large serving in Congress, and was the joint author of the bill which created this naval depot, which now provides such splendid opportunity for building naval vessels and such other equipages of the Navy as will be necessary to protect that coast. I ask the Senator if it is not wise, in connection with the new construction suggested by the President, to consider the northwest territory as the basis for such new construction. The able Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] rose on the floor of the Senate during the last session of Congress and sought-and I may say demanded, as much as he could from the Senate-further consideration of appropriations to increase opportunities for construction at Bremerton. I should like to ask the Senator if he does not think it is wise for us to consider increasing the opportunities for construction in that area, to the end that there may be such bases of naval supply and naval defense as are necessary to protect the coast of Alaska.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In answer to the inquiry of the able Senator, I will say that I am thoroughly of the opinion that appropriations should be made immediately for the development of the Bremerton shipbuilding yard. It is ideally located. The location possesses all the natural advantages for the successful development of a naval base and the successful carrying-on of naval operations.

I desire to say further to the Senator that the location of Seattle is such that it will unquestionably become not only the gateway to that portion of continental American territory north of Seattle, but of necessity the gateway to Alaska

In making mention of the Bremerton shipbuilding yards and the development of the naval base at Lake Washington, I mention with pleasure—because I know that it will please my distinguished friend, the Senator from Washington, who now presides over the Senate—the fact that one of the largest hydroelectric power developments in America is the Grand Coulee Dam. In connection with the future development of Bremerton, I am inclined to believe that electricity will become more and more a major factor in the work at Bremerton. The power plant at Coulee Dam when completed will be the largest hydroelectric power plant in the world. There will be more concrete in it than in any other dam in the world. It will be one of the highest and one of the widest. Of course, as my able colleague knows as a result of his travels in Russia, the longest dams in the world for hydroelectric power are up and down the Volga; but when Grand Coulee Dam is completed it will be the largest in the world, and the probabilities are that when completed it will cost us about $175,000,000. A very interesting thing about that dam is that it will not only produce electrical power, but, in addition thereto, it will irrigate more than 1,000,000 acres of land in the State of the able Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE]; and besides that, if necessary, an additional dam can be built below Grand Coulee which will irrigate, I am told. more than 350,000 acres of land.

Another reason for that development is that one of the greatest plants for the construction of fighting airplanes is now in the Senator's city of Seattle. I refer to the Boeing plant. Of course, in our national-defense program the airplane will play a very large part, because we know that the airplane has annihilated both time and space. In connection with the Bremerton yard it is well to develop this great plant; and I cannot resist the temptation to advise those who are here, including the Senator from the State of Washington, that there would not be a Boeing plant in Seattle now if it were not for my State of North Carolina, because it was in North Carolina 35 years ago that the first successful airplane flight in all the world was made by a mechanically driven plane that carried the weight of a man.

That flight was made at Kitty Hawk. It was made by the Wright brothers. The old plane in which that flight was made is now in the Museum of Science in South Kensington Gardens in London; and I hope I may have the interest of all the Members of this body in endeavoring, in some manner or form, to retrieve, as it were, to bring back the Wright plane from the Museum of Science in South Kensington Gardens in London, either to the National Museum in Washington, or, preferably, to a museum to be constructed of marble at Kitty Hawk in my State of North Carolina.

Those of you whose memories go back to 1897 may recollect the famous Coast Guard overland expedition ordered by President McKinley to rescue the crews of eight vessels of the whaling fleet caught in the ice off Point Barrow, Little hope was held out for their rescue. The famous old Coast Guard cutter Bear was fitted out for the expedition, and sailed from Seattle, Wash., in November 1897. Ten months later she returned to Seattle, bringing four crews of the wrecked whalers, and having fully carried out all the orders and accomplished all the purposes of the expedition without loss or accident of any kind. From Nunivak Island to Point Barrow the Coast Guard overland expedition trekked by sled, driving along with them reindeer for food for themselves and the imprisoned whalers. Having arrived at Point Barrow, there they awaited the arrival of the Bear in the summer of 1898 to bring out the shipwrecked men. Wintry excursions in Alaska had been made previously, but this particular overland journey was the first to be widely heralded; and, notwithstanding its perils and privations, it contributed to the banishment of the belief previously entertained that the difficulties were insurmountable. A similar journey now would attract little attention, because of the fine reputation made by the Coast Guard.

Down through the years the Coast Guard has sent its vessels and expeditions into Alaskan waters upon duties and missions which have made a pronounced impression upon the people there of the purpose and aim of the United States Government to give to the natives and citizens of Alaska and to industry and marine commerce every practicable assistance. Today the Coast Guard in its Alaskan operations furnishes transportation to Government officials in the performance of their duties, to local authorities, school teachers, destitutes, the sick and injured, natives, prisoners, and other persons; carries the United States mails; assists other Federal agencies having interests in Alaska; assists in scientific researches and studies; assists in the enforcement of the United States laws; apprehends violators of law; aids in the administration of justice; holds court; settles difficulties between employers and employees; assists vessels in distress; boards and examines vessels; delivers food and other supplies and freight to the isolated settlements; provides medicine, medical, surgical, and dental treatment to the natives; and in other ways contributes to the welfare and progress of that Territory in the far North.

At this time I should like to refer to one of the latest additions to the work of the Coast Guard. Senators are aware of the energetic measures recently taken to upbuild the United States merchant marine. During the Seventy-fifth Congress provision was made for the creation of a United States Maritime Service, the purpose of which is to assist in the maintenance of a trained and efficient merchant marine personnel by providing an adequate training system, making available facilities for instruction, and contributing other benefits for seamen who man our merchant vessels on the Great Lakes and on the high seas. It is noteworthy that the United States Coast Guard was selected by the United States Maritime Commission to administer this service.

Characteristic of the resourcefulness and ability of the Coast Guard organization readily to assume new tasks dealing with maritime and law-enforcement matters, the training is making, I understand, splendid progress. Two training stations are now in commission, one at Hoffman Island, N. Y., and one at Oakland, Calif. Another one, for the training and instruction of licensed officers, is shortly to be opened at New London, Conn. Training of merchant-marine personnel has a direct relationship to the work of the Coast Guard, for in such close contact between Coast Guard personnel and merchant-marine personnel under training, a better understanding is obtained of safety measures aboard ship and of the requirements of law respecting the merchant-marine seamen and maritime operations. In assuming this task, the Coast Guard fully appreciates the responsibility that has been placed upon it. Knowing as I do the record of the service through the years, we may depend with full confidence upon an efficient administration of this training system. I feel we are well on the road to meeting the aim of Congress as set forth in the act of June 29, 1936, in declaring that our merchant vessels should be manned with a trained and efficient citizen personnel.

Briefly, Mr. President, I may say that the Government has in the Coast Guard a most compact and efficient organization, faithfully and loyally discharging the duties embraced within its function as the Nation's maritime police agency. With its force of approximately 10,000 trained and disciplined officers and men, with its academy at New London for the education and instruction of commissioned officers to carry forward and maintain the ideals, traditions, and high standards of the service, with its stations, aircraft, and vessels seeing to the enforcement of the laws of the United States upon the sea and navigable waters and always ready to render assistance in time of shipwreck, flood, hurricane, or other disaster; with its highly developed organization for undertaking and discharging regular and emergency tasks; with its record of honorable and distinguished service in war and in peace, I feel that we have in the Coast Guard a national asset which commands our esteem and regard, and to which organization I wish today to pay my tribute.

In conclusion, Mr. President, with my full heart I thank my colleagues for their indulgence, which provided me an opportunity to speak very truthfully and frankly in regard to the value of one of the finest services possessed by America; and, Mr. President, with your indulgence and with the indulgence of my distinguished friend from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], our majority leader, I ask permission to introduce a bill providing for the retirement of these heroes of trackless waters. If there are any members of the Commerce Committee on the floor of the Senate today, let me say to them that when the bill is referred to their committee I sincerely hope they will give it favorable consideration; and when it is brought back to the Senate of the United States I have every confidence, my colleagues, that you will reward those men who have justly deserved reward for many, many years past.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be received and referred to the Committee on Commerce. (Senate bill 595, introduced by Mr. Reynolds, appears elsewhere under its appropriate heading.)

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, Mr. PITTMAN, as chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably from that committee the following nominations:

Spruille Braden, of New York, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Colombia;

Frank P. Corrigan, of Ohio, now Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Panama, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Venezuela;

John C. Wiley, of Indiana, lately a Foreign Service officer of class I and consul general at Vienna, Germany, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Latvia and Estonia, the office to which he was appointed during the last recess of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, Mr. PITTMAN, as chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, also reported favorably from that committee the nomination of Orsen N. Nielsen, of Wisconsin, now a Foreign Service officer of class 3 and lately a consul, to be consul general, lately holding a recess appointment; also the nominations of sundry persons to be Foreign Service officers, unclassified, vice consuls of career, and secretaries in the Diplomatic Service, lately holding recess appointments.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of sundry persons for promotion in the Foreign Service, effective as of August 17, 1938, to the offices to which they were appointed during the last recess of the Senate.

Mr. MINTON, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, reported favorably the nomination of Francis Wilton Reichelderfer, of Indiana, to be Chief of the Weather Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, to which office he was appointed during the last recess of the Senate, vice Willis R. Gregg, deceased.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

AMBROSE O'CONNELL

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads I report favorably the nomination of Ambrose O'Connell, of New York, to be Second Assistant Postmaster General; and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In view of the fact that there will be other reports and requests of a similar nature, I suggest that the request be postponed until after the calendar has been called. I do not think there will be any objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not think there will be. All the members of the committee except two, who were not present, have approved the nomination.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, is the nomination on the calendar?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; it is not on the calendar. I have just reported it.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think I shall have to insist this year that unless there is a very extreme emergency—

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, there is no emergency, and I withdraw my request.

Mr. McNARY. Just a moment, please. I think I shall have to insist that in the absence of extreme emergency there shall be no confirmations unless the nominations are on the calendar. I desire to advise the Senator of my attitude.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I withdraw the request and merely make the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be placed on the calendar.

The clerk will read in their order the nominations on the calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

The legislative clerk (Emery L. Frazier) read the nomination of John W. Hanes, of North Carolina, to be Under Secretary of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Preston Delano, of Massachusetts, to be Comptroller of the Currency. Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement in reference to the nomination which has just been read.

Let me say preliminarily that I have no objection to the confirmation of Mr. Delano. Everyone recognizes him as one eminently qualified from every standpoint to fill this office. However, I think by inadvertence the Chair referred the nomination to the Committee on Finance. The nomination properly should have been considered by the Committee on Banking and Currency, because all the legislation which deals with the powers of the Comptroller of the Currency is considered by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The same question was before the Senate in 1933, when the nomination of Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor for the office of Comptroller of the Currency was sent to the Committee on Finance. When the nomination was reported by the committee, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], who was also at that time chairman of the Finance Committee, made the following statement:

Mr. President, I desire to say that the nomination was erroneously referred to the Committee on Finance. It is my understanding that it should have gone to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

In answer to that statement, the late Senator Fletcher, who was then chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, said:

Mr. President, may I say that I think the nomination was inadvertently referred to the Finance Committee. It undoubtedly should have been referred to the Banking and Currency Committee. I do not want this to be taken as a precedent.

I merely call attention to the matter so that the erroneous reference to the Committee on Finance of the nomination for the office of Comptroller of the Currency shall not be regarded as a precedent.

With that preliminary statement, I am quite willing to vote for the confirmation of Mr. Delano.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the many nominations for the office of Comptroller of the Currency have, with few exceptions, been referred to the Committee on Finance. It is my opinion that the nomination could have been referred either to the Committee on Finance or to the Committee on Banking and Currency. In the future, so far as I am concerned, if such nominations are referred to the Banking and Currency Committee I shall raise no objection. I hope this nomination will be confirmed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Ellen S. Woodward, of Mississippi, to be a member of the Social Security Board.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to be recorded as voting "no."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask that the President be notified of the confirmation of the nominations to the offices of Under Secretary of the Treasury, Comptroller of the Currency, and member of the Social Security Board.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the United States Public Health Service.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask that the nominations in the United States Public Health Service be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection the nominations are confirmed.

IN THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Navy.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask that the nominations relating to promotions in the Navy be confirmed en bloc, and that the Record shall not contain the printed names of the officers, but shall refer to them as having been nominated by the President on a particular date. I am informed by the Public Printer that reprinting these names would cost $200.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

That concludes the calendar.

JAMES P. POPE

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, by direction of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I report favorably the nomination of James P. Pope, of Idaho, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the remainder of the term expiring 9 years after May 18, 1933.

The committee unanimously approved this nomination. In view of the fact that Mr. Pope is a former distinguished and efficient Member of this body, I submit the report and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Let it lie over.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, in the past I have made the statement that in view of the unprecedented hurry of the committee in reporting out the Pope nomination I should object today to unanimous consent for its consideration. My feelings relative to Mr. Pope have not changed a particle. This morning the distinguished leader of the Democratic Party in this body, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] and the distinguished leader of the Republican Party in this body, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] both asked me to withdraw my objection so that the nomination might be considered today, pointing out to me that an objection would mean a delay of 2 or 3 days, and that they had no objection to full discussion of the Pope nomination today. On that basis I shall not at this time make an objection, but I do desire to have something to say on the Pope nomination immediately when the matter is up for consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection has been made, and the nomination will go over.

Mr. BRIDGES. No: I withdrew my objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] withdraw his objection? The Chair did not hear the Senator from Utah make any objection, but is advised that he had done so. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Oklahoma will be granted, and the nomination will be read.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James P. Pope, of Idaho, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the remainder of the term expiring 9 years after May 18, 1933, vice Arthur E.

Morgan.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, at the present time there are only two members of this Board. I am advised that one of the members is not in condition to serve because of serious illness. In view of that fact I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Pope.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I did not understand what the Senator from Oklahoma asked unanimous consent for.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To have the President notified of the confirmation of this nomination, because of conditions in the Board.

Mr. BRIDGES. He has not yet been confirmed. That point has not yet been reached.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator from New Hampshire desires to discuss the nomination on its merits, and it was with that understanding that he agreed not to object; so I think he ought to be permitted to say whatever he wishes with respect to this nomination before further action is taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator at present objects to the last request. Is that it?

Mr. BRIDGES. I understood, Mr. President, that the nomination had been reported but that no action had been taken upon it. Is that correct?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the consent of the Senate was given for the present consideration of the nomination, so the nomination is now before the Senate. I understand that the Senator from New Hampshire desired to address himself to the merits of the appointment, and I think he should have an opportunity to do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unanimous consent was requested for the present consideration of the nomination.

The Chair asked if there was objection, and no objection was made.

Mr. BARKLEY. Then the Chair said, "Without objection, the nomination is confirmed."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Chair may finish his statement, if he is in error he wishes the Senate to correct him. Then the Chair stated that without objection the nomination was confirmed. Then the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] asked unanimous consent that the President be notified. If that consent has been granted, the President will be notified immediately. If not granted, the notification cannot be sent down to the President for 2 days.

That is the situation as the Chair understands it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to state that the Senator from New Hampshire was on his feet for the purpose of discussing the nomination, and, if the Chair declared the nomination confirmed, I think, in fairness, that the order ought to be rescinded to allow the Senator from New Hampshire to say what he wishes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the action of the Senate in confirming the nomination is reconsidered. The question of confirming the nomination is before the Senate. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Kentucky for his fairness in handling this matter. I withdrew my objection to the Pope appointment today at the request of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], but I have not changed my opinion on the Pope appointment. I think it is an unwarranted appointment. I believe the President of the United States in an unwarranted and an illegal manner removed Dr. Arthur Morgan as Chairman of the Board of the T. V. A. If Dr. Arthur Morgan was illegally removed from the Board, then today no vacancy exists.

If Senators recall the action of the President in calling Dr. Morgan arbitrarily before him, they remember that it was an unprecedented event. A good deal of sympathy has been expressed here by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] for Mr. Lilienthal's condition, due to sickness. I am sorry for Mr. Lilienthal's illness, but I also express sympathy for the condition of Dr. Arthur Morgan, who has stood before the country for months, removed by the President of the United States, I believe without legal right. Now we are told that there is a great deal of hurry regarding the confirmation of the appointment of Mr. Pope today to this post, because Mr. Lilienthal is sick. If we need somebody to carry on there, let us make a legal appointment. Let the distinguished Senator from Nebraska or somebody who has influence with Mr. Lilienthal ask him to resign if he is sick and unable to carry on and attend to his duties. Let him resign, and let us make a legal appointment of Mr. Pope to fill that vacancy, to which I shall have no objection.

As a matter of fact, this case very clearly and very closely parallels the Humphrey case. If you will recall, in 1933. after Mr. Roosevelt took the office of President, he addressed two communications to Mr. Humphrey, in effect saying, "Because you do not see eye to eye with me, I request your resignation, and I hereby remove you from office." Mr. Humphrey was removed from office. The President then appointed a man by the name of Mathews to the Federal Trade Commission. In January of 1934 the appointment of Mr. Mathews was confirmed by the Senate. Then Mr. Humphrey brought an action in the courts of the land to contest his illegal removal, and claimed salary. The courts of the country upheld Mr. Humphrey, and finally the Supreme Court found that the President of the United States had illegally removed him; but in the meantime Mr. Humphrey had died, and only his estate benefited from the salary.

In the case of the Pope appointment, no vacancy exists. The case is now pending in the Federal Court of Eastern Tennessee. It was only recently argued before Judge Taylor down there. If Dr. Morgan should win the case, the acts in which Mr. Pope might participate in my judgment would be illegal, and we should have two men drawing salary for the same job during the same period.

I believe we are establishing a vicious precedent. I realize that the majority of this body probably are going to vote to confirm Mr. Pope. I do not know how many aside from myself are going to vote against the Pope appointment, but I know that it is a matter of principle with me; and I am going to vote against the appointment of Mr. Pope if I am the only Member of the United States Senate to do so. Sooner or later, the Members of this body who vote for his confirmation will have it come back and hit them in face, because it is my prediction that the courts of the country are likely to uphold Dr. Morgan in his contention that he was illegally removed.

Therefore, Mr. President, I am opposed to the confirmation of the nomination of Senator Pope, although I have no personal objection to his selection for that post.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination? [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I now renew my request that the President be notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Pope.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified.

REFERENCE OF TREATIES AND CONVENTIONS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In accordance with paragraph No. 2 of rule XXXVII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to treaties, the Chair refers to the Committee on Foreign Relations certain treaties and conventions, heretofore transmitted by the President to the Senate, upon which the Senate took no final action in the Seventy-fifth Congress.

The treaties and conventions were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

An agreement between the United States and Costa Rica, signed at Washington, February 1, 1923, by which the two Governments engage themselves to enter into negotiations with each other to settle the plan and the agreements which may be found necessary to accomplish the construction and to provide for the ownership and control of an interoceanic canal across Costa Rican territory (Executive B, 67th Cong., 4th sess.).

An international convention for the suppression of the circulation of and the traffic in obscene publications, which was open for signature at Geneva from September 12, 1923, to March 31, 1924, and to which the adhesion of the United States has been invited (Executive M, 68th Cong., 2d sess.).

A certified copy of a protocol for the prohibition of the use in war of asphyxiating, poisonous, or other gases, and of bacteriological methods of warfare, signed at Geneva, Switzerland, on June 17, 1925 (Executive G, 69th Cong., 1st sess.).

A convention between the United States and His Majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, for the preservation and improvement of the scenic beauty of the Niagara Falls and Rapids, signed at Ottawa on January 2, 1929, and a protocol signed on the same day (Executive U, 70th Cong., 2d sess.).

A protocol of revision of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, signed at Geneva on September 14, 1929; a protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, signed at Geneva on December 16, 1920; and a protocol of accession of the United States of America to the protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, signed at Geneva on September 14, 1929 (Executive A, 71st Cong., 3d sess.).

A treaty between the United States and the Dominion of Canada for the completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway, signed on July 18, 1932 (Executive C, 72d Cong., 2d sess.).

The International Convention of the Copyright Union as revised and signed at Rome on June 2, 1928 (Executive E, 73d Cong., 2d sess.).

An international convention for the suppression of the traffic in women of full age opened for signature at Geneva on October 11, 1933 (Executive H, 74th Cong., 1st sess.).

A convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Argentina with reference to sanitary regulations concerning plant and animal products, signed at Washington May 24, 1935 (Executive O, 74th Cong., 1st sess.).

An international convention relating to economic statistics and a protocol thereto, signed at Geneva December 14, 1928 (Executive S, 74th Cong., 1st sess.).

A general treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama, signed at Washington on March 2, 1936 (Executive B, 74th Cong., 2d sess.).

A convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama, for the regulation of radio communications in the Republic of Panama and the Canal Zone, which was signed at Washington on March 2, 1936 (Executive C, 74th Cong., 2d sess.).

A convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama, providing for the transfer to Panama of two naval radio stations, signed at Washington on March 2, 1936 (Executive D, 74th Cong., 2d sess.).

A convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama with regard to the construction of a trans-Isthmian highway between the cities of Panama and Colon, which was signed at Washington on March 2, 1936 (Executive E, 74th Cong., 2d sess.).

An international convention for the unification of certain rules to govern the liability of vessels when collisions occur between them, and a protocol thereto, both signed at Brussels on September 23, 1910 (Executive K, 75th Cong., 1st sess.).

A draft convention (No. 56) concerning sickness insurance for seamen, adopted by the International Labor Conference at its twenty-first session, held at Geneva October 6-24, 1936 (Executive Y, 75th Cong., 1st sess.).

A draft convention (No. 61) concerning the reduction of hours of work in the textile industry, adopted by the International Labor Conference at its twenty-third session, held at Geneva June 3-23, 1937 (Executive J. 75th Cong., 3d sess.).

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Note.—For the entire list of persons nominated to appointment to or promotion in the Navy, which were confirmed today, see under Nominations in the Navy, appearing on page 110 of the Congressional Record for January 5, 1939.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1939

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

As we wait at Thy footstool, our Heavenly Father, may prayer be the breath of our souls. We pray that we may be prepared for the work of life, for the busy crowd, for the fields of commerce, for the vicissitudes of defeat, and for the experience of sorrow. Teach us, O Lord, the spirit of charity for the views not our own, for human wants and needs. Oh, teach us that whosoever excludes his brother is not a disciple of Thine. Fill us with the joy of helping the jaded, the rapture of saving the fallen, the thrill of appeasing the desert hunger. Blessed Lord, do Thou so establish our hearts, thunger, us gentle and generous with our fellows. Light our candle; may we see the bow in the cloud. Herein is the Christ with open heart and mind, sweet in comfort and divine in compassion. In His name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, two of my colleagues from Illinois who were unable to be sworn in on the first day of the session due to other official duties are now present, and I ask that they now be sworn.

Mr. Martin of Illinois and Mr. Maciejewski appeared in the Well of the House and took the oath of office.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the subject of the arrest of the American seaman, George Roth.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MERRITT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a speech delivered by me at a Jackson Day dinner in New York.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record by incorporating therein a radio speech which I recently made.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include therein a speech delivered by me at a dinner in New York yesterday evening in honor of Alexander Hamilton.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of the business on the Speaker's table and the legislative program of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record by inserting a speech delivered by Judge Martin Conboy, of New York, on American neutrality.

The SPEAKER? Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

ADOPTION OF FUNDAMENTAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House heretofore made, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MILLER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, it has always been my thought that freshmen should be heard on rare occasions only. The importance of the anniversary to which I will refer, however, justifies my taking a few minutes of the time of this House.

On Saturday next, January 14, the residents of my district will observe the three hundredth anniversary of the adoption of the Fundamental Orders by the people of Hartford, Windsor, and Wethersfield, the latter being the town in which I reside.

At a time when the world is filled with the conflict of isms, when the man in the street is baffled by the smooth harangue of propagandists and counter-propagandists, it is refreshing to be able to reach back through the years and take courage from the clear, right-minded thinking of our forefathers.

As a Representative from the Constitution State, I ask your recognition of the important place Connecticut has had in the development of our vast governmental theme. On the 14th of January 1639, 300 years ago, the people of the towns of Hartford, Windsor, and Wethersfield, in Connecticut Colony, adopted a set of 11 Rules for Government, under the title of "The Fundamental Orders" and agreed to live by their force. To quote from their preamble:

Well knowing where a people are gathered together, the Word of God requires that to maintain the peace and union of such people there should be an orderly and decent Government established according to God, to order and dispose of the affairs of the people at all seasons as occasion shall require.

These 11 rules, regulating the election of officers and the setting up of a general court or legislature for the making and repealing of laws, are the first written constitution known to history that created a government, the beginning of American democracy. It is noteworthy that these Fundamental Orders set up a federation of independent towns and that all attributes of sovereignty not expressly granted to the general court remained, as of original right, in the towns. The people of Connecticut Colony, through the establishment of a representative government and the adoption of a constitution, definitely set bounds upon the authority which they gave to the heads of their government and thereby established not only a right but a duty to insist that those bounds be observed until changed precisely in the way the constitution permits.

The American Government of today is a vast, complex machine, at times cumbersome, at times bewildering, but at all times, we hope, dedicated to the people from whom it has its being. This same Government is in lineal descent more nearly related to that of Connecticut than to that of any of the other Thirteen Colonies. May we pause now to reflect whether or not we have made the most of our heritage: whether or not we have allowed the simple, sincere democracy of the Fundamental Orders to become clouded with the accumulation of years. Are we drifting away from popular government to one so complex, so filled with agencies, bureaus, and committees as to be extrapopular, a supermachine regulating the people rather than being regulated by the people? Are we clogging the machinery of true democracy with surplus legislation in a frantic attempt to preserve that which our increased efforts only tend to destroy? Or are we going to be guided by the simple wisdom of the Fundamental Orders which sought to govern for the benefit of all rather than for the joy of governing?

Three hundred years ago the ideal which gave birth to the Fundamental Orders was the ideal of representative government, practical working politics of the people. May we, 300 years later, affirm that ideal as worthy of preservation. I ask you, therefore, to recognize the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut not as an ancestor of our Government, dead these 300 years, but rather as a parent, alive and exhorting its offspring to walk wisely in the paths of liberty and democracy. [Applause.]

APPROPRIATIONS FOR WORK RELIEF AND RELIEF

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado reported the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 83) making an additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to submit minority views and ask that they may be printed with the majority report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order there is not a quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and thirty-seven Members present, a quorum.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 83) making an additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 83, with Mr. WARREN in the chair

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the joint resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 83

Resolved, etc., That in order to continue to provide work relief on useful public projects; and relief, as authorized in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, and subject to all of the provisions of such act, there is hereby appropriated to the Works Progress Administration, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $725,000,000, which amount shall be added to the $1,425,000,000 appropriated to that Administration in section 1, subsection 1, of such Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938 and shall proportionately increase the amounts specified in limitations (1), (2), and (3), of (d) of subsection (1) of section 1 of such act: Provided, That the provisions of section 2 of such act prescribing February 28, 1939, as the end of the period over which the funds appropriated to the Works Progress Administration shall be apportioned and distributed are hereby amended so as to prescribe June 30, 1939, as the end of such period: Provided further, That notwithstanding any of the provisions of section 2 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, the amount herein appropriated shall be so apportioned by the Works Progress Administration as to cover the entire period from the date of the approval of this act until June 30, 1939: Provided further, That the limitation of $60,000,000 in section 3 of such act, on the amount that may be allocated to other Federal departments, establishments, and agencies is hereby increased to $83,000,000: Provided further, That the words "and prior to February 28, 1939," are hereby deleted from section 23 of such act: Provided further, That the provisions of Executive Order No. 7916, dated June 24, 1938, shall not apply to positions the compensation of which is payable from appropriations contained in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938 or from the amount appropriated in this joint resolution, and such appropriations shall not be available for the compensation of the incumbent of any position placed in the competitive classified civ

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, when will it be in order to offer amendments to the resolution?

The CHAIRMAN. After 2 o'clock tomorrow, Friday, January 13.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, House Joint Resolution 83, which is now before the Committee for consideration, is for the purpose of providing additional funds for the Works Progress Administration for the remainder of the fiscal year. I shall undertake to give a very brief description of the resolution. As reported by the Appropriations Committee, it provides for $725,000,000 for the remainder of the fiscal year, covering a period from February 6 to June 30, 1939. Those funds are available to the Works Progress Administration under the same terms and provisions of the original relief act of 1938, under which Works Progress Administration is now operating, with the exception that the amount available for Federal projects is proportionately increased—an immaterial and noncontroversial change in the bill-and with a further provision added that undertakes to prevent the supervisory personnel of the Works Progress Administration from being covered into the classified civil service under the terms and provisions of the Executive order of June 24, 1938.

CIVIL SERVICE

It will be recalled that on that date the President issued a general Executive order covering into the classified civil service certain establishments of the Government, not by name, but by description, leaving it to the Civil Service Commission to name the agencies and to carry that into effect. The purpose of the language inserted in the resolution is to prevent, certainly for the time being, these 37,000 supervisory personnel of the Works Progress Administration from being covered into the classified civil service. The evidence before the committee showed that some 2,000 of these people are in the Department in Washington, and some 35,000 in the field offices. I think the reason for the language is obvious. Some of us entertain the hope that the Works Progress Administration will some day, when business and industry have been able to take up certainly a large part of the slack of unemployment, find itself with nothing to do. [Applause.] Maybe that is an illusion, maybe it is a vain hope, but certainly we would not be justified in denying ourselves the benefit of that hope, and certainly we would not wish to place in the way of ultimate liquidation of the Works Progress Administration an army of 37,000 civilservice employees. So, without casting any aspersions upon anyone, for many of that army of people are faithful public servants, the committee did not feel that in such a hasty manner they should be added permanently to the personnel of the United States Government.

In considering the relief problem as it is now presented to the Congress I think there are a few things that we should bear in mind in order to keep our bearings. The first is that never have we undertaken to provide jobs for all of the unemployed. It is well to remember that. When someone tells us that any reduction in the Budget estimate of $875,000,000 will throw people out of jobs, let us remember that even at the height of unemployment, variously estimated at from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000, the Federal Government has never undertaken to provide work for more than a little over 3,000,000 of the unemployed, leaving it to industry and business and commerce to take care of the rest of the load. This reduction of $150,000,000 from the Budget estimate of $875,000,000 will unquestionably cause a reduction in the employment of W. P. A. We realize that and we think it should be done-not to cause suffering and want, not to throw people out of jobs, but to exert all the while, if we may, persuasion, and force if necessary, upon business and industry to take up the slack, as well as upon employees on W. P. A. to seek other employment when they can find it. This appropriation will provide during these 5 months for an average employment of something more than 2,000,000 people. It will cause an average reduction in W. P. A. rolls of between 450,000 and 550,000 during that period of time.

Another thing we should remember in considering this is that several years ago the Federal Government changed its policy with reference to relief, and withdrew entirely, so far as W. P. A. is concerned, from the field of direct relief. The program of W. P. A. is a work-relief program, supposed to carry on its rolls employable people.

TAXPAYER PAYS THE BILL

Another thing that we should bear in mind is that, while the funds come out of the Federal Treasury, they come ultimately out of the pockets of the taxpayers of America, and he who figures that if he can get these people on the Federal rolls local taxpayers are thereby relieved of the burden is a shortsighted mathematician. Every laboring man as he carries his dinner pail to his work, every farmer as he tills his field, every housewife as she carried her basket to the market, every citizen will, directly or indirectly, contribute to these funds that ultimately go into the Federal Treasury to make up the funds out of which this appropriation is taken.

Another thing that we should remember, in order to keep our bearings, is that what we are appropriating, we are going to have to borrow. It is very easy to be very generous, very liberal, and very provident when we have a big roll of money in our pockets, but when we are going to have to go down to the bank and borrow what we are using, it is sometimes a different situation, if we will bear that in

W. P. A. SHOULD BE REDUCED

All of these considerations have led the Committee on Appropriations to believe that Congress should take a very definite stand in showing to the country and to W. P. A. that it looks with great encouragement upon this period of business improvement, and that its ultimate objective is going to be that people on W. P. A. will find private employment and will not be permanently upon the rolls of the Federal Government.

We are told in these hearings by officials of the W. P. A. that it is conservatively expected there will be a million and a half new jobs for American citizens between February 1 and July 1. Our committee received that information with great encouragement. We therefore concluded that if there are to be a million and a half new jobs furnished by business and industry, certainly the time is coming, if it ever will come, when there can be some reduction in W. P. A. rolls

In addition to this money that is being spent by the W. P. A. for work relief, do not forget the fact that the Federal Government, in many other fields of endeavor, is extending the helpful hand to its indigent and its needy cit-The National Youth Administration has for expenditure $275,000,000 for this fiscal year. The Federal public buildings program, the Public Works Administration, estimated that they would take care of a million of the unemployed people. A million jobs during this fiscal year. The Civilian Conservation Corps 300,000. The Navy building program is just getting under way. Also the national-defense program, which will shortly be before us. I have a very interesting statement which under leave which I will later secure, I will put into the RECORD, showing that this reduction in W. P. A. rolls, while it will decrease during this 5 months' period the monthly expenditure for W. P. A., yet the public-works program just getting under way does increase the expenditure more than sufficient to offset the decrease from W. P. A.

Expenditures

Month	Under esti- mate of $875,000,000	Under com- mittee proposal of $725,000,000	Decrease	Increase pro- jected in Public Works Administra- tion ex- penditures
February March April May June June	$183, 000, 000 183, 000, 000 175, 375, 000 169, 275, 000 164, 700, 000	$170, 800, 000 158, 600, 000 146, 400, 000 134, 200, 000 122, 000, 000	$12, 200, 000 24, 400, 000 28, 975, 000 35, 975, 000 42, 700, 000	$16, 100, 000 31, 200, 000 37, 500, 000 26, 999, 207 6, 501, 000
. Total	875, 350, 000	732, 000, 000	143, 350, 000	118, 300, 207

So there is no merit in the argument that a reasonable decrease in W. P. A. expenditures is going to cut down the purchasing power of the American people. For instance, as shown in the table under the estimate of $875,000,000, W. P. A. would spend in February $183,000,000. Under the $725,000,000 appropriation, if it is enacted, it would spend $170,800,000, or a decrease under W. P. A. of $12,200,000.

The Public Works Administration will increase its monthly expenditues in February by $16,100,000, because, as we know, its program is just getting under way, and the expenditures of Public Works are just beginning to flow out of the Treasury.

In March the decrease would be $24,400,000 under W. P. A. The increase under P. W. A. is $31,200,000. In April the decrease under W. P. A. is $28,975,000. The increase under P. W. A. is $37,500,000. So on over this period.

It seems to me it is fundamentally sound public policy and logical reasoning that as public expenditures go out for the creation of jobs and for the employment of people under Public Works Administration and other agencies, we should decrease somewhat proportionately employment under W. P. A.

Now, how can we reduce the rolls of W. P. A. without causing sorrow and suffering? I have no sympathy for the melodramatic manner in which this matter is sometimes considered, in which it is immediately assumed that because a less amount is to be appropriated, somebody is going to starve to death out in the public square. There may be a great difference of opinion in this body and in the Nation about the manner in which this very troublesome and very perplexing problem should be handled, but I do not think there is any difference of opinion about the fact that nobody wants to see an American citizen actually suffer for the want of food, clothing, and shelter. None of us wants to see such a tragedy. Our objective is to obviate that and to relieve such a contingency.

I believe I can demonstrate that the rolls of W. P. A. can be reduced four or five hundred thousand in the next 6 months without causing any deserving person to actually suffer. How can it be done? In the first place, it is very reasonable to assume that business and industry, in the creation of these million and a half new jobs, is going to take some people from the W. P. A. We should be able to assume that. We have heard so much complaint from business and industry that if just given a little encouragement and a little chance, they will do marvelous things in the way of expansion and reemployment. If this bill is passed, here is an opportunity to see whether that is a lot of "hooey" or whether they are deeply in earnest in trying to help take up the slack in unemployment, and thus make it possible for the Government to withdraw from this field. Here is an invitation by Congress to business and industry to help take up this load.

LIMIT W. P. A. EMPLOYMENT

The second point is this: We are told that among these 3,000,000 W. P. A. enrollees the W. P. A. estimates that 10 percent, or 300,000, have been on the rolls since the first day W. P. A. opened for business. Personally, I think—and I believe it is your experience—that the percentage is very much larger than 10 percent; but if 300,000 employable citizens have remained on W. P. A. for 3½ or 4 years, I do not think it would be a hardship, after reasonable notice, 30 or 60 or 90 days or 6 months—any reasonable notice—to say to those gentlemen, "If the Government has given you a job for 3½ or 4 years, and as we cannot give a job to everybody, you must stand aside and give other deserving people an opportunity."

There should be a limitation, a reasonable, human limitation, upon W. P. A. enrollment. The evidence showed our committee that there had never been any comprehensive or dependable resurvey made by the Federal Government of these various relief rolls all over the country. Localities make up the eligibility for the W. P. A. and the Federal Government has just left it to localities to determine who are eligible. As a result it has been my experience and yours that many people upon W. P. A. have secured positions there and are content to stay there as long as they will be permitted to stay. I believe hundreds of thousands of W. P. A. people could be removed from those rolls. Their status often has changed, other people in the family have gotten positions, and I believe a large turn-over in W. P. A. might be found to help take up this small reduction.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for 10 additional minutes.

UNEMPLOYABLES

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. In addition to that, there are certain types of projects that I think could be eliminated by W. P. A. Furthermore, bear in mind that the W. P. A. program is a work-relief program to give jobs to employable people. I feel perfectly confident, and I believe it is your experience also, that there are literally hundreds of thousands of people enrolled on W. P. A. who are really unemployable people. The W. P. A. has had to make jobs for them.

Now, gentlemen, let us try to be logical. No one wants to see an aged person suffer, no one wants to see an old man or an aged woman turned off from some sort of hand-made project in W. P. A. that we are pleased to call work, and put out in the street; but this is a work-relief program, and under the policy of the Federal Government my city and your city, my district and your district is supposed to take care of its unemployable people. That is their burden; that is their part of this program. Unemployable people ought to be taken care of by localities, by cities, and by States. They have no place upon this program, which is a work-relief program. I feel perfectly confident that if the W. P. A. administration approaches the problem from this angle that they will be able to reduce their rolls substantially and that the whole program will look better and be better, that it will more nearly accomplish its objectives, and that there need not be any great suffering among the American people. THE BUDGET

There is another consideration, and I put it last because it is last, but it is, nonetheless, a consideration. The party to which I belong made some pretty definite promises to the American people about trying to balance the Federal Budget. Members of this House who were here in the spring of 1933 will remember a certain piece of legislation called a bill to maintain the credit of the United States. Why, the national debt was $21,000,000,000. Think of it. We had an accumulated deficit of $5,000,000,000, we had a Budget of $7,000,000,-000; and the credit of the Nation was in jeopardy. Our great President sent a ringing message to the Congress. I quote a part of it. It was true then, and it is true today. Never in his great career did he utter a greater truth than that embodied in this message. In the language of the streets, he "sold me a bill of goods" that day, and I have stuck to it, or tried to, although it has been tough going sometimes. Here is what the President said:

For 3 long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy.

For the fiscal year 1931 the deficit was $462,000,000. For the fiscal year 1932 it was $2,472,000,000.

For the fiscal year 1933 it will probably exceed $1,200,000,000.

For the fiscal year 1934, based on the appropriation bills passed by the last Congress and the estimated revenues, the deficit will probably exceed $1,000,000,000, unless immediate action is taken Thus we shall have piled up an accumulated deficit of $5,000 .-

With the utmost seriousness I point out to the Congress the profound effect of this fact upon our national economy. It has contributed to the recent collapse of our banking structure. It contributed to the recent collapse of our banking structure. It has accentuated the stagnation of the economic life of our people. It has added to the ranks of the unemployed. Our Government's house is not in order, and for many reasons no effective action has been taken to restore it to order.

Upon the unimpaired credit of the United States Government rest the safety of deposits, the security of insurance policies, the activity of industrial enterprises, the value of our agricultural products, and the availability of employment. The credit of the United States Government definitely affects these fundamental human values. It therefore becomes our first concern to make secure the foundation. National recovery depends upon it.

Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger.

It is too late for a leisurely approach to this problem. We must not wait to act several months hence. The emergency is accentuated by the necessity of meeting great refunding operations this spring.

We must move with a direct and resolute purpose now. The Members of the Congress and I are pledged to immediate economy.

That is what our President said in 1933. I believe that that is his philosophy of government today. It certainly is mine. It has been mine from that day to this, as my record in this House will show.

I have persistently advocated a reduction in Federal expenditures and a serious and determined effort to balance the Budget of the Federal Government. I recognized the necessity, during the period of the so-called depression, for the expenditure of large outlays of Federal funds for the purpose of meeting relief needs and stimulating recovery and have consistently supported the President's program in that regard. But I have never subscribed to that school of thought that lavish public spending was sound business judgment or the way to economic stability.

Before the inauguration of President Roosevelt I took a stand on this matter which I have never abandoned, and to clarify the record I want to quote briefly from an address I made in this body on the 29th of December 1932, which is found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the second session of the Seventy-second Congress, part 1, page 1067:

In my judgment, there is only one logical way to balance the Federal Budget, and that is in the way we are doing it now, and not in the way we did it in the last session of Congress. At the last session of Congress we worked on a revenue bill first, and my complaint was that we were putting the cart before the horse; that the first duty of the legislative body was to try to cut Federal expenditures as low as they could possibly be reduced without impairing necessary functions of government, and then to raise enough revenue to run the Government. The Government has got to operate. We cannot cease functioning. We have got to have enough revenue to pay the bill; but the first duty of Congress is to see how low it can get the bill, and raise additional revenue as a last resort. That is the program of Governor Roosevelt, as I understand it. The press reports him as saying that he believes the way to balance the Budget is to reduce public expenditures to the lowest possible level and then raise sufficient revenue to pay the bill, meet the expenses of the Government, and that is what Congress is doing now.

On March 30, 1937, I addressed the House at length upon the subject, and take the liberty of quoting a few brief paragraphs from that address:

We have come now to another cycle in this campaign of progress. If we would perpetuate these splendid victories, if we would preserve this equality that we have approximated for our agricultural population, if we would perpetuate this new opportunity that we have given to the laboring people of the country, if we would make steadfast the new security that we have brought to the aged and infirm if we would try to carry on the opportunities for eduand infirm, if we would try to carry on the opportunities for education and advancement that we have afforded to the youth of our country, then we must with steadfast determination, from now on, speed to the task of achieving another objective which has been delayed of necessity—and that the one which calls for a more even balance between our income and our public expenditures.

In sounding this note I would not wish to suggest for a moment that we retreat from these splendid undertakings or abandon this splendid new service which this Government, under its enlightened leadership, is bringing to our people. Many of these emergency functions properly belong to the States and municipalities; but the Federal Government of sheer necessity had to take them up. With a return to approximately normal conditions then unquestionably again States and municipalities should move prominently and aggressively into the center of this picture, and the Federal Government, in many instances, should move out.

But here again we could not stand on form and ceremony. The job had to be done, and it had to be done quickly. But we are a foolish people if we seek to blind our eyes to the fact that we cannot go on for an indefinite period without regard to the mounting cost of Government. We cannot continue to borrow and spend and spend and borrow unless we are reconciled to meet head-on some day the fiddler when he comes to collect his pay, and come he surely will.

Again, as late as January 24, 1938, I called upon Congress to set our financial house in order, and expressed in that address the very earnest hope that Congress would reassume its legislative prerogative in the matter of appropria-

BALANCED BUDGET-AT WHAT FIGURE?

Our public thinking upon the subject of a balanced Budget has, it seems to me, usually gone from one extreme to another. One school of thought demands that the Budget be balanced and that public expenditures be brought back to the level of predepression times. This cannot be done. No administration during these past few tragic years would have dared undertake to have held its expenditures to the point of their budgetary requirements before the advent of these humanitarian enterprises for which this administration can take due and just credit.

The other extreme of this school of thought is that we may rush on appropriating and spending without increasing our revenue and with no alarm over the increased national debt, and perhaps sometime, somewhere, somehow, a fairy godmother will wave a magic wand and pour a cornucopia of great wealth into our lap from which we may pay for our improvidence. I do not subscribe to that. As stated before this House on March 7, 1938, I believe that our Nation will be called upon to meet an annual budget of between seven and nine billion dollars. It should be nearer $7,000,000,000. A return of prosperity and an increase of national income will automatically increase our revenue. As a legislative body we have two duties to perform. One is to hold down these public expenditures to prevent an increase in our Budget, to liquidate unnecessary functions of Government, whenever possible, and as a last resort, to find the required revenue to bring our receipts and expenditures nearer in balance.

As the RECORD will show, I have supported the President consistently in his great humanitarian enterprises. I believe that except for his humanitarian leadership there would have been untold sorrow and suffering in this Nation, and, as I have said, I am perfectly willing to admit that the exigencies of the occasion called for large and unprecedented outlays of public funds. We are told now, however, that the sky has a roseate hue, that business and industry is on the upgrade, that things are adjusting themselves, and that if given a little encouragement we may yet approach a situation where our expenditures and our income somewhat more nearly are in line and in balance. To my mind, the Congress of the United States can do no more constructive thing than to try to hasten that day, not at the expense of misery and suffering, but in a logical, orderly, sensible, businesslike manner, fearless and heedless of the political consequences. My constituents and your constituents sent us here to represent the people of the United States, and speaking to my side of the aisle, if I may, for a moment, I want to say to you, my colleagues, that the people of America expect our party sometime, somewhere, somehow, to show an inclination to redeem campaign promises that we have made to the American people.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman give us a brief explanation of what is meant by the following language?-

Provided further, That the limitation of $60,000,000 in section 3 of such act on the amount that may be allocated to other Federal departments is hereby increased to $83,000,000.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. In the original relief act we earmarked not to exceed $60,000,000 to be used for projects sponsored by the Federal Government. That was on the basis of a total expenditure of $1,425,000,000 over that period of time. We merely provide for a proportionate increase in that limitation.

Mr. HOUSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOUSTON. Is it not a fact there never has been a bill introduced providing for an expenditure of $875,000,000? That was nothing but a Budget estimate, on which the committee had hearings.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I think such a bill was introduced yesterday, but the bill reported by the subcommittee and the bill reported by the full committee is the same as this House joint resolution, which provides for $725,000,000.

Mr. ENGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ENGEL. Has the gentleman any information as to what the additional cost would be, if any, if these 37,000 W. P. A. officials and administrative employees were blanketed into the civil service?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. We were told in the hearings there would not be an appreciable additional cost. That is what we were told in the hearings.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. In the joint resolution it states that this appropriation of $725,000,000 shall be added to the $1,425,000,000 heretofore appropriated. How much of that amount heretofore appropriated remains unexpended?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Of course, there is a carryover in W. P. A. from month to month. They obligate, but they will have no funds after February 6 for obligations unless additional funds are made available.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Can the gentleman tell the House how much of this money will go for new work and how much will go to complete work already begun?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I do not have that figure. Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman is undoubtedly aware of the cuts that took place from December 1936 to December 1937 in monthly W. P. A. expenditures. Is the gentleman ready to tell us what followed with regard to business and production in the year 1938 after these cuts in W. P. A. expenditures?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. What happened to business and industry is a familiar story. I would not be willing to admit to the gentleman that the W. P. A. cuts were responsible for all of that, however.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Is the gentleman ready to admit that the W. P. A. cuts influenced a decline in business rather than an increase?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. If not compensated for in some other way; but I believe the P. W. A. expenditures will more than compensate for it, according to the schedule which I just read into the RECORD.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. The gentleman has stated that the amount recommended by the committee is a decrease in the amount requested by the W. P. A. The gentleman has further stated that will mean slashing the W. P. A. rolls to the extent of 500,000 people.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. HEALEY. Does the gentleman have any hope that those people who will be cut from the W. P. A. rolls will be absorbed in an increase in private employment and the other governmental agencies?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I do not know whether the gentleman was in the Chamber when I made my statement, but I undertook to outline how I thought that would be made up. I think it is reasonable to suppose that some of it will be taken up in industry. A lot of it can be taken up by purging the W. P. A. rolls.

Mr. HEALEY. Is the decrease in the amount recommended by the committee based on any scientific analysis, or is it just a slash which has no logical reason?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I have given a scientific discussion of the matter.

Mr. HEALEY. I listened to the gentleman, but I have not yet reached a conclusion that he has proved any logical reason for such slash. That is, the gentleman has not added up any figures.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Of course, I cannot be responsible for my friend's inability to follow me on that.

Mr. HEALEY. I followed the gentleman very closely.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. We in New York are very much interested in the Federal art project. Will the gentleman tell us what effect this reduction will have on the employables in that project?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I think it will have a proportionate effect on it, I may say to the gentleman.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, undoubtedly it will proportionately hit the art project as it will hit other projects.

Mr. CELLER. Will the decrease be to a greater degree or a lesser degree in the Federal art project or in the so-called white-collar class?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That will be entirely an administrative function.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. The gentleman, of course, appreciates that the Members of the House have great respect for the findings of his committee. Personally, I think it is the finest group of legislators who have served in this House during my 14 years here. I know that the gentleman has stood for economy all along, and I have great confidence in his findings.

I am wondering what the gentleman's attitude would be in regard to an effort to reduce this sum from $725,000,000 to around $500,000,000, as a more emphatic evidence of an intention on the part of this House to legislate in a business-like and sensible manner, having in mind a regard for the good of the country.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I think any reduction below the amount reported by the committee would be reaching a danger point. Whatever our idea of the W. P. A. or the Federal Government may be as far as carrying this unemployment load is concerned, there is a stark realism about it. These people have to be taken care of. The matter cannot be disposed of precipitately or with emotion. It must be carefully and logically done. I would not want and I do not believe the Congress would want to take the responsibility of acting precipitately in the matter. I believe that is about as low as it can be cut, I may say to the gentleman.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. COX. The gentleman in his clear and understandable statement said there was a prospect of business giving employment to a million and a half people. I presume the gentleman had in mind a million and a half of our own nationals? Would there be resistance on the part of the committee to writing into the resolution a provision making it certain that our own nationals get such jobs?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. There is in the original bill a provision which applies to this, I may say to the gentleman. There is in the original bill an alien amendment, offered by our colleague the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Starnes] which applies also to this fund.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. I believe the gentleman has well and ably defended the committee's action in bringing in this resolution, but I should like to ask the gentleman whether or not the committee considered the advisability of inserting in the resolution a provision which would bring about a purging of the W. P. A. rolls such as the gentleman discussed in his speech?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. The committee considered it and discussed it in the hearings with the W. P. A. administration.

Mr. COOLEY. Does the gentleman hold out any hope that the rolls will be purged in the manner suggested?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I do hold out a hope for that, because without any reflection whatever upon the previous Works Progress Administration Administrator, I may say that the distinguished gentleman who now heads the organization is very capable and very earnest, and I think we may have every reason to believe that such reductions will be made with thought and care in order to give the work to the people who need it the most and that there will be a resurvey and a repurging of the rolls.

Mr. COOLEY. May I ask one other question? Did the gentleman state that in his opinion, after holding hearings on this bill, it would not be advisable to reduce the amount of $725,000,000 to a lesser amount?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I do not think it can be reduced in the near future. I hold high hope that, with this reduction, in the fiscal year 1940 we can make still further reductions in the appropriation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 additional minutes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I recall that the appropriation of $1,425,000,000 last year was intended to cover the entire fiscal year.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. No; just to March 1.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. And the amount was to be expended on a monthly basis unless the Executive declared an emergency. As I understand, the only emergency presented to us in the President's message was the hurricane and the damages resulting therefrom in New England and along the Atlantic seaboard. My question is, Was the approximate amount recommended by the committee, the $725,000,000, spent additionally because of that emergency?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. There were a great many conditions that brought about the increased need for public expenditures in the fall of 1937. The gentleman is quite familiar with that situation, I am sure.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That was not alone due to the hurricane?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. No.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan; and then, Mr. Chairman, I am going to yield the floor.

Mr. MICHENER. Of course, the resolution is not understandable except as it is read in connection and at the same time with the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938; in other words, the resolution as drafted cannot be understood unless one has the other law before him. I have sent for that law and have it before me. There is a question in my mind that I might be able to solve after study, but the gentleman undoubtedly knows the answer.

The gist of this resolution is the appropriation of $725,000,000, and it "shall proportionately increase the amounts specified in limitations (1), (2), and (3) of (d) of subsection (1) of section 1 of such act."

None of the other subsections in section 1 being mentioned, is it the purpose of the resolution that none of this money shall be spent for purposes of administration?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. The money is to be spent for exactly the same purposes as set out in the original bill in proportionate amounts.

Mr. MICHENER. Yes; but, if that is true, why does not the resolution state that it is to be spent in proportionate amounts in accordance with the original bill?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is what it does state. Mr. MICHENER. No; the resolution picks out three subsections, and the matter of administration is not in one of those subsections. Therefore, if the entire amount is prorated proportionately among (1), (2), and (3) of (d) of subsection (1), then none of this money will be used for the purposes of administration, as my casual observation tells me.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. When the gentleman observes it more carefully, he will see that the fund goes in accordance with the terms of the original bill, proportionately. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. Folger). The gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] is recognized.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, your committee has brought in here a resolution providing for the appropriation of $725,000,000. This is a cut of $150,000,000 below the Budget estimate for relief purposes which was secondly submitted. It is a cut, so that you may realize how small the cut really is, of $25,000,000 below what was stated in the President's regular Budget estimate which was sent in here first on Thursday a week ago. That appears on page 21 of the Roman-numbered pages of the Budget.

Last spring we appropriated $1,425,000,000 for W. P. A. and relief. It was the intention of the Congress, and it was stated to us by the Administrator of W. P. A., that it was the intention to run along slowly, increasing the number of those who were then on the rolls, 2,500,000, to a total of 3,100,000 when winter arrived. What happened was that on June 1 there were about 2,650,000 on the W. P. A. rolls, and at that time the unemployment figures were at their peak, 13,000,000. The unemployment figures began to drop on June 1 and dropped in a steadily declining curve until at the present time, we are told, they are 11,000,000. We were told by the Administrator that he expected a further drop from eleven million to nine million and a half by the 1st day of July, when the appropriation which we are considering at the moment would expire.

The present enrollment of the W. P. A. is approximately 3,000,000. I do not have the exact figure in my head. On November 12, 1938, W. P. A. was at its peak. It ran up from 2,600,000 to 3,250,000 in the week of November 7.

In the State of Ohio, for instance, the increase was from 84,000 in September of 1937 to 284,000 on election day of 1938. In the State of Pennsylvania the increase ran from approximately 148,000 in September 1937 to a figure of 239,000 on May 27, about the time of their primary, and to 290,000 on November 12. These are just illustrations.

I hold here in my hand the report of the committee investigating un-American activities and propaganda, and on pages 30 to 40 of that document you will find un-American activities of the W. P. A. demonstrated by testimony quoted in those pages and indicating that the United States Government is paying the salaries of people who are writing articles and guidebooks for sale by the W. P. A. subversive of the Government of the United States and designed to stir up class hatred. I am wondering how it happens that when such things as this are going on and we are building up our roll in the W. P. A. contrary to the trend of unemployment, contrary to the needs of the people, contrary to the trust that was placed in the executives in charge of the W. P. A., when perhaps half of those who were placed upon the roll were placed upon it not because of need for relief but because of other reasons.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there? Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. COX. Of course, the gentleman knows it has been stated throughout the country for a long while that there is a very definite tie-up between the "reds" and the W. P. A.

Mr. TABER. I understand that is correct.

Mr. COX. Personally, I think the W. P. A. has functioned in a manner to give support to that charge. Of course, everybody in W. P. A. knows that such charges have been made. Did any of them come before the gentleman's committee from that organization and seek to answer that charge or in any wise to deny the charge?

Mr. TABER. No one discussed that question before our committee. The evidence we have with reference to it on the hearings in connection with this bill is entirely with reference to other matters, and the only things that we have available are hearings before other committees, and, especially, a certain other committee to which I have referred; but I do think I should like at this moment to read from the hearings on the first deficiency bill of 1936, to show that this set-up is not of recent origin but that it has been prevalent throughout:

Mr. Taber. Is it true that Katharine A. Kellock is a field super-intendent of this outfit [referring to the guidebook proposition]? Mr. Hopkins. I am not sure about the exact nature of her work, but I think she is employed in that enterprise.

Mr. TABER. She is the wife of the publicity director of the

Mr. Hopkins. I think she is. She is an American citizen, a very competent newspaper person, with long experience, which qualifies her to do that work.

Now, she was in charge of the guidebook proposition which was to be distributed all over the United States.

Mr. COX. Is not supporting evidence to be found in the manner in which these public funds have been expended; in other words, in those areas of the country where the "red" influence is prevalent the greater part of the funds have been expended. For instance, in single States more of the W. P. A. money has been expended than in the 13 Southern States, where there is little, if any, "red" influence.

Mr. TABER. I think that the expenditures have largely been made in that territory. For instance, the employment in New York City was 180,000 on December 17. In up-State

New York, with a much greater proportionate population than this employment showed, it was 64,000.

Mr. COX. Did the gentleman's committee give consideration to the thought of writing into the law some provision that would make impossible a further expenditure in this

Mr. TABER. The committee itself did not give consideration to those things. Frankly, I favor-and I expect that there will be offered on the floor of the House here as the bill is read for amendment-amendments which would limit and prevent such a violation of the trust the Congress would impose upon whoever shall administer this money.

Mr. COX. Did anything develop in the hearings of the committee that encouraged the committee to hope that there would be better administration of the W. P. A. from now on?

Mr. TABER. I do not think there was anything in the hearings before the committee that would encourage anything of that character. There is this situation, of course: We have had a change in administration. We have a representative of the Engineer Corps of the Army in charge of the operation, but they still have Aubrey Williams; they still have a set-up there which is representative not of the best type of forward-looking Americans but of the type that proposes to support something else.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. KELLER. What is there wrong about the city of New York having a certain number and the State another certain number?

Mr. TABER. Oh, there is nothing wrong, except as it applies to the need of relief; except as it applies, as the evidence before some of these committees has developed, to the employment of persons who were put on the rolls for some other reason than because they needed or deserved relief. That is the only reason.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. The gentleman from New York has mentioned the Federal theater project and the Federal writers' project. I am wondering if this resolution goes through whether the supervisors of those projects will be put under civil service.

Mr. TABER. If this resolution goes through in the form in which it is supported by the committee, it will prevent putting any of the W. P. A. administrators under civil service. The committee was unanimous in believing that it is absolutely wrong to give civil-service status to that kind of a gang and place them on the pay roll forever. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I have referred to just a few of the things that, to my mind, discredit and utterly destroy the W. P. A. as an effective force in handling the relief program.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield at this time. I must say a few things myself. I believe it is absolutely necessary that this Congress set up some kind of a program which will put whatever contribution for relief the Government makes in a position where it can be effective and useful for relief. I myself believe that a return to the States of the funds for expenditure with a requirement of a proper contribution on their part would be an effective way. I believe it can be done and can be done effectively. I believe it can be done and put off the W. P. A. rolls such people as I get called to my attention all of the time. I have in my hand a letter from a source that I know is sound, from a State other than my own, but which I have investigated since I received the letter, and that letter reads:

Today an estate came to my attention, the record of which will be available in probate court, where the deceased had accounts in three different banks approximating $2,500, a mortgage on which there was $190 due, and a house and lot which he rented for $20

The man referred to in the letter was killed in an accident while illegally employed on the W. P. A., and there is going to be a claim against the Government for damages on account of his death before the United States Employees' Compensation Commission.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes. That is just an illustration of the same thing that you and I know is going on in our own communities, of the way this thing has been administered, of the way it has been abused. I think the committee has done a good job in bringing here a cut of $150,000,000 in the second Budget estimate that came to the House, although it is only $25,000,000 in the Budget estimate that came first. Frankly I believe less money should be appropriated, but I think we should be on the way to something that will get us out of this program rather than keep us in it. What I am going to propose is that we appropriate enough money to carry this matter to the 7th day of April. I say the 7th of April because that is 2 months in addition to the figures that they now claim they have the money to get along with until the 7th of February, and that in the meantime Congress be directed to get busy and formulate a definite program that will get rid of this kind of set-up-the kind of set-up that has gone back on the purpose that the Congress expressed for taking care of the worthy and needy, that has made it an instrument of politics, that has played politics with the people's misery.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TABER. I cannot yield. I yielded once to the gentleman. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. As the gentleman knows, last summer business was at very low ebb. The fall elections came on and the people elected what we believe to be a conservative Congress. Then business started going up and has continued until the past 2 weeks, when the President came here and said, "Let us spend more money." Then he made four radical appointments. I mean, Frankfurter to the Supreme Court, Hopkins and Murphy, and Senator Pope to the T. V. A. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Does he think there is any chance of reducing W. P. A. rolls so long as they continue to spend more money and appoint radicals in important key positions?

Mr. TABER. The W. P. A. rolls can be reduced by getting rid of a large number that do not belong there. The cleaning up of those rolls, in my opinion, will reduce them 500,000 alone. In addition to that, at the present time the State relief rolls are only a million and a half, a rather comparatively low figure. In addition to that, the figures indicate that there has been an enormous spread of something like a half million in the last year and a half, of those who are drawing benefits out of the so-called Social Security Act. I do not believe, with the present trend, that there is any question but what we can legitimately and properly reduce the W. P. A. load. I believe if we would remove the restrictions against business recovery, which the Corcoran and Cohen group have persuaded the President to place upon business, the appointments to the National Labor Relations Board and to other key positions in the Government, we would encourage business to go ahead and employ people, and there would be no trouble in wiping out the W. P. A. entirely. [Applause,]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

Now, in my opinion, if the Congress should adopt a program which would carry the W. P. A. on until the 7th day of April, and practically demand that a definite program be set up for the handling of that relief question, that is the only way it can be done, because, except under pressure, you cannot move a mountain of that size. Except under pressure you cannot force anything of that kind through. I believe that when that amendment is offered, if this Committee will adopt it, we will have started on the way toward solving this relief problem in an intelligent and satisfactory way to the American people.

I hope this Committee will support the amendments. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Warren, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration House Joint Resolution 83, directed him to report that it had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Hess, one of his secretaries.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my annual message to this Congress I have spoken at some length of the changing world conditions outside of the American hemisphere which make it imperative that we take immediate steps for the protection of our liberties.

It would be unwise for any of us to yield to any form of hysteria. Nevertheless, regardless of political affiliations, we can properly join in an appraisal of the world situation and agree on the immediate defense needs of the Nation.

It is equally sensational and untrue to take the position that we must at once spend billions of additional money for building up our land, sea, and air forces, on the one hand, or to insist that no further additions are necessary on the other.

What needs to be emphasized is the great change which has come over conflicts between nations since the World War ended, and especially during the past 5 or 6 years.

Those of us who took part in the conduct of the World War will remember that in the preparation of the American armies for actual participation in battle, the United States, entering the war on April 6, 1917, took no part whatsoever in any major engagement until the end of May 1918. In other words, while other armies were conducting the actual fighting, the United States had more than a year of absolute peace at home without any threat of attack on this continent, to train men, to produce raw materials, to process them into munitions and supplies, and to forge the whole into fighting forces. It is even a matter of record that as late as the autumn of 1918, American armies at the front used almost exclusively French or British artillery and aircraft.

Calling attention to these facts does not remotely intimate that the Congress or the President have any thought of taking part in another war on European soil, but it does show that in 1917 we were not ready to conduct large-scale land or air operations. Relatively, we are not much more ready to do so today than we were then—and we cannot guarantee a long period, free from attack, in which we could prepare.

I have called attention to the fact that "we must have armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against strategic positions and key facilities essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory." And I have said, "We must have the organization and location of those key facilities so that they may be immediately utilized and rapidly expanded to meet all needs without danger of serious interruption by enemy attack."

I repeat that "there is new range and speed to offense."
Therefore, it has become necessary for every American to restudy present defense against the possibilities of present offense against us.

Careful examination of the most imperative present needs leads me to recommend the appropriation at this session of the Congress, with as great speed as possible, of approximately $525,000,000, of which sum approximately $210,000,000 would be actually spent from the Treasury before the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940.

The survey indicates that of this sum approximately $450,-000,000 should be allocated for new needs of the Army, $65,000,000 for new needs of the Navy, and $10,000,000 for training of civilian air pilots.

The several items will be submitted to the appropriate committees of the Congress by the departments concerned, and I need, therefore, touch only on the major divisions of the total.

In the case of the Army, information from other nations leads us to believe that there must be a complete revision of our estimates for aircraft. The Baker board report of a few years ago is completely out of date. No responsible officer advocates building our air forces up to the total either of planes on hand or of productive capacity equal to the forces of certain other nations. We are thinking in the terms of necessary defenses and the conclusion is inevitable that our existing forces are so utterly inadequate that they must be immediately strengthened.

It is proposed that $300,000,000 be appropriated for the purchase of several types of airplanes for the Army. This should provide a minimum increase of 3,000 planes, but it is hoped that orders placed on such a large scale will materially reduce the unit cost and actually provide many more planes.

Military aviation is increasing today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. Increased range, increased speed, increased capacity of airplanes abroad have changed our requirements for defensive aviation. The additional planes recommended will considerably strengthen the air defenses of the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Canal Zone. If an appropriation bill can be quickly enacted, I suggest that $50,000,000 of the $300,000,000 for airplanes be made immediately available in order to correct the present lag in aircraft production due to idle plants.

Of the balance of approximately $150,000,000 requested for the Army, I suggest an appropriation of $110,000,000 to provide "critical items" of equipment which would be needed immediately in time of emergency, and which cannot be obtained from any source within the time and quantity desired—matériel such as antialrcraft artillery, semiautomatic rifles, antitank guns, tanks, light and heavy artillery, ammunition, and gas masks. Such purchases would go far to equip existing units of the regular Army and the National Guard.

I suggest approximately $32,000,000 for "educational orders" for the Army—in other words, to enable industry to prepare for quantity production in an emergency, of those military items which are noncommercial in character and are so difficult of manufacture as to constitute what is known as "bottle necks" in the problem of procurement.

The balance should be used, I believe, for improving and strengthening the seacoast defenses of Panama, Hawaii, and the continental United States, including the construction of a highway outside the limits of the Panama Canal Zone, important to the defense of the Zone.

The estimated appropriation of $65,000,000 for the Navy should be divided into (a) $44,000,000 for the creation or strengthening of Navy bases in both oceans in general agreement with the report of the special board which has already been submitted to the Congress, (b) about $21,000,000 for additional Navy airplanes and air-material tests.

Finally national defense calls for the annual training of additional air pilots. This training should be primarily directed to the essential qualifications for civilian flying. In cooperation with educational institutions it is believed that the expenditure of $10,000,000 a year will give primary training to approximately 20,000 citizens.

In the above recommendations for appropriations, totaling $525,000,000, I have omitted reference to a definite need, which, however, relates to the implementing of existing defenses for the Panama Canal. The security of the Canal is of the utmost importance. The peace garrison now there is inadequate to defend this vital link. This deficiency cannot be corrected with existing forces without seriously jeopardizing the general defense by stripping the continental United States of harbor defense and antiaircraft personnel. The permanent garrison in the Canal Zone should be increased to provide the minimum personnel required to man the anti-aircraft and seacoast armament provided for the defense of the Canal. Such personnel cannot be increased until additional housing facilities are provided; and in the meantime additional personnel must be trained. I recommend, therefore, an appropriation of $27,000,000 to provide an adequate peace garrison for the Canal Zone and to house it adequately. Five million dollars of this sum should be made available immediately in order that work on necessary construction can be initiated.

All of the above constitutes a well-rounded program, considered by me, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and by my advisers, to be a minimum program for the necessities of defense. Every American is aware of the peaceful intentions of the Government and of the people. Every American knows that we have no thought of aggression; no desire for further territory.

Nevertheless, as the Executive head of the Government, I am compelled to look facts in the face. We have a splendid asset in the quality of our manhood. But without modern weapons and without adequate training the men, however splendid the type, would be hopelessly handicapped if we were attacked.

The young men of this Nation should not be compelled to take the field with antiquated weapons. It would be economically unsound to provide in time of peace for all the modern equipment needed in a war emergency. But it would be nationally unsound not to provide the critical items of equipment which might be needed for immediate use, and not to provide for facilities for mass production in the event of war.

Devoid of all hysteria, this program is but the minimum of requirements.

I trust, therefore, that the Congress will quickly act on this emergency program for the strengthening of the defense of the United States.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 12, 1939.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks by including two resolutions adopted by the Committee on Appropriations concerning the death of our late colleagues, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Boylan, and the gentleman from New York, Mr. Bacon.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

WORK RELIEF AND RELIEF

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 83, making an additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 83, with Mr. WARREN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, on the eve of America's entry into the World War, insuring victory for the Allies, a panic seized a large part of the French people and three entire army corps left the front-line trenches and retreated on Paris. Today in America's war against the depression, with victory already in sight, there are those who would sound a retreat. Already within reach of the goal our comrades falter. They are unwilling to go the last mile. They are unwilling to keep men moving up into the front-line jobs. There is general agreement that the campaign for employment is succeeding. All authorities report a general upturn in business on every front, But just at this critical period the committee brings in a proposal to dismiss from employment more than a million workmen today earning their daily bread in productive employment.

In order to see the situation a little more clearly, let us clear away some of the underbrush about this proposition. The resolution contains a number of minor provisions.

There is practically no difference of opinion on either side of the aisle on any of these items. I think there is general concurrence on the part of the committee and the House on both sides of the aisle in the entire resolution with the one exception of the amount of the appropriation. The appropriation of $875,000,000 recommended by the Budget will keep 3,081,300 men at work. The appropriation of $725,000,000 recommended by the committee will employ only 1,930,000. In other words, the committee proposes to throw out of employment, in the dead of winter, 1,151,300 men.

So, Mr. Chairman, the whole question before the House this afternoon is the hiring or firing of these 1,151,300 men. That is the sole issue presented by this resolution. But it is a more important question than may appear at first blush. These 1,151,300 men are breadwinners. They are heads of families. When you deprive them of work you deprive their dependent families of support.

The P. W. A. estimates each family to average 3½ persons. That is a conservative estimate, as the traditional military ratio is five to a family. But even at the minimum estimate, the number of dependents affected by this reduction would aggregate 4,026,550 persons. At the Army ratio it will affect 5,726,500 people. But it goes further than that. The business created and supported by the needs of this vast number of people, their trade with merchants, artisans, and professional men, gives employment to numerous other workers who, without this business, will also be thrown out of emplcyment. So, on a conservative estimate, the proposition of the committee here is to take away the subsistence of from six to eight million people. It is not necessary to draw on the imagination to understand what that would mean to the people themselves or to the business interests of the country.

The committee gives no tenable reason for its ruthless recommendation except a desire to save money. In fact there is no reason. Every witness called by the committee demonstrated the need for increased rather than decreased employment. Every item of evidence submitted to the committee supported the President's recommendation of $875,000,000. You can read the hearings through from the first page to the last and there is not one line or a single statement that justifies a decrease of a dollar in the appropriation or the reduction of a job in the employment program. The proposal to reduce the amount is so unwarranted, so at variance with the evidence, so unjustified by the statistics submitted in the hearings, that it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the committee met with the preconceived determination to cut the amount recommended by the Budget. No matter what amount had been recommended, the committee would have cut it. If the request had been for $500,000,000 the committee would have cut it. If the estimate had been for $200,000,000 they would have cut it. Apparently it is a purely arbitrary cut unsupported by any fact or formula. And certainly it is not supported by the American people.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. My time is very limited. I hope the gentleman will excuse me. We have had the recommendation of the committee. Now, let us examine the recommendation of the country at large. Let us take up the recommendation of organized agriculture on this subject. Let us consult the wishes of organized labor on this proposed reduction. Let us consider the recommendation of the organized veterans of the United States, the opinion of the clergy, of recognized economists, businessmen, and the Conference of Mayors of the United States. With astonishing unanimity each of these great groups, in direct and intimate touch with business, labor, and relief in every section of the country, is asking a continuation of the W. P. A. program and a continuation or increase in W. P. A. activity.

The American Farm Bureau Federation in its annual meeting at New Orleans, which adjourned just a week or two ago, adopted this resolution:

To the President of the United States and the Members of the Seventy-sixth Congress: Pursuant to resolutions adopted by the House of voting delegates at the twentieth annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation herewith calls to the attention of the President of the United States and the Members of the Seventy-sixth Congress the following matters, which are considered by the organization to be of outstanding importance to the Nation: We recommend: * * *.

That the Federal Government continue to provide employment for those who cannot secure employment in private industry.

We are convinced that the Federal Government must continue we are convinced that the rederal Government must continue to supply the bulk of relief funds, for the burden is beyond the present capacity of the local political divisions to handle; and we recognize the continued necessity that the Government provide capital investment funds until such time as private funds are again attracted into productive enterprise.

There is the statement of a great national agricultural organization speaking for the farmers of the country. Organized labor takes the same view.

Out of a number of official statements I will read one or two representative declarations:

Any reduction in the proposed allotment of funds for W. P. would seriously handicap the functioning of W. P. A. and would probably mean an even greater number of dismissals of both project and administrative employees.

W. P. A. has provided relief to the people of our industry as well as to millions in other industries during a period of extreme want and necessity. We urge an appropriation for at least $1,000,000,000.

And I must take time to read just one more which I am certain will be of particular interest to the Members of the House. The several Congressmen who have expressed themselves on this question here this afternoon do not have a single child in school. But here is an opinion from the organized teachers of the Nation speaking from first-hand knowledge on this subject of such vital concern to the children under their care:

JANUARY 11, 1938.

PA 218 21 NL CHAIRMAN OF THE HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C .:

American Federation of Teachers, numbering 30,000 affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, urges full appropriation for W. P. A. as recommended by the President.

Mr. Chairman, this is the recommendation of the teachers of the land who come in daily contact with the child problem, who know family conditions, who see children coming to school sometimes without breakfast, and sometimes without shoes. They know that if this reduction is made there will be a good many more without breakfast and without needed clothing and medical care.

The churchmen of the Nation, whose relation to the problem is even more intimate than that of the teachers, have exhibited even a greater interest.

Upon the desk of every Member of Congress are letters from the clergy of the Nation, including practically every denomination and creed. No one is in a position to speak with more knowledge and more authority on this question affecting both the material and the spiritual welfare of the people and the Nation. And they uniformly endorse an increase rather than a reduction of the amount provided in this bill. In this connection I must also include in the RECORD the opinion of the accredited economists of the Nation, as follows:

DEAR PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: We, the undersigned economists, are addressing ourselves to you in order to express our opinions on a national problem of greatest importance which falls within our sphere of professional competence.

Newspaper reports, which have not been denied, indicate that the Newspaper Administration its planning to out its rolls by a Works Progress Administration is planning to cut its rolls by a Works Progress Administration is planning to cut its rolls by a third during the next 2 or 3 months. This action, we understand, is contemplated in order to stretch the present relief appropriation and to lay the ground for a greatly reduced deficiency appropriation next spring. Such a policy would involve throwing some million breadwinners and their families into destitution during the severe winter months. It would involve a reduction of more than $50,000,000 per month in direct wage payments in addition to some $30,000,000 in related expenditures. Such a cut in consumer purchasing power would, we believe, constitute a severe threat to the continuance of the present economic recovery, and might even cause a serious set-back in business activity.

The rapid upsurge in business during the last 6 months has been a source of encouragement to those who believe that the severity of swings in business activity need not be accepted fatalistically but can be successfully counteracted by wise social action. Thanks to the vigorous action taken last spring by the Federal Government under your leadership, the recession of 1937 was arrested; and the curve of business and employment turned upward. The expansion of the spending program was the chief governmental weapon used in fighting the recession and stimulating the recovery. Further-more during these 6 months the major channel for the disbursement of new purchasing power has been the Works Progress Administration, and we believe that the Works Progress Administration should continue to perform this function until private industry clearly demonstrates its capacity to absorb all those released from

We conclude, Mr. President, that the curtailment of the Works Progress Administration at the present time would be particularly ill-timed from an economic as well as from a humanitarian viewpoint, and we strongly urge that the contemplated policy of curtailment be abandoned.

Of the 69 signers of the statement, 13 are members of the faculty of Harvard, 7 are from Yale, 7 from Columbia, 6 from Northwestern, 6 from Brooklyn College, 5 from Mount Holyoke, and 4 from Tufts. Among the other institutions represented are Brown, Williams, Amherst, Stanford, University of Wisconsin, University of Illinois, University of Chicago, Cornell, New York University, University of Minnesota, and Princeton.

On the other hand, there is not an economist from any college or university in the United States who has endorsed this unwarranted, unscientific, and arbitrary reduction in the amount recommended by the President.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. Did the gentleman have some evidence before his committee that all of those persons certified as being eligible for W. P. A. were not on the W. P. A. at the present time?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad the gentleman calls attention to the fact that even with the present employment there are still over 500,000 who have been certified to W. P. A. but for whom W. P. A. is unable to provide work of any kind. They are eligible, they have been on the waiting list for months, but even with the current appropriation they cannot be provided for. And in addition, there are twice as many eligible awaiting certification.

The statement was made on the floor here a few minutes ago that P. W. A. would provide a million and a half jobs. Of course, the P. W. A. program was taken into consideration when these figures were tabulated. Furthermore, it should not be overlooked that we made these estimates on the assumption that the present acceleration in business and industry would continue. If such a reduction as is here proposed, or any other untoward condition, interferes with recovery, it will require more than a billion dollars to carry the program through to June 30 instead of $875,000,000.

Mr. TERRY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I wish I could yield to the gentleman, but I have only a minute or two remaining.

Mr. Chairman, the businessmen of the country are also opposed to this reduction. Out of the $875,000,000 recommended in the Budget, $750,000,000 is paid out in wages which flow directly into the channels of trade. If you withdraw from the retail business of the country that enormous amount, it affects the retail merchant, it affects the jobber, the wholesaler, the factory-it shakes the entire fabric of American commerce and business. Take a plebiscite of your home-town merchants and get their recommendation on the wisdom of the Nation's investment in W. P. A.

But, Mr. Chairman, there is no one more entitled to pass on this question or better qualified to understand it than the ex-service men and their organizations. Here is a communication which speaks for itself:

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN CANNON: I am enclosing a copy of the detailed objectives of the V. F. W. and call your particular attention to the points checked with red pencil.

Legislative Representative.

Point 3:

7. Retention of W. P. A. with liberalized eligibility for entry, reentry, and retention of veterans who need such employment.

The organized veterans of the Nation not only endorse the present provisions for W. P. A. but they favor their liberali-

But, Mr. Chairman, the most significant recommendations on this entire question come from the mayors of the United States, representing every city in the United States of over 50,000 population. They express the opinion that disaster will follow any reduction in this appropriation. And who is better qualified to pass on the questions involved in W. P. A.? Is it not rather singular that there is not a single chief executive in any city in any State in the Union who believes that this appropriation ought to be reduced?

Mr. Chairman, if the proposed reduction had any merit, if it was based on any material grounds, if it is justified from any reasonable point of view, surely they could find at least one mayor in the entire United States who would support their contention. Organized agriculture, organized labor, organized veterans, organized business and businessmen, churchmen, economists, the mayors of every large city in the land are of one accord in support of the full amount asked by the Budget. But the Congressman, in his superior wisdom, comes in, and he sees that the child has on its plate both bread and potatoes. "Oh," he says, "you have too much," and the Congressman, by his vote on this resolution, reaches over and takes the potatoes off the plate. It is hard on the child, perhaps, but it helps balance the Budget. Now, that is not melodrama. It is the inevitable result in homes all over the Nation of an affirmative vote on the pending resolution.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am sorry.

And in their argument on balancing the Budget they go back and quote a message of the President of the United States, delivered when the public debt was $21,000,000,000, the most specious argument made in this debate. Why not go back to 1916, when the debt was $1,000,000,000? It would have been just as consistent.

Mr. Chairman, between the time when the debt was $1,000,000,000 in 1916 and the time when the debt was $21.-000,000,000, this country went through a trying ordeal, and the gentleman does not question that debt. Since the time the President of the United States wrote that message the country has gone through another great trial, a depression that brought disaster to more people than the war, and no one will say that the money was not well spent if it saved the American people.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] is to be commended for the clear and logical presentation of the question before us at this time. He enjoys the confidence and the respect of those who have served with him in the House. His position on the present measure deserves the confidence and respect of the country. I admire, as I believe a majority of you admire the courage and conviction he displayed today.

On the 8th of last November a mandate was delivered by the American people. It is encouraging to note the responsiveness of many of the men here to that mandate. By their ballots on November 8, the American people declared that there should be an end to the profligacy, to the extravagance, to the corrupt administration of public affairs, particularly in the administration of relief to the needy. The American people, by their ballots, demanded a reformation of public administration—such a reformation as would recognize honesty and integrity as worth-while virtues upon which we could depend and in which we could take a justifiable pride. The Republican gains in the House came as a result of the demand of the American people for the establishment of a sensible and reasonable administration of national affairs. And every Republican is aware of and alert to that challenge.

The gentleman from Missouri has attempted to say that relief has been free of politics. I call his attention to the fact that the former W. P. A. Administrator, Mr. Hopkins, who has been appointed Secretary of Commerce, appeared before a committee of the Senate yesterday. During the course of his remarks before that committee, he expressed regret for the part which he played as the Administrator of this relief agency in the political affairs of the Nation. There was contrition. There was regret. There was confession. It seems to me that was an acknowledgment that politics had come into the W. P. A., and that the heartaches and the distress of men had been toyed with for political purposes. I am surprised that my friend from Missouri has not sensed the contrition and regret, which I interpreted as genuine, on the part of the former Administrator.

In all the history of this Nation, there has been nothing done by any administration so calculated to destroy public confidence in the integrity of representative government as the vast, and, as yet largely unrevealed, prostitution of public relief funds for political ends by scheming self-seekers intent upon maintaining themselves in power.

Never in all the history of this Nation has there been such a spectacle of human misfortune, want, and misery being made the pawns of political machinations as has been witnessed under the administration of relief funds in the last 4 years.

This political misuse of relief funds shows a cynicism appalling in its utter abandonment of all political decency. It represents corruption of a character too mean and contemptible adequately to be expressed in words. If words could express it, it would be found in the phrase, "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect."

From every State in this Union have come reports of these misuses of relief funds, and it is worse than idle to attempt to gloss over or to hide either the nefarious practices engaged in by unscrupulous politicians or the inexpressibly terrible effects of these practices upon the conscience of the Nation and upon the morale of the unemployed.

In my own State of Pennsylvania—and conditions there were typical of conditions in other States—the extent of the padding of work-relief pay rolls before the elections to gain votes for the New Deal ticket is being demonstrated day by day as the great purge of the W. P. A. rolls proceeds in the Keystone State. It was stated a few days ago in an editorial that the total number to be thrown off work relief within 2 months after the elections is 45,500, and the end is not yet.

The unfortunate unemployed, who have been shocked, disillusioned, and embittered by this action, began to learn their fate on the very day following the elections. The families of those thousands who were handed preelection jobs and extravagant promises by the New Deal politicians are now being callously shoved out into the cold, with their source of income shut off and no employment in sight.

The New Deal politicians needed votes; apparently they believed that a good method of obtaining them was by the wholesale temporary padding of the W. P. A. rolls just before the elections. The unfortunate unemployed represented to these New Deal politicians just so many potential votes. Their usefulness as voters expired when the elections were over. Whether the New Deal ticket won or lost, these unfortunate and helpless people were slated for prompt dismissal. The New Deal politicians knew that, of course, but they cruelly permitted those put on relief to regard their pitiful W. P. A. employment as something more than a temporary rescue from their condition of suffering.

Only a certain amount of money was available for W. P. A. use. The New Deal leaders wanted to put their hands on as much of this money as possible during the campaign instead of spreading it out evenly in the months preceding the next session of the Congress. In this uneconomic but politically expedient scheme these New Deal politicians in my State were given every aid by those in charge of the W. P. A. at Washington. Not only in Pennsylvania but in other States where the beleaguered candidates appealed for Federal ammunition in the form of relief funds, the W. P. A. administrators obliged by loading the rolls, knowing full well that they were making them so top-heavy that post-election cuts would be inevitable.

This W. P. A. money, obtained from taxes wrung from the pockets of all the people and from borrowings which must be repaid by the people, simply became a campaign fund to bolster the New Deal cause in the various States. The misuse of these funds fortunately did not succeed in preventing a return to a better balanced biparty government in this country; but who can measure the human agony, the bitter disappointment, the incalculable damage to the moral fiber of the hundreds of thousands of citizens and their millions of dependents by this supercynical and inexpressibly corrupt use of public relief funds for political purposes? Who, I say, Mr. Chairman, can measure the damage that has been wrought upon the lives of these people, upon their respect for the integrity of their Government, upon the confidence of the taxpayers in the governmental structure itself, by these nefarious and corrupt practices?

What an incredibly scandalous situation, Mr. Chairman. Here these relief funds, voted by the Congress for the express purpose of alleviating in some measure the distress of worthy unemployed citizens, were squandered by the milions in an effort to buy the elections. And now this Congress is faced, if you please, with the cold and ruthless threat that unless we appropriate $875,000,000 the W. P. A. activities will be closed down; the unemployed will be abandoned to their misery; men, women, and children will be permitted to starve; and the grave unrest which constitutes a momentous threat to the very existence of this Nation will be precipitated upon us because of this callous, corrupt, and contemptible misuse of relief funds for political purposes.

It is all well and good, Mr. Chairman, that after his interference in the political affairs of the different States the W. P. A. Administrator, Harry Hopkins, should be promoted to the Cabinet post of Secretary in the Department of Commerce, where his large experience in private business before he came to Government service so eminently fits him to administer the affairs of that Department. And, of course, this promotion to the Cabinet was not by any chance intended to take Mr. Hopkins out of the line of fire in the future investigations of the W. P. A.

It is all well and good, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Aubrey Williams is taken out of W. P. A. and put over into the National Youth Administration, where his long and distinguished military experience and his outstanding tactical abilities can be utilized in the training of 20,000 youthful aviators in the schools and colleges every year. Again I would be the last to suggest that the purpose of this promotion—if such it can be called—was to remove Mr. Williams from the line of fire.

Regardless of the contempt demonstrated by high officials of the Government for the intelligence of the electorate, it still remains a fact that this relief problem is one of the fundamental difficulties facing this Nation. Bound up in it is the very welfare of our country itself. Involved in this question of relief is the future and the safety of our constitutional Republic. Prevention of suffering, starvation, agony, and death is the first call upon every human conscience, in Government and out.

If corruption, political manipulations, favoritism, and partisanship are permitted to continue in relief, the results will be an undermining of free government and an abridgement of personal liberties that can eventuate only in the collapse of our constitutional Government as we know it. It would open the way for the most rapid inroads by communism, on the one hand, or fascism on the other.

No more fertile field for the planting of these alien philosophies could possibly be found that in the ranks of those who, through no fault of their own, are unable to find private employment, and who have been thus cynically made the temporary and helpless pawns of bureaucrats motivated by lust for political power. It is impossible, Mr. Chairman, to conceive of any condition that could be more dangerous to the perpetuity of free government and to the peace and welfare of this Nation than that which has been produced by the cruel and wanton betrayal of these unemployed citizens. When great numbers of the people are forced to abandon their respect for government, their belief in its integrity, and their faith in the humanity of their fellow men, they immediately become prey to the persuasions of the most desperate enemies of constitutional government.

Can they be blamed? Where are they to turn? Where are they to fix their faith, when they are compelled to the conclusion that their Government is false to its trust, that their misfortunes and their privations represent to those in power merely a means of subjecting them to a political servitude? Such conditions would well-nigh shatter the faith of a

This question of relief must be approached wholly from the standpoint of maintaining our unemployed citizens and their dependents in decency and self-respect as a temporary measure until we can bring about those conditions under which they can find work by which to support themselves through their own efforts. Any other approach to this question is utterly unworthy of us as Members of Congress; it is unworthy of any administration; it is unworthy of the American people themselves, and it will not be tolerated.

There is no single problem facing this Nation today fraught with greater danger, if it is improperly handled, than the relief problem. We must give our best and most unselfish thought and effort to placing the administration of relief beyond the clutches of those who are contemptible enough, unpatriotic enough, dishonest enough, to pervert the purposes of relief to personal political ends. We must make a basic reexamination of the whole problem of relief. We must keep in mind that these Federal funds do not belong to any Federal official or any group of officials. They are the property of the whole country, and they should be distributed with most scrupulous care to make certain that the geographical distribution is as equitable, considering varying local conditions, as it can possibly be made.

I have a few figures which I believe will prove significant. I wonder why it is that in the election year 1934 relief expenditures were increased 20.4 percent, while in the nonelection year 1935 relief expenditures were decreased 27.9 percent. In the election year 1936-mark you, business was going then-relief expenditures were increased 44.3 percent, and in the nonelection year 1937 they were decreased 24.9 percent. Is that just a coincidence, or does it mark a very distinct effort upon the part of those charged with the relief of human need to use the agencies and the funds for political purposes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I am not yielding. I call attention now to a few States where some rather significant figures can be found-increases, for instance, during the last election period. These increases were notable in several States, and I call attention to a few of them. The five first States in the order of actual increases in W. P. A. relief workers were the following: Ohio, 176,899; Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and then comes the State of my distinguished colleague, for whom I express my deep regard and affection. the State of Missouri. There we have an increase of 60.900. Of course, that may have no significance whatever to my friend. To some of us it means much.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Ohio has been more or less chagrined at the fact that our State marks the greatest increase of any State in the Union in the period between January and November. There is no reason in the world why Ohio should be in that position, because it is a big agricultural State as well as a manufacturing State, and the only reason that can be given is that at that time we had a fierce contest for United States Senator and for Governor, and, in spite of all this increase and all of the money, Ohio went overwhelmingly Republican.

Mr. DITTER. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. May I say to the distinguished gentleman, of course he understands that I cast no aspersions on the State of Ohio.

Unfortunately, Ohio was selected because of the heavy fight that was going on in that State.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I rejoin by saying there is no economic reason why Ohio should be in the forefront in this controversy.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DITTER. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. I saw a statement published awhile ago showing the increase in W. P. A. activities in various parts of the country, and I was very much struck with the fact that the increases were very small in the solid South. That was no doubt on the theory that there was no use in giving bait to fish that were already in the boat. [Laughter.]

Mr. DITTER. If the gentleman would care to have them. I would like to give a few figures on the situation in the South. Mr. KNUTSON. I would be delighted to hear them.

Mr. DITTER. For instance, it is interesting to note how much money per capita went to certain of the cities. It is generally recognized that the need is greater in the industrial centers, although I am inclined to think that in a great many instances the agricultural sections are in just as great need. Nevertheless, the cities are taken as the standard-as an index.

Look at the figures compiled by the community chests and civic organizations of the per capita distribution of Federal funds among certain cities. These funds include W. P. A., Civilian Conservation Corps, and National Youth Administration. They represent the annual funds on the basis of total population allotted by the three Federal agencies in each of these cities in the calendar year 1936, an election year:

Greensboro, N. C., received the paltry sum of $6.74. The solid South. Greenville, S. C., $7.95. Still in the solid South. Galveston, $8.80. Still down South. Then I could give you Richmond and a few more. Let us jump to the cities in the North. Let us jump to those places where contests were had. Let us jump to those places where the Republicans could give battle. Indianapolis, $22.09. Minneapolis, $23.65. Kansas City, $24.98. St. Paul, $30.97.

Mr. KNUTSON. Evidently the expenditures were based upon the necessity for extensive campaigns.

Mr. DITTER. It will be noted that the cities in the safely solid Democratic South received the least funds, while the cities in the North, particularly in questionable political territory, received the greatest allotments. There may be some rhyme or reason in these allocations. There may be some simple explanation of why some cities of political significance in the North got nearly five times as much as some of the cities in the South, but it would take a New Dealer to adduce either rhyme or reason for this condition of affairs.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I only have a very limited time at my command.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield on the Philadelphia situation?

Mr. DITTER. I have been very generous, I think, in the way I have yielded. I must go on.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman refuses to yield further. Mr. DITTER. The immorality of this thing is a matter that is acknowledged by most everybody. I can hardly imagine anyone who, having read the Sheppard report. would be bold enough to try to defend these policies.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. DITTER. So that in spite of what the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon] may have said as to the innocency, the sublime innocency, of the W. P. A., we still contend that the evidence is irrefutable that relief and politics have been mixed together, and that political purposes were the dominant purposes of those in charge of relief. But I want to think about the inefficiency of the Administration. The gentleman from Missouri asks why the figure which he advocates has been reduced.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I cannot yield at this time.

I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that Colonel Harrington, who appeared before the committee, admitted that there had been no case study made of any of these W. P. A. beneficiaries in years. The newspapers of Philadelphia carried an article a few days ago that Pennsylvania administrators admitted that in the last 3 years no case study had been made of any of those on relief—on the W. P. A. rolls. The status may have changed, but they continue on W. P. A.

Now, if the gentleman from Missouri is advocating a W. P. A. career life, if that is his purpose, then let us know it. If he means to take W. P. A. people and fashion them into career services, then that should be the plea of the gentleman as he comes here seeking increased appropriations. If, on the other hand, he stands by the President—and I stand by the President now—if he stands by the President when the President declared that he intended to balance the Budget, as he brought us his message on January 5, then I feel that the gentleman from Missouri should join with those who are trying to help the President carry out his professed program.

We—and I speak now for my own Republican group—we claim today that neither the Democratic Party nor the President of the United States has a monopoly on either sympathy or concern for the needy and the distressed. We claim we are just as mindful of the need of the American people as either the Democratic group, who is trying to increase this appropriation, or the professions that have been made by the President from time to time. We know that we are dealing with human needs. We are just as conscious of the human needs as is the President. We are also mindful, however, that those human needs must be met with practical means, means within the limitations which are ours. We claim that a practical sympathy coupled with a practical ministry will be most effective.

The ranks on this side of the aisle have been augmented. We have made pledges to the American people. God willing, we intend to live up to those pledges. We have promised that adequate relief for the needy would be continued. We stand by that promise as we declare: Millions for relief, but not one cent for political tribute. The Republican Party stands today where it has always stood, that the first obligation of the administration is a recovery program, a program providing for the restoration of jobs in private industry. We stand by that declaration. And we pledge today to the American people what every man on this side of the aisle pledged during the campaign—every man who was reelected or who unseated a Democrat—that sane, sensible, honest standards of government will be our constant purpose. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has again expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Short].

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, the only excuse offered by this administration for this unparalled policy of continued spending is that it promotes prosperity, revives business, and provides more jobs. The facts and the record will not bear out this contention. If the orgy of spending we have witnessed during the past 6 years would push up the national income, promote prosperity, and end unemployment, then every single American citizen today should have a job, should be truly and really enjoying the abundant life, and there should be no national debt, because the indisputable fact is, the undeniable truth is, that more money has been spent by the New Deal since March 4, 1933, than was spent by all our administrations, all the Congresses and Presidents of the United States during the first 143 years of our history from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson, or from the adoption of the Constitution down to the outbreak of the World War.

Men come on this floor and in the guise of philanthropy and under the plea of humanitarianism propose to help the American people by spending their own money, borrowed money which they do not have, by mortgaging not only their own future but that of their children and their children's children. Oh, I was amazed to hear my good friend, my distinguished and able colleague from Missouri [My. Cannon], say that there has been no politics in W. P. A. My God, Clarence, where have you been in the past 6 years? [Laughter and applause.]

During the first part of last October, Harry Hopkins, who has never done anything but get rid of other people's money, stopped in St. Louis—and how ingenious and resourceful he is in devising new ways and methods of disposing of it. Great liberals! These new dealers are liberal with the other guy's dough [applause], but even an Ozark hillbilly where I reside has enough hard common sense to know that Santa Claus really does not come down the chimney the night before Christmas, that all the Easter eggs are not laid by bunny rabbits, that no government can ever give to its people anything it does not take from them, and that eventually they must foot the bill. He who dances must pay the fiddler. As sure as night follows day, your chickens are coming home to roost. A lot of them came home on the 8th of last November. Now we have more chickens than we have roosts. [Laughter.]

Mr. Hopkins, stopping in St. Louis on his way to Fayetteville to receive an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Arkansas, a State where he had been Santa Claus so long, was interviewed by the press writers in St. Louis and was asked what he thought of Dewey Short. This was just about a month before the last election. He answered with tongue in cheek and a faint smile—as reported by the press—"Dewey Short, who is he? Never heard of him."

They said: "Why, he is the only Republican Member of Congress from Missouri."

"Well," said Hopkins with a broader smile, "he won't be after November 8."

Within 5 days after Mr. Hopkins made that statement out in St. Louis the number of men on W. P. A. pay rolls in Jasper County, the largest county in my district, more than doubled, was increased from approximately 1,800 to 4,600. While Mr. Hopkins may never have heard of Dewey Short, he heard from a lot of hillbillies on November 8, because I was elected by more than double my former majority [applause], receiving Democratic as well as Republican votes and carrying 14 of the 15 counties in my district.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. In just a minute, Jerry. I want you to get this.

I just received a letter without any solicitation on my part, dated Diamond, Mo., January 5, 1939:

DIAMOND, Mo., January 5, 1939.

Dewey: As regards the investigation of relief and politics, I wish to mention that the relief truck which came regularly from Neosho to Diamond and other places in the county did, prior to election, have only Democrat candidates' cards tacked on the relief truck, but no Republican cards. Now these cards were the size you might see tacked on any building or telephone pole—I am merely telling you this that you get the size; at any rate they were large enough that you did not need field glasses to read

I don't know whether this will do you any good, but it is something that ought to be aired and it is a fact, too.

I have here signed affidavits of individuals of Oregon and Howell Counties, Mo.

I, Alfred Andrews, being duly sworn upon my oath, say that I am a Democrat and that until recently I was a W. P. A. worker in Oregon County on a road project and that Clarence Moore was the foreman.

Parenthetically I may say that Oregon County is an overwhelming Democratic County.

Affiant states that shortly before the primary election, 1938, that Clarence Moore informed this affiant that it was necessary for him to vote for Ray Huddleston for candidate for county judge and if he failed to do so he would be laid off.

You will observe, Mr. Chairman, that this is in the Democratic primary. The attempt is made to purge Democrats as well as Republicans.

Affiant states that he informed Clarence Moore that he would not vote for Ray Huddleston and on Saturday, November 5, 1938, this affiant was discharged.

Affiant states that Stevens requested that he join the Young Democratic Club and pay 50 cents a month to such organization. Affiant informed him that he was not financially able to do so. Affiant states that sometime thereafter he was discharged. Recently affiant states that he applied for another job on the W. P. A. and talked with W. L. Shortly prior to the primary, W. L. Stevens, one of the bosses of the W. P. A., made a talk to the W. P. A. workers on the job and told us that if we did not vote for Clark and Billings it meant our job. This talk was made a few minutes after 4 o'clock.

Later one of the workers on the job inquired how I voted and I stated that I voted as I damned pleased.

That is the kind of constituency I represent. [Applause.] And they will not sell their souls for a mess of pottage. They are not easily scared, either. They love their liberty and like their fathers will fight and die for it.

On November 5, 1938, I was discharged and the slip showed it as "unsatisfactory service," although my foreman, Ed Threlkeld, said my work was satisfactory.

Shortly prior to the primary W. L. Stevens, one of the bosses of the W. P. A., made a talk to the W. P. A. workers on the job and told us that if we did not vote for Clark and Billings it meant our job. This talk was made a few minutes after 4 o'clock.

Later one of the workers on the job inquired how I voted and I stated that I voted as I damned pleased.

On November 5, 1938, I was discharged and the slip showed it was for "unsatisfactory service," although my foreman, Ed Threl-keld, said my work was satisfactory.

Mr. SHORT. No politics in relief?

Mr. Chairman, immediately after the adjournment of the last session of the Seventy-fifth Congress the President of the United States got on a 10-Pullman-car air-conditioned special train and by taking circuitous routes went from one coast of this country to the other, through various States, urging the electorate to return only 100-percent "yes" men and rubber stamps to the two Houses of the United States Congress. I am glad to say certain particular Members of Congress and other candidates who received his personal blessings down in Texas, Georgia, South Carolina, Maryland, and elsewhere were left at home because Americans are patriots before partisans. [Applause.]

When he reached California he got on one of these $10,000,-000 cruisers and went out on a fishing trip. We have the "fishingest" President that any country ever had. He fishes for suckers both on land and in the sea. He goes out fishing for votes off the rear end of air-conditioned Pullmans and off the decks of new cruisers escorted by battleships. I do not know how much these periodical fishing expeditions have cost the voters and taxpayers of this Nation, but he went down the Pacific, through the Panama Canal, up the Atlantic, got off down in the southeastern part of our country and personally invaded Georgia and South Carolina in the Democratic primaries, a precedent and practice upon which George Washington, the Father of his Country, frowned as meddlesome interference of the Executive in a congressional election. He urged the voters down there not to return two able and distinguished men to the Senate of the United States. Of course the voters had sense enough to choose their President but not enough to choose their Senators without the providential wisdom of their President.

I do not have to tell you that these new dealers have used relief funds to cut the threats or attempt to cut the throats of life-long Democrats who were fighting the battles of the party of Thomas Jefferson when a lot of these little nitwit new dealers were scarcely dry behind the ears.

Mr. Roosevelt did not want Walter George sent back to the Senate, although Walter George had represented Georgia for 18 years in that body with distinction and honor to both himself and his constituents. He did not want him because WALTER GEORGE had a mind of his own and voted against the court-packing bill. The President goes down in a primary and discharges some of the appointees of that distinguished Senator and uses work-relief funds in an attempt to purge some of the most able and oldest members of his own party. Then he has the unmitigated gall to shake hands with the Senator and, after acknowledging he is a fine gentleman and a great scholar, states, "God bless you, Walter." What he really meant to say was "God -- VOII. Walter." You know what I mean. But Georgia has patriots.

Mr. Chairman, the prime purger did not want "Cotton" ED SMITH sent back from South Carolina because "Cotton" ED SMITH has a mind of his own. For 30 years "Cotton" ED SMITH had represented the people of the great State of South Carolina with distinction and honor to the people of South Carolina, who showed their independent judgment, their unconquerable courage, and their good conscience by sending him back. "Cotton" ED SMITH is one of the best friends that the American farmer has.

Then, to top it off, the President invaded the great free State of Maryland. He did not want MILLARD TYDINGS sent back; MILLARD TYDINGS, who has a marvelous war record, who bared his breast to the bullets of the enemy in defense of his country, who has served heroically the State of Maryland for 12 years in the United States Senate. He wanted to purge MILLARD TYDINGS for the same reason he wanted to purge Walter George and ED SMITH, because Typings could not swallow some of this cockeyed New Deal stuff any more

The President promised the voters of that great State two bridges across Chesapeake Bay. It is a wonder he did not promise them to span the Atlantic or build a bridge to the moon. He said, in effect, "I will build you two bridges across Chesapeake Bay if you will defeat MILLARD TYDINGS and send my protégé to the United States Senate." If that is not an open and unblushing attempt at bribery of the American electorate with the taxpayers' money, then I cannot understand the English language. It is comforting to know the people of Maryland still can distinguish between morality and immorality.

The President in his message to us the other day, his annual message to Congress, said, "I do not regard a penny of this money wasted." Oh, yes?

After wasting millions on the foolish and futile attempt to harness the moonbeams and the tides of the Atlantic Ocean at Passamaquoddy Bay, that has been given up as a useless and foolish expenditure since Maine went Republican and refused to be bought. Not a penny wasted, when millions more of the taxpayers' funds are buried in a ditch down in Florida, a project that has been abandoned, when the people in the south half of Florida did not want the canal to begin with, and when it fills up with sand just as fast as they can dig it out. Millions more thrown to the winds on fantastic schemes of the starry-eyed crystal gazers.

What is this W. P. A. for? Ostensibly for relief, but in reality to be used as a slush fund. That is what I branded the $4,880,000,000 appropriation. That is why I voted against it, and against the other billions since appropriated. I shall not furnish my enemy with a weapon to destroy me. I voted against them all.

Spending relief money is merely giving the patient "a shot in the arm." It kills the pain temporarily but does not effect a permanent cure.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. I wish to thank the gentleman from New York for his unbounded generosity.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. I yield to my distinguished friend from Mis-

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Does the gentleman know that in my district the W. P. A. workers had on the backs of their automobiles while on the job signs of my opponent in the primary, and does the gentleman know that the foremen held meetings on the job asking the W. P. A. workers to beat me, and as a result, I came back here with a margin of only 17,000 votes? [Applause.]

Mr. SHORT. I wish to congratulate the gentleman and say that although he is a Democrat, he has shown independent judgment here on the floor, and was returned to Congress by Republicans as well as by Democrats in his district in my State of Missouri.

None of us opposes relief for those who are in destitution and want, but oh, the camouflage screen. Fifty years hence, Mr. Chairman, when history is written with open eyes and without prejudice, when the stark-naked truth is told, in my humble, perhaps useless, but at least honest and conscientious judgment, this whole sad, sordid story of relief will go down as one of the blackest, dirtiest, most dastardly, diabolical, and despicable chapters in American history.

You do not help people by robbing them of their initiative and their self-respect. What future is there for any man on W. P. A. at starvation wages? I know the fathers and mothers in my district do not want to see their boys and girls, their sons and daughters, work their way through high school and college and, after receiving their diplomas, have nothing to look forward to but to go upon the relief rolls of the Nation; yet that is about the highest ambition any young man or woman in this country can have under this New Deal, simply to depend upon political pull through temporary political expediency to go on W. P. A. or relief at starvation wages.

What are you going to do about it? You will never have economic recovery in this country, you will never have the people at peace and in contentment, until you free private business from the present well-founded and justifiable fears it has. If we would repeal outright the tax upon undistributed profits and upon capital gains, if we would cease this excessive governmental regulation from a centralized bureaucracy, if we would stop Government subsidized competition with private industry and repeal the reciprocal trade agreements, if we would take a firm position against lawlessness, the C. I. O. sit-down strikes, and guarantee every American citizen the right to hold his property and never lose it without due process of law, if we would amend the one-sided Wagner Act and curb the powers of the N. L. R. B., if we would cut governmental expenditures to the bone in order to relieve the over-burdened American taxpayer, if we would free the farmer of compulsory crop control, if we would give the managers of big business and of little business to understand that they could make a reasonable and legitimate profit and run their own businesses in their own way, then you would see the wheels of industry start to turn, you would see smoke come out of the chimneys in the industrial centers of America, you would see this vast army of unemployed who have been forced through no fault of their own upon the relief rolls and the W. P. A. rolls at subsistence and starvation wages go back to good jobs at decent wages in private industry, and you would see private capital, billions upon billions of it, come out of hiding and go back once more into an open, free, and flowing investment market. Not until that day can we ever hope to have an end to unemployment, a restoration of the American spirit, and economic recovery in this country. [Applause.]

I am not going to vote to give any man in the White House, be he Republican, Democrat, or new dealer, blank checks in the huge sums a supine and subservient Congress in the past few years has turned over to our Chief Executive, sums which he can spend at any time in any manner he sees fit. "This," as often I have said, "is more power than any good man should want and certainly is more power than any bad man should have." I trust the membership of this House will rise up on its hind legs and exercise its constitutional prerogatives and show some guts as well as intelligence in voting down this proposition. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Tarver].

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I hope to approach the discussion of the particular phase of this question to which I desire to call your attention without any suggestion of political partisanship. I am not particularly impressed by any effort to use the issue which is here pending and which affects so vitally so many millions of American people for political advantage. I feel that the membership of the House is not particularly impressed by the political sharpshooting in connection with this debate.

In that particular I wish to commend the example set by the chairman of this subcommittee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum], who in the address he delivered to you this morning made no statement which can possibly be construed as of a political nature. He adhered closely to the facts as he understood the facts, making reference to some which may not be considered in some quarters to reflect favorably upon the incumbent administration, but at the same time not endeavoring to do otherwise than bring to you the real information which you ought to have in endeavoring to pass upon this question, without any suggestion of political partisanship.

On Tuesday morning of this week I inserted in the Record, with the permission of the House, certain statistics with regard to the minimum and maximum wage rates applicable in the different States of the United States and the District of Columbia to the various classes of W. P. A. labor. I desire to make reference in a brief way to some of the facts disclosed by the table which was then inserted.

I feel that I am bringing to your attention now a matter which should have the careful thought of every Member of the House, and I earnestly request that you may give your attention not only to what I say but to the statistics to which I have made reference, appearing on page 167 of the Record.

If you will examine these statistics, you will find that in the class of unskilled labor the rates of pay by the Works Progress Administration vary from a low of 18 cents per hour in the State of Tennessee to a high of $1.025 per hour in the State of Illinois. In other words, for the performance of the same character of labor by the same type of laborer in the two States mentioned, the one laboring in Tennessee receives for his work only 18 cents per hour, whereas the one in Illinois may be paid, and in some instances has been paid, as high as $1.025 per hour.

Passing to the pay of intermediate laborers, it is observed that this varies from a low of 23 cents per hour in Tennessee to a high of $1.57 per hour in New York City.

The pay of skilled laborers varies from a low of 31 cents per hour in Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia to a high of $2.25 per hour in the State of New Jersey.

You will understand that in mentioning the maximums in New Jersey and in Illinois and in New York City I am not stating that all labor of the type described receives that maximum wage, but I am saying that in accordance with these statistics furnished me by the Works Progress Administration itself, some laborers of the types mentioned receive these maximums in the various areas to which I have made reference.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TARVER. Not for the moment; I will yield later.

Under the head of professional and technical labor it is observed that the minimum hourly wage is 34 cents per hour in the States of Alabama, Kentucky, and Virginia, and ranges upward to a maximum—listen to this, if you please—of $3.03 per hour in the State of Pennsylvania.

Is it conceivable, leaving aside the question of discrimination as between men who are of similar abilities and who are similarly situated in a financial way, that the Government of the United States, as a matter of public grace, in endeavoring to furnish a man who is unemployed with a means of livelihood for himself and his family, should pay for his services anywhere in this country $3.03 per hour which, for an 8-hour day, would amount to in excess of $24 per day?

These are simple illustrations of the manifold injustices which appear in the statistical table I have had inserted in the Record. It is a situation which ought to be corrected. I have an idea as to how it ought to be corrected which I expect to explain later on in my remarks, but I want to say here that I am not wedded to that idea and if you have or are able to study out, pending the consideration of this bill, a better method by which these manifest injustices may be corrected, I shall as earnestly support your plan as I would like for you to do mine if you are unable to conceive of a better one.

These discriminations in pay of W. P. A. employes are sought to be justified upon a variety of different grounds. If they may be justified at all it would have to be, in my judgment, upon the basis of a difference in the cost of living in the various localities where the wage rates to which I have made reference are in effect, but in that connection I call your attention to some information I have received from Dr. Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, resulting from a survey made by the Works Progress Administration itself of living costs in 31 cities widely scattered throughout the United States. I hope to be able to obtain permission to insert this information, which is comparatively brief, in the Record.

I call your attention to the fact that in table 1, the estimated cost of living for a four-person manual-worker family, at maintenance level, as defined by the Works Progress Administration, in the city of Atlanta, Ga., is $1,300.68 per annum and that in the city of New York the amount is $1,385.94 per annum, only slightly larger than the estimated cost of living of the same family in the city of Atlanta, and yet in the city of New York, as you will observe from the table to which I have made reference and which has been inserted in the RECORD, the maximum wage pay for unskilled labor is 93 cents per hour, the minimum wage pay for the same type of labor is 461/2 cents per hour, whereas in the State of Georgia the maximum pay for unskilled labor is 30 cents per hour and the minimum is 20 cents per hour. In other words, in the city of New York, which has substantially the same living costs as has the city of Atlanta, the unskilled W. P. A. laborer may receive more than three times as much for performing the same character of work as he may be paid in the city of Atlanta. I submit that any system which permits of that degree of discrimination is unfair and that it ought to be corrected by appropriate legislation.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I fully recognize the injustice and the discrimination in wages paid by W. P. A. as between southern labor and northern labor, but the gentleman from Georgia will recall that when we had before the House at the last session the wage and hour bill, the advocates of that measure and also the administration, including the President, took the position there should be no discrimination in minimum wages among laboring people throughout the entire United States.

Mr. TARVER. I recall that very well. I do not agree with the gentleman that the only discrimination in the matter of these wages is as between Southern and Northern States. If the gentleman will examine the table to which I have repeatedly made reference, he will find discriminations exist as between other States of the country as well as between the States of the South and those of the North and northeastern portions of the country. I believe one result which followed the discussion of the wage and hour bill last year was the insertion on page 4, section 9, of the following language:

SEC. 9. The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects under the appropriations in this title shall be not less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Works Progress Administration: Provided, That if minimum rates of pay for persons employed by private employers in any occupation are established by or pursuant to the authority conferred by any labor-standards act enacted at the third session of the Seventy-fifth Congress, not less than the minimum rates of pay so established shall be paid to persons in similar occupations in the same locality employed on projects under the appropriation in subsection 1 of section 1 of this title.

In other words, the Congress intended by this language, although it may be susceptible through strained construction to some other interpretation, to provide that if at that session of Congress there should be enacted a labor-standards act providing fixed minimum wages applicable in all sections of the country; that the minimum wage of W. P. A. workers doing substantially the same kind of work as other unskilled laborers should not be less than the minimum wage fixed in the Labor Standards Act, and the Works Progress Administration has paid no attention whatever to that requirement, contained in the Work Relief Act enacted last year. If it had, it would have been impossible for it to have paid in the gentleman's State of Tennessee as low as 18 cents per hour for unskilled labor.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. Yes.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. What explanation was made of that terrific discrepancy between the wages paid in the South and the North. I mean by the Works Progress Administration. What did they say?

Mr. TARVER. I have never heard the Works Progress Administration undertake to explain it. I asked a member of the Subcommittee on Deficiency Appropriations—I am not a member of that subcommittee—whether or not in the hearings that were had on this pending bill there had been an effort to bring out the facts in regard to these apparently totally unjustified discriminations, and I was advised that no such effort had been made. After receiving that information, I myself communicated with the Works Progress Administration and secured the data which I am undertaking at this time to present to the House in the hope that it may result in the correction of what is undoubtedly a very unfair and unjust situation.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. These excessive high rates per hour must be for some professional writers or professional men. Is not that true?

Mr. TARVER. I think that so far as the technical and professional work which I have referred to is concerned, the gentleman's statement is probably correct. Of course, that could not apply to unskilled laborers. So far as the professional and technical work is concerned, I have never agreed with the idea that because a man who is out of employment is a lawyer, a doctor, or writer he ought to get many times as much per hour as the poor fellow who is a common laborer gets, and who is likewise obliged to appeal to the Government for aid in his effort to make a livelihood for himself and his family. If great need makes it necessary for the Government to intervene in order to protect human beings from suffering, then no greater consideration ought to be accorded to the man who is skilled, whether as a lawyer, a doctor, or writer, than to the man who is a common laborer, when they are compelled to appeal to the Government as an act of grace for aid to keep their families from suffering for the necessities of life. But if that position is not well-founded, then certainly there is no reason why, as within this same class of people, these professional and technical men, some should be paid 34 cents an hour in one State and others $3.03 an hour in another State. It is significant that in the State of Pennsylvania, where this outrageously high rate of $3.03 per hour was in some cases paid, that in 1937 the total W. P. A. expenditures were $214,000,000, approximately, whereas in all of the 11 Southern States combined the W. P. A. expenditures for that year were only $210,000,000.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. Yes.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. The gentleman has performed a very excellent service in fighting discriminations. Does the gentleman think correction of these discriminations can be made by Executive action or that they should be made by congressional action?

Mr. TARVER. I have prepared an amendment which I desire to submit to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union at the proper time, either in this language or in some other language.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. The gentleman believes that the Congress should make the rule?

Mr. TARVER. I think so. The amendment which I have prepared reads as follows:

Provided further, That the appropriations herein made shall not be available unless and until rates of pay of employees of the Works Progress Administration are so fixed by appropriate administrative order as to eliminate differentials in rates of pay exceeding 25 percent of the maximum rates between different States or areas of the same general type in the several States.

I may say that the American Federation of Labor, as evidenced by a letter to me from Mr. William Green, printed on page 6680 of the RECORD of the third session of the Seventyfifth Congress, is opposed, and has announced its unqualified opposition, to any discrimination whatever in wages paid in different sections of the country, as between the same types of workers. I am not of the opinion that the discrimination permitted should be as large as 25 percent. I think that some differentials should be permitted, perhaps to the extent of 10 percent; but in an effort to reach a basis upon which I might hope for the support of men who are not willing to go so far as I would be willing to go, I have written into the amendment the provision that the discrimination shall not be greater than 25 percent, which it seems to me is so eminently just that it ought to attract the support of every fairminded Member of this House.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. I am sure the gentleman wants to make a full and complete statement.

Mr. TARVER. That is correct.

Mr. HEALEY. When the gentleman has given us the rates for skilled and professional labor, he neglects to say that there is a limitation on the hours that those men may work in a month. That is, there is a certain amount of money that those men can earn for the month.

Mr. TARVER. There has been no neglect, may I say, I have simply been prevented, by reason of not being able to say everything I wanted to say at once, in reaching that particular subject matter. As disclosed by the report of the Byrns special committee, filed in the Congress on the 20th of April 1938, these higher-paid employees are permitted to work only long enough to make a certain so-called security wage.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Georgia 5 additional minutes.

Mr. TARVER. A carpenter in the District of Columbia, for example, was permitted to work only 42 hours per month. He was paid $1.75 per hour, for a total so-called security wage of $73.50. It was also disclosed in the report of that committee that in the majority of cases which had been investigated by the committee, these so-called higher type of employees, after earning their security wage, had worked the rest of the month for private employers. That discloses a condition which is essentially unfair and contrary to the purposes of this program.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am interested in and largely in agreement with what the gentleman has been saying. I say that because I have had an experience in my own State. My very good colleague and friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. FADDIS, who represents Greene County, adjacent to Monongalia County that I represent, knows, as I know, that the rate of pay for unskilled, intermediate, and skilled workers is different in West Virginia than it is in Pennsylvania. It is lower in my State than it is in the gentleman's State. I have diligently and energetically, not over a period of months but over a period of years, tried to impress upon the officials of the Works Progress Administration that the climatic and living conditions were identical in the two districts, but I have gotten nowhere. I do want to say that it is a serious problem and one that I compliment the gentleman upon attacking in such a fair manner.

Mr. TARVER. As I endeavored to point out a while ago, the idea that these discriminations are altogether against the South and in favor of the rest of the country is absolutely fallacious. All you need do is examine the table of wages paid, which I have placed in the RECORD, in order to find that there are multitudinous discriminations as between many of the States of the Union lying north of the Mason and Dixon line. This is not a sectional question at all. It is a question of trying to be fair. We are undertaking to pass on the rights of some two or three millions of unfortunate people who have had to call upon the Government in order to live. Disregarding the question of sectional advantage, let us consider these men as needy, unfortunate human beings, who are entitled to the sympathetic consideration of the Congress, and be fair to them, and not say to a man who digs a ditch or builds a road in Georgia, "You shall work for 20 cents an hour, whereas if you do the same work in Illinois, you might get $1.021/2 an hour."

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of the fact that there are about 12,000,000 men out of jobs, and the maximum number taken care of by W. P. A. has been 3,000,000, does not the gentleman think, in view of the limitation of funds, it will be good to base the amount of salary paid on the number of mouths to be fed? Why should a single carpenter get a W. P. A. relief job and get $90 a month, and a man who happens to be a laborer, if he is fortunate enough to get a laborer's job, get only $60 a month, when he may have seven mouths to feed?

Mr. TARVER. The gentleman's statement has many elements of fairness. Certainly the purpose of the program is to prevent human suffering, and not to bring in large wages for one particular citizen or group of citizens, out of proportion to the needs which that citizen or that group of citizens might have, in order to maintain a fair living standard.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TARVER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FADDIS. I am interested in the gentleman's proposed amendment, and I should like to understand for myself and perhaps for other Members, if the gentleman's amendment is going to apply as well between skilled and unskilled as it does between sections?

Mr. TARVER. The amendment which I propose intends only to prevent discrimination as within the four classes of labor: The unskilled, the intermediate, the skilled, the professional and technical. If the gentleman thinks that an amendment of the character which he has just discussed would more properly meet the situation, I would appreciate his taking the trouble to prepare it and offering it upon the floor. As I said a while ago, I am not sure that my amendment reaches the trouble. I am simply sure that we have not here corrected the injustices which ought to be corrected in some way. If this is not the way to correct them, then I call upon you men, if you are interested in fairness and justice, to try to work out some way yourselves and present it to the House upon consideration of the bill, some way which you think will achieve the proper result. [Applause.]

In conclusion, may I say that I think you will find the following statement and tables regarding the costs of living in different cities of great interest and value:

> ESTIMATED INTERCITY DIFFERENCES IN COSTS OF LIVING (Bureau of Labor Statistics)

In March 1935 the Division of Social Research of the Works Progress Administration conducted a study of comparative living costs in 59 cities. The purpose of this study was to determine the cost of a uniform level of living in a large number of places at the same time, and how these costs compared from one city to another. Quantity budgets were constructed by the Works Prog-ress Administration to represent the needs of families at two levels of living—the basic maintenance level and emergency level. An identical budget for each of these levels of living, with certain adjustments in the fuel, ice, and transportation lists to take account of climatic and other local conditions, was used in each of the cities

The Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor cooperated with the Division of Social Research of the Works Progress Administration in obtaining the prices necessary to compute the costs of these budgets. Insofar as possible prices for identical commodities were obtained in each city. Details of this study and a description of the goods and services included in these study and a description of the goods and services included in these budgets can be found in the report of the Works Progress Administration, Intercity Differences in Costs of Living in March 1935, 59 Cities, Research Monograph XII, a copy of which may be obtained from the Division of Social Research, Works Progress Administration, Washington, D. C.

Since March 1935, the date of the Works Progress Administration study, no attempt has been made to price these budgets in order to get an intercity comparison of costs as of a later date. Estimates may be made, however, for the 31 cities covered by both the Works Progress Administration study and the Bureau of Labor Statistics' studies of changes in the cost of goods purchased by wage Statistics' studies of changes in the cost of goods purchased by wage earners and lower-salaried workers.

earners and lower-salaried workers.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics constructs cost of living indexes by pricing quarterly, in each of 32 large cities, a list of the goods most important in the spending of families of wage earners and lower-salaried workers, as shown by the Bureau's study of actual expenditures of these families in 1917-19. In the construction of the index, price changes, noted from period to period, are weighted according to the importance of these items in family spending, as shown by that study. These indexes can be used to show changes from time to time in any one city, but cannot be used to make a according to the importance of these items in family spending, as shown by that study. These indexes can be used to show changes from time to time in any one city, but cannot be used to make a comparison of costs between cities, nor to show actual living costs in any one city at any given time. Further information about these indexes may be found in the pamphlet, Changes in Cost of Living, issued quarterly by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor, Washington, D. C.

By amplying the Bureau of Labor Statistics' indexes of living costs.

By applying the Bureau of Labor Statistics' indexes of living costs, which show changes in costs from time to time, to the Works Progwhich show changes in costs from time to time, to the Works Progress Administration data on intercity differences in costs in March 1935, an approximate intercity comparison of costs as of a current date may be obtained. Since the cost of living indexes of the Bureau of Labor Statistics are based on a budget weighted differently from the budget used in the Works Progress Administration study, when the two sets of figures are combined the resulting estimates of intercity differences in costs are merely approximations. The attached tables show the result of combining the two sets of figures. Table 1 presents estimated cost of living for a 4-person figures. Table 1 presents estimated cost of living for a 4-person manual worker's family at maintenance level, as defined by the Works Progress Administration, in 31 large cities, as of the most recent date for which the Bureau of Labor Statistics has prepared indexes. Table 2 presents these data as indexes on a base of the indexes. Table 2 presents these data as indexes on a base of the cost in Washington, D. C., as of that date as 100. These aggregates and indexes were computed by applying the Bureau of Labor Statictics' data on changes in the cost of each group of the goods purchased by wage earners and lower-salaried workers from March 15, 1935, to the current date to the dollar costs as of March 15, 1935, prepared by the Works Progress Administration in its studies. prepared by the Works Progress Administration, in its study of intercity differences in cost of living.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein certain tables to which I have made reference.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair calls the attention of the gentleman from Georgia to the fact that his request to insert matter will have to be made in the House.

Mr. TARVER. I withdraw that part of my request but renew my request for permission to revise and extend.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 12 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Wigglesworth].

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include certain excerpts from reports of committees appointed by the Senate and the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will have to submit in the House his request to insert matter.

Is there objection to the gentleman's request for permission to revise and extend his remarks?

There was no objection.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I believe there is no Member of the House today who is not wholeheartedly in favor of adequate relief for the needy unemployed. Much as many of us may deplore policies which we believe have contributed to the present unemployment situation, policies which in our judgment have served to hamstring legitimate enterprise throughout the length and breadth of this Nation and thus to deny the opportunity for employment to millions of our fellow citizens who are now unemployed, I am sure that every Member of this House realizes under existing conditions that relief for those in need must go on, and that the Federal Government must assume its full share of responsibility in this connection.

Nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that no fairminded Member of this House can possibly condone or fail to condemn the present system of administration of relief which today stands before the country charged with waste and extravagance, with the scandalous use of money appropriated for the relief of those in need, and with the fostering of subversive propaganda even against the National Government itself.

When the House considered the appropriation for work and work relief for the principal portion of the present fiscal year last June the views of the minority were embodied in some detail in a minority report, from which I quote as follows:

POLITICAL EROSION IN RELIEF

Under the prevailing administrative arrangement the political the providing administrative arrangement the political exploitation of relief workers is a demoralizing national scandal.

The public records, and the personal correspondence of the Members of Congress as well, offer voluminous documentary evidence that in many States, and especially in all the principal cities, the entire relief system is operated, in large measure, as an adjunct of the local New Deal political exemplants.

entire relief system is operated, in large measure, as an adjunct of the local New Deal political organization.

Under threats of dismissal, relief workers have been herded systematically to the polls by precinct captains; compelled to change their party registration; forced to contribute a portion of their subsistence wages to local campaign funds; mobilized in State campaigns for active political solicitation in the interest of whatever local faction at the moment enjoys the approval and support of the Roosevelt administration. Roosevelt administration.

Public scandals relating to such political trafficking in relief have been, from time to time, the subject of extended inquiry in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Ohio, California, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Georgia, Maryland, Louisiana, and Florida.

In several States the public demand for elemental honesty and efficiency in the administration of relief has been carried to the courts. In other States the subject has been a matter of formal legislative inquiry.

formal legislative inquiry.

Mr. Chairman, in my judgment the entire system of administration of relief has got to be revamped, in the interest not only of sound and efficient administration, but in the interest of those in need, that they may have the maximum share of every relief dollar appropriated for their benefit. Personally, I have long believed, and believe now, that a real step in the right direction will have been made if and when we put the entire relief administration on a basis of grants in aid to the several States along well-recognized principles with proper contribution on the part of each State. I hope that we may turn to some such system of administration in the near future.

In the minority report referred to, the fact was emphasized, as it has been today, that the number on the W. P. A. rolls has inevitably shown a very large increase coincident with every national election, regardless of the economic trend at the time. The record before your committee, Mr. Chairman, demonstrates clearly the same situation in respect to the recent election.

When Mr. Hopkins appeared before your committee late last spring in reference to the main appropriation for the present fiscal year, he gave an estimate of 2,600,000 people to be provided for by W. P. A. during July, August, and September, with a possible increase to as many as 3,100,000 in the final 3 months of the calendar year.

What has happened since that time? Between May and November the Federal Reserve index of production increased 21 percent. During the same period, employment increased by about 1,100,000. A further increase in employment is anticipated by Colonel Harrington by the end of the fiscal year of about 1,500,000. The number on direct or general relief in the same period decreased by over 200,000. Transfers from W. P. A. rolls to those of the social security and other Federal assistance rolls amounted to 45,000.

Yet, Mr. Chairman, as has been pointed out today, we find on the rolls of the W. P. A. through this 6 months' period not 2,600,000 for the first 3 months nor 3,100,000 for the last 3 months, but a total of 2,700,000 for June, 2,900,000 for July, 3,000,000 for August, 3,114,000 for September, 3,167,000 for October, and 3,257,000 on the 12th day of November, just after election day, with an immediate and substantial reduction thereafter. Generally speaking, this tendency has applied to all the States of the Union. There are some exceptions. One of those is the State of Kentucky where the peak of employment was reached on August 20, only a few days after the primary fight between Senator BARKLEY and Governor Chandler.

Reference has been made to the so-called Sheppard committee report, the recent report on senatorial campaign expenditures and the use of governmental funds. The report is the unanimous report of a committee headed by the senior Sentor from Texas and the senior Senator from Massachusetts. It is 440 pages long. Others will deal with this report in some detail. I merely emphasize in passing that the report is filled with examples of scandalous use of Federal funds appropriated for those in need; that the committee states that it received hundreds of complaints; that these complaints included: First, irregularities in registration and voting; second, abuse of the Senate franking privilege; third, excessive expenditures and unreported expenditures; fourth, solicitation or assessment of Federal officials and employees either by Federal officials and employees or others for contributions in behalf of a senatorial candidate; fifth, solicitation or assessment of State officials and employees receiving any part of their pay from money appropriated by Congress for such contributions; sixth, intimidation or coercion by Federal officials and employees or others in behalf of a senatorial candidate; seventh, use of funds appropriated by Congress in behalf of a senatorial candidate; and, eighth, promising of employment in private industry in exchange for the promise to vote for certain candidates; that many of the complaints involved the W. P. A.; that the report deals in detail with especially bad conditions in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Pennsylvania; and that the committee makes no less than 16 specific recommendations with a view to eliminating in the future the abuse discovered as a result of its investigation.

Under leave to extend my remarks, I include the recommendations at this point calling particular attention to recommendation No. 1:

RECOMMENDATIONS WITH INTRODUCTORY COMMENT ON WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

I. The committee in the course of its work has been compelled to give much of its attention to charges of undue political activity in connection with the administration and conduct of the Works Progress Administration in certain States. While many of these charges, after investigation, were not sustained, the committee nevertheless finds that there has been in several States, and in many forms, unjustifiable political activity in connection with the work of the Works Progress Administration in such States. The committee believes that funds appropriated by the Congress for the relief of those in need and distress have been in many instances diverted from these high purposes to political ends. The committee condemns this conduct and recommends to the Senate that legislation be prepared to make impossible, so far as legislation can do so, further offenses of this character.

II. The committee recommends legislation prohibiting contributions for any political purpose whatsoever by any person who is the beneficiary of Federal relief funds or who is engaged in the administration of relief laws of the Federal Government. The committee also recommends legislation prohibiting any person engaged in the administration of Federal relief laws from using his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body.

III. The committee recommends that section 19, title 1, of the present Work Relief Act, making it a misdemeanor for any person knowingly, by means of fraud, force, threat, intimidation, boycott, or discrimination on account of race, religion, political affiliations, or membership in a labor organization, to deprive any person of any of the benefits to which he may be entitled under the Work Relief Act, be so amended as to make such violation a felony instead of a misdemeanor.

IV. The committee recommends that all Federal relief acts should be so amended as to provide that all rederal relet acts should be so amended as to provide that any person who knowingly makes, furnishes, or discloses any list of persons receiving benefits under such acts or of persons engaged in the administration thereof, for delivery to a political candidate, committee, campaign manager, or employee thereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor

V. The committee recommends that section 208, title 18, of the United States Code be so amended as to prohibit not only the soliciting and receiving of political contributions by officials, employees, and persons now named in that section but also by anyone acting in their behalf.

VI. The committee recommends that section 211, title 18, of the VI. The committee recommends that section 211, title 18, of the United States Code be so amended as to prohibit political contributions not only by Federal employees to any Senator or Member of or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to Congress but also to any candidate for such offices, or to any person or committee acting with the knowledge and consent and specially in behalf of such Senator or Member of or Delegate to Congress or Resident Commissioner therein, or of any candidate for such office.

VII. The committee recommends that there should be a limitation upon contributions which individuals may make in behalf of

VII. The committee recommends that there should be a limitation upon contributions which individuals may make in behalf of a candidate seeking election to Federal office.

VIII. The committee recommends that section 209, title 18, of the United States Code, relating to solicitation for political contributions in any room or building occupied in the performance of official duties by any person in the employ of the Federal Government be so amended as to include solicitation by letter and telephone, as well as in person.

IX. The committee recommends the adoption by the Senate of a rule requiring all candidates for the Senate to file with the Secre-rule requiring all candidates for the Senate to file with the Secretary of the Senate, in response to appropriate questionnaires, a full and complete statement of receipts and expenditures incurred by or in behalf of such candidate in their campaigns for nomination as well as for election.

X. The committee recommends that section 313 of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to prohibit any contribu-tion by any national bank, any corporation organized by authority of any law of Congress, or by any corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce of the United States, in connection with any primary or general election.

XI. The committee recommends that subsection (c), section 309, of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to require candidates to report all their campaign expenditures, including those exempted in determining the amount they are allowed to spend under the law.

XII. The committee recommends that section 310 of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to prohibit candidates from promising work, employment, money, or other benefits in connection with public relief.

XIII. The committee recommends the enactment of a law regulating more strictly the use of the franking privilege.

XIV. The committee recommends that the Senate take under consideration the question whether or not a contribution for political purposes made either voluntarily or involuntarily by persons in the employ of the Federal Government should be permitted.

XV. The committee recommends that the Senate take under consideration the question of legislation in connection with coalition and group tickets.

XVI. The committee recommends that the Senate adopt a rule authorizing the Vice President to appoint, at the beginning of each Congress, for the duration of said Congress, a Senate committee on investigation of senatorial compaign expenditures, campaign activities, and use of governmental funds for the purpose of influencing primaries and general elections.

Reference has also been made to the report of the socalled Dies committee, the House committee investigating un-American activities and propaganda. Others will also deal with phases of this report in some retail.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, there is startling testimony in this report, beginning at page 31. The testimony indicates the actual fostering of subversive propaganda through the Federal writers project of the Works Progress Administration.

The committee states:

The total number of employees on this writers project was about 300. It is therefore astonishing to find that one-third of the total number of writers employed by the Government in this project were admitted Communists. We think that the explanation of the thoroughness with which the Communists have penetrated the Federal writers project is that they recognized this project as a splendid vehicle for the dissemination of class hatreds.

The evidence is very conclusive that Communist activities were carried on openly in the Federal writers project.

Much of our evidence with reference to Communist activities in the Works Progress Administration consists of documentary

In this connection I quote the following excerpts from the examination of those on the staff of the project and in a position, according to the committee, to speak authoritatively:

Q. Would you go so far as to say that the tenor of the Guide from New Jersey has been class hatred and incendiary propaganda?—A. Yes. ganda?-

Q. Di Yes. Did that Guide invariably condemn business and industry? A.

Q. And picture them as pro-Fascist?—A. As being the enemy.
Q. As being the enemy of the masses of the people?—A. Yes.
Q. The radical element in the C. I. O. was championed in this Guide?-A Yes.

Q. While the business people and industrial classes were pictured as enemies of the mass of the people.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you found, or do you know as a fact, that Mr. Coy and Mr. Alsberg, at the headquarters of the Federal Writers Project, have shaped their material for propaganda purposes?—A. Yes, sir, Q. Against business and against industry as a class?—A. Yes, sir; and against the Government.

Q. Against the Government itself?--A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that, is it correct to say that those in charge here in Washington have invited propaganda for the purpose of stirring up strife between capital and labor and between the races?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have heard the testimony of the two preceding witnesses, have you not?—A. Yes.
Q. What can you add to that testimony?—A. All I can add is that I can answer "yes" to every question that you have asked on whether or not the stirring up of race hatred and the stirring up of class struggle between labor and capital, between the working classes and the owning classes, is being disseminated in the United States through those guides. I can answer "yes" to that every time. The chief horror of this whole thing to me is that a situation does exist in what is manifestly a relief project, sponsored by the Government of the United States with money taken from its Treasury, which is put into the Treasury by the taxpayers.

One further point in this general connection. I refer to the statement appearing at page 132 of the hearings before your committee. The statement indicates that, in addition to minor investigations conducted locally, the W. P. A. itself has conducted no less than 64 major investigations of alleged improper political activities. These investigations resulted in the dismissal, suspension, or reprimand of 72 of the administrative or supervisory personnel in the Works Progress Administration.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me it is absolutely impossible, in the light of evidence of this character in respect to the administration of relief, for the Congress of the United States to close its eyes and continue the type of administration which we now have. It seems to me that the Congress should conduct a thoroughgoing investigation into the whole situation in order that proper changes in the existing system may be made, with a view to honest and efficient administration in the future in the interest of the needy unemployed.

In my judgment, Mr. Chairman, every cent required for the operation of the Works Progress Administration during the winter months should be made available immediately. In my judgment, a special committee to investigate the entire situation should be appointed immediately. In my judgment, our policy as to the future should be determined in the light of the investigation and report of that committee.

An amendment to the pending bill will be offered at the proper time making it possible for the House to adopt such a policy. Adoption of the amendment means the elimination of any reduction in W. P. A. rolls between now and April 7. It means 3 months to investigate and make recommendations. It means action for the best interests of those in need in the light of 3 months' study. I hope the Members of the House will give the amendment their approval. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 13 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, the question was asked of old time whether any good thing could come out of Nazareth, but the coming of something good out of Nazareth would appear to be simple compared with the modern miracle of political purity, sweetness, and light coming out of once darkest Pennsylvania, the feudal domain of Quay, Penrose, Vare, and Joe Grundy, according to Republican spokesmen here on the floor. From what I have heard from them on the floor it is possible that the Pennsylvania Democrats are being slightly tainted by their environment, and that if they are permitted to continue in power there for 60 years more, as the Republicans were, they may bring that State into at least an approximation of its former condition under Republican rule.

From what I have heard from a good many Democrats returning to Washington, it would appear that if the voters in Pennsylvania and some of these other States got too much W. P. A. money, they were seen by somebody else later, which frequently happens, and I am afraid it is going to influence some of their votes against relief legislation.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I have not the time. I am sorry.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I am sorry; I cannot yield.

Mr. Chairman, a wide range of figures is being discussed for the work relief appropriation for the remainder of the fiscal year ending June 30. They range all the way from $500,000,000 to $1,050,000,000, and there is also a proposal to be submitted by the minority to appropriate only $300,000,-000 for the period ending April 7, by which time it is conjectured by them the work relief appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1940 will have been framed, and at which time they say we can know better than we do now how much money will be needed for the last 3 months of this fiscal year.

For the first time since the inauguration of a work-relief program, and that means giving the able-bodied unemployed work instead of a dole, a drastic overhauling of workrelief methods and mechanics has assumed equal, if not greater, prominence than the amount of money involved in the program, and practically all of the proposed changes in the methods and mechanics of work relief that I have thus far seen are designed to effect a drastic curtailment and the rapid drying up of work relief, and the substitution of some other and cheaper method of caring for the unemployed workers. This has been brewing for 2 years, although many, even of the people directly involved, seemed to be blind to the storm portents. On each work-relief bill in the Seventyfifth Congress the Republican minority submitted a motion to recommit the bill and report it back with an amendment turning unemployment relief over to the States on a dollarmatching basis. That meant the end of work. That meant

On the morning after the last election I knew the storm had broken, and I predicted that the big battle of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress would be over work relief. While I anticipated this, it has broken with a fury beyond my expectations and the air is full of formulas as to how work relief may be curtailed and liquidated and some other form of relief substituted.

In my brief time, I want to submit to the consideration of the Committee some formulas which have occurred to me which may serve to soften the process of transition and liquidation, if fundamental changes are to be made.

It would be cruel and inhuman to make a reduction in the winter months which it is admitted would immediately throw one-half million workers out in the streets. The amount of saving involved is not large enough to justify any such inhuman course. My own course is plain and easy. I am going to support the figure asked for by the President and stated to be necessary by the Works Progress Administrator, $875,000,000. But if a reduction is to be made, which will reduce the two-hundred-and-odd million a month which work relief has been costing during this fiscal year, to $150,-000,000 or less for the remainder of the year, then there has occurred to my mind several methods by which the reduction may be made with a minimum of hardship and suffering, and maybe with the acceptance of large areas of the country.

My first formula would be to maintain the present work-relief load until about April 1. This will be the period when the grass is again turning green and becoming fit for grazing. Under this formula, which may be termed "the grazing method," the country could be zoned off, with the first reduction made in those favored areas where the grass begins to green and the leaves to bud and the flowers to bloom and the birds to sing very early in the spring.

It could begin in the luscious valleys of the East and South; Kentucky, the Bluegrass State, where the grazing is always good; the level green stretches of Illinois and Indiana; the beautiful rolling hills of Ohio and Pennsylvania, all of which area in the early springtime becomes a verdant carpet which must gladden the eye of Heaven. Perhaps as we go farther south we might begin turning them out to grass about St. Patrick's Day. As we go west where the spring season is later, we could provide in the bill a corresponding retardation of the process.

To be perfectly candid with Members, I have in mind my home State out in the Rockies where the grazing is not so good until along in June. It is not springtime in the Rockies until June. It would be a sectional discrimination against those people to put them out to grass at the same time they could go out in the more favored regions of the lowlands. If the grazing formula is decided upon, the country could be conveniently zoned off, and since work-relief appropriations are hereafter to be earmarked and a bill of particulars included in the act, the grazing system of relief could be readily worked into it.

Another formula which appeals to me is to inaugurate the drying-up program by first turning relief back to the States and districts that went Republican last November. The result in those States and districts could indeed be considered as a mandate to Congress to turn their share of the submerged one-third over to them. They must have understood that such was the program of the Republican Party in Congress the last 2 years. In my district it was put up to them in so many words, that relief was the proper burden of the States and counties and should be assumed by them. The voters rejected the proposition.

This formula would require only a simple amendment, excluding the States and districts that went Republican in 1938 from having to accept work-relief appropriations. As a precaution against any possibility of mistake as to the mandate, I would make acceptance of the exclusion optional with the States and districts involved. I feel quite confident that none of them would take the money, but for fear any of them may come forward with a claim that they did not know it was "loaded" when they voted Republican last fall, I would include them in the appropriation and leave them the choice. It would be a noble experiment and the result might shed some light upon the growing controversial issue of work relief.

A third formula would relate to the southern section of the country, where there has been great and growing opposition in Congress to the work-relief program. It may not be known to all the Members that in that favored area Mr. Hopkins, who is charged with very expansive ideas about caring for the unemployed, set wage schedules as high as $19 to $21 a month. This munificence appears to have been wholly gratuitous, and had, besides, the effect of seriously disturbing the wage structure in that section of the country.

According to some views I have heard expressed here on the floor, it appears that nobody down there who could get as much as $19 to $21 a month on W. P. A. wanted a job at the prevailing wage in private employment. That was more money than they had ever seen or would know what to do with. While nature is not so prodigal there as in the Tropics, the favored people of that area can come much nearer to living off of nature than in the less friendly northern and western areas of the country. It is always springtime in the sunny South. I love to drive around that way to Washington and get the cold soaked out of my bones and absorb the inviting landscape, where every prospect pleases and which has produced the only real chivalry on American soil, and I mean that.

I think it would be a noble gesture were the Representatives from that most-favored area, perhaps under the leadership of Virginia, which has assumed the leading role at both ends of the Capitol in the campaign for drastic economy in Federal work relief, to propose an amendment excluding those States en bloc from the demoralizing effects of a program which they consider is not only costing the taxpayers too much money but is sapping the very vitals of the manhood of America. I can assure them in advance of my support of the motion and what little missionary work I may be able to accomplish in that behalf.

While these formulas I have suggested perhaps by no means exhaust the ways out of our dilemma, I would not care to clutter up the Record with a confusion of suggestions. No doubt under the inspiration of the suggestions I have made, the minds of other Members will get busy and devise other practical formulas, the sum total of which, embodied in a bill, may completely solve the burdensome work-relief problem, and without cost to anybody. The Federal Government would be rid of the great cost and the States would have nothing to pay it with. They can go back to Mr. Hoover's formula of selling red apples on the corner and hitting the Red Cross and Community Chest for a hand out.

In order, however, that my position may be perfectly clear, I give warning now that in the absence of the adoption of some or all of these formulas, I propose to vote for the sum of $875,000,000. The President and the Administrator have both stated this sum to be necessary; theirs is the responsibility, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon], a member of the committee, has just stated that there is absolutely nothing in the hearings upon which to base the cut of $150,000,000 made by the Appropriations Committee or any sum less than $875,000,000. [Applause.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Thomas].

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, reference has been made here today to communism in certain of the W. P. A. projects, particularly the Federal writers project and the Federal theater project. Reference has also been made to the report made by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

I should like to call the attention of the members of the Committee not only to the report but to the matter on this subject contained in the volumes of testimony, two of which I have here. In each one of these volumes are about a thousand pages. There will be 4,000 pages in all of testimony recently presented to the Dies Committee. Much in these volumes has to do with un-American activities on Federal Government projects. A large part of the testimony has to do with communism in the Federal theater project and in the Federal writers project.

Regardless of who reads these volumes, and I certainly hope every Member of the House will read them, one cannot get away from the thought that these Federal writers projects and the Federal theater projects in certain of our large cities, notably New York, are honeycombed with communism. Testimony was given the committee by one witness after another that Communist literature was given out on the projects, on project time, and that Communist meetings were held during the time workers were supposed to be engaged in their regular activities. One witness testified that 80 percent of the members on the Federal writers project in New York City were either members of the Communist Party or friendly to the Communist cause.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. Did the gentleman or his committee investigate the Workers' Alliance?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Yes; we did.

Mr. FISH. Is that a Communist organization?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Testimony was presented to the committee not by one witness but by many witnesses that the Workers' Alliance is nothing more than a front organization for the Communist Party.

Mr. FISH. Does the gentleman know that Mr. Aubrey Williams, formerly Deputy Administrator of the Works Progress Administration, said to that group, "We have got to stick together, we have got to keep our friends in power"?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Not only do I know that, but those exact words were presented to the committee as testimony.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I cannot yield further. I have only 10 minutes. If I can get more time, I shall be pleased to yield to the gentleman from California.

One of the worst things about the Federal theater project in New York City is the plays put on by that project, plays of a very radical nature, advocating, among other things, a change in our form of government—plays that have been protested to the National Director of Federal theater project by not only patriotic organizations and veterans' organizations but leading police officials in the particular municipalities where these plays were staged.

Let me read from this testimony a statement by Byrnes MacDonald, sixth deputy police commissioner of the city of New York. This statement is contained in a letter written by him to Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, National Director of the Federal Theater Project, and has to do with a play called Revolt of the Beavers, a fairy tale, put on for the benefit of the youth of the Nation. This is what Byrnes MacDonald, sixth deputy police commissioner of New York City, had to say about that play, and while I shall not now read the entire letter, I shall ask permission to place the whole letter in the RECORD:

I know of no better way to conclude than to quote Mr. Atkinson's criticism of the play.

Mr. Atkinson is one of the leading dramatic critics of the New York Times. Mr. Atkinson said this:

The style is playful; the mood is gravely gay and simple-minded. Many children now unschooled in the technique of revolution now have an opportunity, at Government expense, to improve their tender minds. Mother Goose is no longer a rhymed escapist. She has been studying Marx; Jack and Jill lead the class revolution.

This is the kind of play the Federal theater project, at the taxpayers' expense, is putting on for the benefit of the youth of this Nation.

While mentioning plays, I wish to quote some testimony with respect to another play, a play we have all heard about, called Triple A Plowed Under. The witness in testimony before the Dies committee said:

That was one play which on the opening night required 30 New York policemen to guard the play and prevent a riot.

It contained a scene in which the secretary of the Communist Party condemns the judiciary of the United States Government. Such characters as George Washington and Andrew Jackson were removed from the play in order to give a prominent part to the secretary of the Communist Party, Earl Browder. The conclusion of the play is the establishment of a political party in accordance with the wish expressed by the secretary of the Communist Party, expressed by Mr. Earl Browder himself in a radio broadcast a short time previous to the production.
